The next day he won the Doncaster stakes of 10 gs. each, with 20 gs. added, thirteen subscribers, four miles. The day following he won £100 at two heats, two miles each.

The above are the only times Beningbrough started, except twice, when he was beat the first time of his running at York Spring Meeting, by Prior, and at York August Meeting, 1795, by Mr. Garforth's grey colt by Phenomenon, and Bennington. He was allowed to be among the handsomest horses in England of his day, and was the sire of numerous winners.

C., 3000 gs.; six to four on Hambletonian.

Hambleton was only once beat, which was at York, August Meeting, 1797, when running against Deserter and Spread Eagle, where he ran out of the course, just after starting; otherwise there is not the least doubt but he would have won as easily as on the following day, when he beat Spread Eagle, &c.

He only paid one forfeit, which was to Sterling; to whom he was to have allowed 4lb. and his year over B. C., 1792, at Newmarket First Spring Meeting.

Before we conclude our notice of this famous racer, we will insert the following description of his match with Mr. Cookson's Diamond. On Monday 25th of March, 1799, between one and two o'clock, these celebrated horses started, in the presence of one of the greatest crowds ever witnessed at Newmarket. Hambletonian started with the lead, which he maintained till the last half mile, when Diamond challenged, and went up to him. A struggle ensued, which all accounts agree to have been one of extraordinary severity, and which excited the feelings of the spectators, to an almost painful extent. Each jockey rode his horse with great steadiness and judgment, but have been accused of a too liberal punishment—a very common fault with the jockies of that day. A crowd of horsemen followed the struggling rivals, and it appears that the general opinion of the spectators was that Diamond would prove the winner. So close was the contest, that at even a few strides from the ending post, the horses were head to head, but Hambletonian by a great and final effort, some have said in the very last stride, won by a little more than half a neck. Both horses were much cut and spurred, especially Hambletonian. Diamond was in excellent condition, and was rode by Dennis Fitzpatrick, while Hambletonian was jockied by Buckle, both being esteemed the best jockies of that day. According to the best authorities, the four miles were run in about eight minutes and a half. Large sums changed hands on this event, the north country sporting speculators having backed Hambletonian, (a Yorkshire bred horse,) to a large amount, and the Newmarket people taking the odds freely in favour of Diamond. The betting fluctuated from six to five, and four, in favour of Hambletonian, to even, and was at about the former quotation when the horses started. In addition to the original stake of 3000 gs. the owner of the horses are said to have had a large by-bet.

In this race, the blood of Eclipse triumphed over that of Herod; Hambletonian being in the second degree from Eclipse; Diamond from Herod. Sir Harry Vane Tempest is said to have refused an offer of Mr. Cookson's to run the same match over again, and was so pleased with his victory, that he would never again permit his favourite racer to start.

Diamond. Bred by Francis Dawson, Esq., of Newmarket, and foaled in 1792. He was got by Highflyer, dam by Match'em, grandam Barbara by Snap, great grandam by Cade, out of an own sister to the Witherington mare by Partner, her dam by Bloody Buttocks, Greyhound, Makeless, Brimmer, Place's White Turk, Godsworth, out of the Layton barb mare.

In 1795, Diamond received forfeit from Lark, A. P. 100 gs. h. ft. In 1796, she won the Jockey stakes of 100 gs. each, at Newmarket, B. C. In the July Meeting, he walked over for a stakes of 200 gs. each, h. ft. At York August Meeting Diamond was purchased by Sir H. V. Tempest, who in the spring of 1797, sold him to Mr. Cookson. In 1797, at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Dia-monad won the King’s plate three mile heats. In the same week, he won £50 for all ages. At York, he won the Ladies’ plate of £50, at Newmarket he won 50 gs. B. C.; and the following day he won the King’s plate 12st. R. C. In 1798, Newmarket Craven Meeting, Diamond 8st. beat Moorcock, 8st. 2lb.; B. C. 200 gs. At the Second Spring Meeting, he won the Jockey Club plate of 50 gs.

Diamond was a beautiful brown bay, strong, bony, and compact; he was considered to be the best bottomed horse in the kingdom of his day.

We will conclude this chapter, with the following remarkable events, which occupied the attention of the sporting world about this period, and which will bring us up to the commencement of the present century.
On the 8th of May, 1785, John Pratt, Esq., of Askrigg, in Wensleydale, died at Newmarket. He was a gentleman who had obtained much celebrity on the turf, and whose death gave occasion for the following elegy, in which his most famous race-horses are enumerated.

A character so eccentric, so variable, so valuable, Astonished the age he lived in.
Though small his patrimony, yet assisted by that and his own genius,
He for upwards of thirty years
Supported all the hospitality of an Ancient Baron.
The excellent qualities of his heart
Were eminently evinced by his bounty to the poor,
His sympathetic feelings for distress and his charity for all mankind.
Various and wonderful were the means which enabled him,
With unsullied reputation,
To support his course of life, in which he saw and experienced many Trials
And many vicissitudes of fortune, and though often hard pressed Whipped and spurred by that jockey, Necessity,
He never swerved out of the course of Honour.
Once when his finances were impaired
He received a seasonable supply by the performance of a Miracle.
At different periods he exhibited, which were just emblems of his own life,
A Conundrum, an Ænigma, and a Riddle; and strange to tell,
Even these enriched his pocket.
Without incurring censure he trained up an Infidel
Which turned out to his advantage.
He had no singular partiality for flowers, shrubs, fruit, or birds,
Yet for several years he maintained a Florist,
And his Red Rose more than once obtained the premium.
He had a Honeysuckle and a Pumpkin which brought hundreds into his purse,
And a Phœnix, a Nightingale, a Goldfinch, and a Chaffinch which produced him thousands.
In the last war he was owner of a Privateer, which brought him in several valuable prizes.

Though never famed for gallantry, yet he had in keeping at different periods,

A Virgin, a Maiden, an Orange Girl, and a Ballad Singer,

Besides several Misses*

To all of whom his attachment was notorious;

And, what is still more, a Paradox, though he had no issue by his lawful wife,

Yet the numerous progeny and quick abilities of these very females proved to him a source of supply.

With all his seeming peculiarities and foibles he retained his Purity,

Till a few days before his death,

When the great Camden† spread the fame thereof so extensively as to attract

Even the notice of his Prince, who thought it no diminution of Royalty,

To obtain so valuable an acquisition by purchase;

And though he parted with his Purity at a great price,

Yet his honour and good name remained untarnished to the end of his life.

At his death, indeed, slander, in the semblance of pity,

Talked much of his insolvency and much of the ruin of individuals;

But the proof of his substance

And of a surplus not much inferior to his original patrimony

Soon answered, refuted, and wiped away the calumny.

To sum up the abstract of his character, it may be truly said of him,

That his frailties were few, his virtues many,

That he lived almost universally beloved, that he died almost universally lamented.

1786.—On the 4th of December of this year, Mr. Hull's horse Quibbler, by Minor, dam by Sampson, grandam by Cade, was engaged to run twenty three miles within one hour, round the

* Miss Sims, Miss Lightfoot, &c.
† Afterwards named Rockingham.
flat at Newmarket for a 1000 gs. He performed the distance in 58 minutes and 10 seconds; five to two in his favour at starting. He was rode by a boy, about 4st. 7lb., who did not appear in the least fatigued. Considerable sums of money were betted on the event, it being the greatest performance ever done in England, by one horse, before that time.

In October 1791, at the Curragh Meeting in Ireland, Mr. Wilde, a sporting gentleman, made bets to the amount of 2000 gs. to ride against time, viz: 127 English miles in nine hours. On the 6th of October he started in a valley near the Curragh Course, where two miles were measured in a circular direction. Each time he went round the course, it was regularly marked. During the interval of changing horses, he refreshed himself with a mouthful of brandy and water, and was no more than 6 hours and 21 minutes in completing the 127 miles, having 2 hours and 39 minutes to spare. Mr. Wilde performed this match with ten blood horses from the stud of J. Daly, Esq. Whilst on horseback, allowing the odd minutes for changing horses, he rode at the rate of 20 miles an hour for six hours. He was so little fatigued that he was at the Turf Club house, in Kildare, the same evening. This feat was, however, greatly surpassed by that of Mr. Osbaldiston at Newmarket, which we shall describe in another part of this work.
At Ascot races, June 23, 1793, a very remarkable accident happened to Mr. Anderton's horse in running. After the horse had gained the summit of the hill near the King's Hand, he suddenly faltered, and with the shock threw his rider to a considerable distance, without falling himself. On examining the horse, it was discovered that both his fore legs were broken, and that he had galloped over 18 yards, on the stumps, when he made a dead stop. The accident could only be accounted for, by supposing that the hardness of the ground dislocated the fetlock joint of the off leg, and afterwards in running at full speed, the near leg was broken just above that joint.

A singular case respecting a man whipping and injuring the race horse Doricles, whilst running at Ludlow, occurred in the year 1799, at the Salop assizes. Mr. Hemminge, was plaintiff, and Chipp defendant. The action was brought against the defendant, for maliciously whipping and striking the plaintiff's horse Doricles, while running a race on the Ludlow course, against Mr. Corbett's mare Carnation, whereby the plaintiff lost the chance of winning the £50 plate, for which they were running, and whereby also the plaintiff lost his horse, of the value of 300 gs. The fact was proved beyond all doubt of the defendant striking the horse several times; but as it was doubtful whether the injury the horse received, which was the breaking of the thigh bone, was occasioned by, or in consequence of the defendant's conduct, the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff, with £150 damages only. The defendant was a publican at Ludlow. The learned judge, Mr. Justice Rooke, reprobated the conduct of the defendant very highly, and said, while horse racing was continued, such behaviour should be severely punished, and was by no means an action for mere nominal damages, even though the jury should not be satisfied that the horse received the injury which occasioned his death, by the defendant's means.

Dennis O'Kelly, Esq., or, as he was sometimes called, Captain O'Kelly, a name familiar to sportsmen, died at his house in Piccadilly in 1787.

This successful turf adventurer was born in Ireland, of humble parentage, and at one period of his life no man ever experienced more adversity than fell to his lot. After his release from the Fleet prison, where he had been confined for debt, the tide of fortune turned, and from this period, he continued a career of the greatest prosperity. At the period of which we write, the higher classes were greatly addicted to gaming, and for sums which would now appear incredible; the amounts also for which they matched their horses, and betted, were proportionally large. O'Kelly plunged at once into the very vortex of this infatuation, and both at the play tables, and on the turf, met with a success which made him at once the envy and wonder of his cotemporaries. His natural shrewdness and penetration, his indefatigable industry and constant attention, went far towards gaining him success on the turf, by enabling him to counteract the various and almost incredible deceptions then in constant practice in the sporting world. His good fortune with Eclipse we have noticed, when recording the performances of that celebrated racer; we will, therefore, content ourselves with adding here the anecdotes of O'Kelly which have reached us.

Mr. O'Kelly purchased an estate near Epsom, with training stables, and paddocks, contiguous to the race course, which became his favourite residence, and here it was that Eclipse died. Besides Eclipse, O'Kelly was the owner of some of the best horses of his day: such as Brutus, Badger, (alias Ploughboy,) young Gimcrack, Atom, Tiney, MILksop, &c., and with these he swept off annually, most of the give and take and Royal Plates, at the different country races. Refused admittance into the Jockey club, he was thereby prevented from running for any of the great Newmarket stakes, which was a severe mortification to him, and of which he complained in no measured terms. The following is a ludicrous instance of this:

"The better to expedite his own superiority, and to carry his well planned schemes into successful execution, and in order to render himself less dependent on the incredible herd of necessitous sharks that surrounded every newly initiated adventurer, he determined to retain, exclusive of sudden and occasional changes, when circumstances required it, one rider, at a certain annual stipend, to ride for him whenever ordered so to do, for any plate, match or sweepstakes, but with the privilege of riding, for any other person, provided he (O'Kelly) had no horse entered to run for the same prize. Having adjusted such arrangement in his own mind, and fixed upon the intended object of his trust, he communicated his design, and entered upon negotiations; when the monied terms being proposed, he not only instantly acquiesced, but voluntarily offered to double them, provided the party would enter into an engagement, and bind himself, under a penalty, never to ride for any of the black legged fraternity. The consenting jockey saying, 'he was at a loss to know who the captain meant by the black legged fraternity;' he instantly replied with his usual energy, 'O by Jasus, my dear, and I'll soon make you understand who I mean by the black legged fraternity! there's the Duke of Grafton, the Duke of Dorset, &c.;' naming the principal members of the Jockey club, 'and all the set of thaves that belong to the humbug societies, and bug a boo clubs, where they can meet and rob one another without fear of detection.'

"He was in the habit of carrying a great number of bank notes in his waistcoat pockets, crumpled up together with the greatest indifference. On one occasion, being at a hazard table at Windsor during the races, a person's hand was observed by those on the opposite side of the table, just in the act of drawing some notes out of O'Kelly's pocket. On the alarm being given, the delinquent was seized, and the company were anxious that the offender should be immediately taken before a magistrate; but O'Kelly very coolly seizing him by the collar, kicked the fellow down stairs, exclaiming, ' 'Twas sufficient punishment to be deprived the pleasure of keeping company with jontlemen.'

All the best six years old horses of the year having entered against Eclipse, for the King's Plate at Newmarket, O'Kelly offered to take ten to one, he posted them, which being betted to an immense amount, and the captain called upon to declare, he pronounced, "Eclipse! and nothing else,"—implying the rest to be "no where;" which was really the case, for the rider of Eclipse, having received private instructions to go off at score, double distanced the whole with the greatest ease, leaving himself without a competitor. And we believe that this was the last time any horse was seen to start against him, as he afterwards walked over the different courses for the King's plates of the year, without a single opponent, and the year following entered the stud.
CHAPTER II.

Racing in Great Britain, from 1800 to 1805—Preliminary remarks—Amusing wager—Match for speed between a race horse and a grey-hound—Famous match between Sir Solomon and Cockfighter—140 miles done in seven hours and thirty-four minutes on common hacks—Anecdote of Sir Charles Bunbury’s training groom—Death of the Earl of Grosvenor—Anecdote of old Elwes, the miser—A Knowing one out-witted—Mrs. Thornton’s celebrated matches against Mr. Flint and Buckle the jockey—Anecdote of Colonel Thornton.

1800.—Already at this early period had the system introduced by Sir Charles Bunbury, of running horses at two years old, deteriorated the speed and stoutness of our breed of race horses, as compared with the celebrated horses of the preceding century, whose pedigrees and performances we have given. A writer of that day makes the following judicious remarks on this subject: "The effect of the Royal purses and plates has corresponded with their meritorious object—the increase of blood horses in these countries, which are now superior, in this respect, to any other in the world. But this, like some other things, is capable of improvement, and the present moment, when the subject has come under the eye of authority, is the best to bring it into fair discussion. The great principle of the sovereign, in encouraging the turf, is the establishment of a breed of horses whose speed shall be as a medium of their service. But the racing calendar shows that speed constitutes the sole desideratum of the turf, and that nineteen out of twenty of the horses now propagated for this purpose, are only capable of carrying a feather."

As a matter of course, as the best stakes became gradually for two years old, short distances and light weights became absolutely necessary, and they were adopted accordingly. They have continued, from that period up to the present day, diminishing from time to time, in proportion as this deteriorating system produced its effect on the qualities of our racers.

Our present breeds of hunters, hacks, and even coach horses, have derived all the benefit they were capable of by the cross with the blood, and have entirely escaped this defect, from the difference in their early treatment; with increased speed, they have gained a great addition of strength.

All that is now expected of the few good two years old, who pass sufficiently uninjured through the ordeal of training, is to win two or three of the great two or three years old stakes; after which the owners are contented with their services in the stud. Few indeed are capable of doing more, or possess that true conformation, which, as Osmer has expressed it, "enables the race horse to perform extraordinary feats of activity, coupled with great endurance of the highest bodily exertion."

Having given at some length the pedigrees and performances of the most celebrated race horses of the last century, and from which our present breed has descended, we will now proceed to lay before our readers the principal racing events which have occurred from the commencement of the 19th century, up to the present day.

The general desire which has long existed, among those connected with or interested in the British Turf, that the history of its earliest, should be combined with that of its modern events, has caused us to dwell at greater length on the former part; and the more from the fact, that, while the knowledge of its more recent transactions is within easy and general reach, that of its ancient is gradually fading into obscurity.

Giving the principal races of each year in a condensed form, we shall, at the conclusion of each, lay before our readers such facts, anecdotes, and general remarks, as we may consider of interest, or that the object may call for.

In 1800, races were held at 66 places in England and Wales, five in Scotland, and four in Ireland. The principal stakes were decided as follows: viz.—

In the beginning of June in this year, a naval officer undertook, for a wager, to ride a blind horse round Sheerness race-course, without guiding the reins with his hands; this he performed, to the no small amusement of the spectators, by cutting the reins asunder, and fastening the several parts to his feet in his stirrups.

In this year also we find the first mention of the present famous Chifney, then a boy of fifteen years of age, riding Mr. Fletcher's Alegranti, at Egham races. He won a plate of £50, beating Sir Charles Bunbury's Gig, rode by Young Goodison.

A curious match was ran in December at Doncaster, which brought into competition the speed of the race horse and the greyhound. A mare was started, and after she had gone a distance of about a mile, a greyhound bitch was let loose from the side of the course, and ran with her nearly head to head to the distance post, where five to four was laid on the greyhound; at the stand it was even betting, but the mare eventually won by little more than a head.

The match between Sir H. Vane's Cockfighter and Mr. Johnson's Sir Solomon, for 500 gs. at

VOL. II.
Doncaster, on the 19th of September in this year, excited almost as much interest as that between Hambletonian and Diamond in 1799, which we have described in a previous chapter. Vast sums changed hands, (it has been said as much as £50,000,) on this event. The betting, at starting, was six to four, and eleven to eight on Cockfighter. Sir Solomon took the lead, was never headed, and won by about a length and a half. The first two miles are said to have been run in three minutes, and the four miles in seven minutes and ten seconds; they ran twice round the Doncaster course, being a distance of three miles six furlongs, and thirty-two yards.

Cockfighter was got by Overton, dam by Weasel, grandam by Alfred, and so back to the Godolphin barb. Overton was got by King Fergus, his dam by Herod, grandam by Snap, (son of Childers), out of the own sister to Regulus, by the Godolphin Arabian.

Sir Solomon was got by Sir Peter Teazle, his dam by Florizel. Although unsuccessful at first, he afterwards trained on to be a capital racer.

On the second of April, Captain Newland of the Sussex militia won a considerable sum, by performing 140 miles in seven hours and thirty-four minutes, although allowed twelve hours by the terms of the wager. Longdown Hill near Chichester was the scene of action, and what is more remarkable, is, that he rode principally hack horses from the Swan Inn of that town.

The following is the time in which he rode.

Thus, the first 100 miles were performed in five hours and five minutes, notwithstanding he met with a fall, was once obliged to change his horse as he became too restive, and was run away with a considerable distance out of the course.

Having good authority for the genuineness of the following anecdote, we do not hesitate to give it place here, as highly characteristic of the "ruling passion strong in death." Sir Charles Bunbury's training groom being at the point of death immediately before Epsom races, where his favourite mare Eleanor was to run, both for the Derby and Oaks', his relations sent for a clergyman, in order that he might receive the consolations of religion. Upon that gentleman's arrival he soon perceived that the man could not long survive, and asked him, in the kindest manner, whether he could be of service, it being apparent that the poor fellow had something on his mind of which he wished to disburden it. Upon the repeated exhortations of the clergyman to confess it, and relieve his conscience, the dying groom, mustering his remaining strength to the task, exclaimed with all the energy his state could permit, and no doubt to the great astonishment and scandal of the clergyman, "Depend upon it, that Eleanor's a h—ll of a mare!"—And his opinion of her proved correct, for she won both those stakes;—the only instance of the kind on record.

On the 5th of August, in this year, the turf was deprived, by death, of one of its oldest and best supporters, the Earl of Grosvenor. This nobleman bred his own racing-stock, and at the period of his death, had named no less than six colts, all by his favourite stallion, John Bull, in the Derby stakes for the ensuing year, besides having numerous nominations in most of the great stakes at Newmarket, York, Ascot, &c.

It was in a match between this nobleman's colt, by Gimcrack, and the Earl of Abingdon's Cardinal York, that Mr. Elwes, the celebrated miser, is said to have lent the Earl of Grosvenor 3,000 gs. to make up his stakes. Although the betting was three to one in his favour, he would have been compelled to have allowed his opponent's horse to have "walked over," but for the unsolicited liberality of the eccentric miser, who, on his return from seeing his lordship win the race, scrambled over the Devil's Dyke, at Newmarket, at the risk of breaking his neck, to avoid paying a turnpike.

This nobleman was born in 1731, and created Baron Grosvenor, in 1761, and Viscount and Earl Grosvenor, in 1784. The late Earl commenced his sporting career upon the turf, in 1753, and soon became the owner of one of the most numerous and valuable studs in the kingdom. The following celebrated horses were stallions in his Lordship's stud, viz.:

Bandy, Trajan, Tripod, Belford, Panglos, Boreas, Dux, Chemist, Protector, Gimcrack, Sweet-William, Sweetbriar, Cardinal Puff, Mambrino, Justice, Pot-8o’s, Fortitude, Balance, Alexander, Meteora, John Bull, Racer, Cesario, &c.; besides a barb, and an Arabian.

Among Lord Grosvenor’s most successful race-horses, may be enumerated, Cardinal Puff, Mambrino, Grey Robin, Haphazard, Sancho, Meteor, Skylark, John Bull, Volanté, Schedoni, Cesario, Meteora, &c.

The following humorous occurrence took place at Epsom, in which the biter was most deservedly bit. A young foreigner, a great favourite with Lord Derby's hunt, was induced, after a hunting dinner, to back a second time one of his horses, which in a former match had been beaten easily by a famous mare belonging to a noted stable keeper at Croydon. The conditions were, two miles, 12 stone each, to start precisely at one o'clock, p.m. and then to fix the riders; before they parted, the stable keeper having fixed upon the servant of a gentleman present to ride for him, the foreigner mentioned his own groom as his jockey. Two days only before the match was to be run the unsuspecting gentleman heard by accident that his opponent had secretly engaged a regular jockey; he had already given up the matter as lost, when he chanced to mention his dilemma to a Yorkshire friend, well skilled in racing tactics. Acting on this person's advice, he instantly set out for Newmarket, and engaged Buckle, the most celebrated jockey of the day, and returned with him to Epsom.

On their arrival at the place of starting, they found the stable keeper and his friends betting ten to one that their mare would again prove successful. Having taken bets at these odds to a considerable amount, and when his opponent's jockey was mounted, and they were calculating on an easy victory over an inexperienced groom, Buckle, ready equipped and weighed, jumped from a post chaise, mounted his horse in an instant, and by superior riding only, brought him in a winner, to the great mortification of the would be "knowing ones."

On Saturday, the 25th of August in this year, one of the most extraordinary contests recorded in the annals of the turf, and in which the Lady of Colonel Thornton figured as the heroine, was decided on Knavesmire race-course.

This remarkable match was announced in the following manner:

"A match for 500 gs., and 1000 gs. bye, four miles, between Colonel Thornton's Vingarillo, and Mr. Flint's br. h. Thornville, by Volunteer. Mrs. Thornton to ride her own weight against Mr. Flint's."

The following is the account given of this occurrence in the York Herald of that day:—"Never did we witness such an assemblage of people as were drawn together on the above occasion—one hundred thousand at least. Nearly ten times the number appeared on Knavesmire than did on the day when Bay Malton ran, or when Eclipse went over the course, leaving the best horses of the day a mile and a half behind. Indeed expectation was raised to the highest pitch from the novelty of the match. Thousands from every part of the country thronged to the ground. In order to keep the course as clear as possible, several additional people were employed, and much to the credit of the 6th Light Dragoons, a party of them were also on the ground on horseback for the like purpose, which unquestionably were the means of many lives being saved.

"About four o'clock, Mrs. Thornton appeared on the ground, full of spirits, her horse led by Colonel Thornton, and followed by Mr. Baker, and Mr. H. Boynton; afterwards appeared Mr. Flint. They started a little past four o'clock. The lady took the lead for upwards of three miles, in a most capital style. Her horse, however, had much the shorter stroke of the two. When within a mile of being home, Mr. Flint pushed forward and got the lead, which he kept. Mrs. Thornton used every exertion, but finding it impossible to win the race, she drew up in a sportsmanlike style, when within about two distances.

"At the commencement of the running, bets were five and six to four on the lady: in running the three first miles, seven to four and two to one in her favour. Indeed, the oldest sportsman on the stand thought she must have won. In running the last mile, the odds were in favour of Mr. Flint.

"Never, surely, did a woman ride in better style. It was difficult to say whether her horsemanship, her dress, or her beauty, was most admired—the tout ensemble was unique.

"Mrs. Thornton's dress was a leopard coloured body with blue sleeves, the vest was buff, and blue
Mr. Flint rode in white. The race was run in nine minutes and fifty-nine seconds.

"Thus ended the most interesting race ever ran upon Knavesmire. No words can express the disappointment felt at the defeat of Mrs. Thornton. The spirit she displayed and the good humour with which she bore her loss greatly diminished the joy of many of the winners. From the very superior style in which she performed her exercising gallop of four miles on Wednesday, betting was greatly in her favour; for the accident which happened, in consequence of her saddle girths having slackened and the saddle turning round, was not attended with the slightest accident to her person, nor did it in the least damp her courage, while her horsemanship, and her close-seated riding, astonished the beholders, and inspired a general confidence in her success.

"Not less than two hundred thousand pounds were pending upon Mrs. Thornton’s match; perhaps more if we include the bets in every part of the country, and there was no part we believe in which there were not some.

"It is but justice to observe, if the lady had been better mounted she could not possibly have failed of success. Indeed, she laboured under every possible disadvantage; notwithstanding which, and the ungallant conduct of Mr. Flint, she flew along the course with an astonishing swiftness, conscious of her own superior skill, and would ultimately have outstripped her adversary, but for the accident which took place.''

In this year, we again find the celebrated Mrs. Thornton making a conspicuous appearance on the turf, and with better success than in the preceding. At York races, on the 24th of August, Mrs. Thornton, on Clausum Frigit, by Otho, cantered over the course for four hogsheads of Côte Rôti, 2,000 gs., h. ft., and for 600 gs., p. p., bet on her account; Mr. Bromford, against whom she was to ride, having paid forfeit.

On the same day she crowned her laurels by beating the famous jockey, Buckle. This was in a match between Colonel Thornton's Louisa, by Pegasus, out of Nelly, rode by Mrs. Thornton, carrying 9st. 6lb., and Mr. Bromford's Allegro, sister to Allegranti, rode by Buckle, 13st. 6lb., two miles, 500 gs.

Mrs. Thornton was dressed in a purple cap and waistcoat, nankeen-coloured skirts, which being short, showed her embroidered stockings and purple shoes. At starting, she took the lead, which she kept till approaching the distance; here Buckle put forth all his jockeyship, and succeeded in getting the lead for a few lengths, but collecting her horse with great power and skill, the lady pushed forward, and after a severe struggle, succeeded in landing her a winner by "half a neck," amidst the shouts of applause of the vast crowds which had assembled to witness her triumph.
THE YORK MATCH.

WRITTEN BY MRS. THORNTON AFTER THIS EVENT.

To the post we advanc'd, at the signal to start,
    Brisk I flourish'd my whip over Louisa's ears;
When springing amain, by a resolute dart,
    I gain'd a whole length of the jockey of peers;
That advantage to keep, as I rode fleet along,
    Behind me full many a glance did I throw—
I soon found I'd the foot, but Allegro was strong,
    And the jockey of peers carried weight, as you know.

I tried then to cut the third post pretty close,
    At the same time, the length I had gain'd to preserve,
Gave whip to my mare, but she kick'd at the dose,
    And—a vile little devil—attempted to swerve;
I chang'd, and a left-handed cut brought her to,
    But Buckle 'tween me and the post made a push,
And lay neck and neck with me, all I could do,
    Not seeming to value my efforts a rush.

I led him, however, at length to a slough,
    Where he sunk to the fetlock at every stroke,
My Buck had the bone—he press'd hard at me now,
    And seem'd to enjoy much the best of the joke;
But I cross'd at the next post, and stretching my hand—
    As I hoped to be sav'd, without malice or heat—
I put all his trials of skill to the stand,
    For the jockey Buck I nearly threw from his seat.

He recover'd his saddle, by seizing the mane,
    My mare darted forward, as swift as the wind,
Nor heard I of the horse or of Buckle again,
    Till I turn'd, and beheld them come panting behind;
My pleasure alone, that sensation defines,
    Which the Laplander courts from the breeze of the south;
When I saw my Buck distanc'd, and dash'd up the lines
    With my mare hard in hand, and my whip in my mouth.
On the same afternoon a fracas took place at the stand between Mr. Flint, who rode against Mrs. Thornton in 1804 and Colonel Thornton, respecting the stakes won on that occasion, and which Mr. Flint had not received, and it ended in that gentleman's horsewhipping the Colonel. This led to a trial, which did not take place until the 6th of September in 1808, when the jury gave a verdict for Colonel Thornton with 500 gs.

Many are the stories told of this eccentric sportsman who, from what we can learn must have inclined too much to the Squire Western school to have suited the taste of the present day. Once, on his return from hunting, the Colonel observed that the blacksmith had applied a hot shoe to one of his hunter's feet: "Tell that rascal of a blacksmith," exclaimed the enraged master to one of his grooms, "if ever he dares to apply a hot shoe to horse's foot of mine again, I will clap one to ———" (Our readers must guess the rest.) Not long after this, the Colonel caught the poor blacksmith in the very act, and with the assistance of two of his grooms, he actually did apply the active cauterity à posteriori to the unhappy Vulcan.

In this year, the number of winning horses, got by Sir Peter Teazle, were thirty-eight, and of the prizes they gained one hundred and nineteen; of those got by Buzzard, twenty-five winners, of eighty-one by prizes; Whiskey twelve, of thirty-seven; by Benningbrough nine, of twenty-eight; by John Bull seven, of twenty-five; by Gohanna nine, of twenty-four; by Delphini seven, of twenty-two; by Coriander five, of twenty; by Moorcock eight, of eighteen; by Hambletonian eight, of fifteen; by Precipitate five, of fourteen; by Pipator five, of thirteen; by Pegasus five, of twelve; by Magic one; by Mountaineer five, of twelve; by Waxy seven, of thirteen; and by Pot-8o's two, of nine.

On the 29th of November, in this year, the Earl of Clermont died at Brighton, aged 84. This nobleman commenced his career on the turf in 1751, and was generally called, "the father of the turf." He was for many years confederate with Lord Farnham, and kept a large stud in the palmy days of the turf. The best stallions in his stud, were Creeper, Conductor, Ilmio, Imperator, Trumpator, and Mark Anthony. On one occasion, shortly before his death, the Earl accompanied the Prince of Wales to Bagshot, and it being winter, and his Lordship being at the time much indisposed, had wrapt his head in a sort of flannel hood. Thus equipped, the Prince and his companion pursued their journey, the passengers remarking what an excellent young man he was, "to go out thus an airing with his old aunt, the Princess Amelia!" His Royal Highness used often to quote this ludicrous circumstance, as an instance how men sometimes got credit for good actions, without ever having dreamt of deserving them.

In the month of October of this year, not only the turf, but the nation at large, sustained a great loss, by the death of the Right Hon. Charles James Fox, then nominally Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, but virtually Prime Minister. Mr. Fox was always extremely partial to the pursuits of the turf, on which he commenced his career as joint confederate with the Hon. Mr. Foley (afterwards Lord Foley) in 1772, and from that period up to 1793 they were the owners of a numerous and first-rate stud. Among the names of the most celebrated horses in the stud of this confederacy, we find those of the following winners, viz:—Trentham, Pyrrhus, Pumpkin, Pantaloons, Firetail, Revenge, Spitfire, Zamora, Rosemary, Musselman, Ulysses, Rodney, Oliver, Swallow, Blandish, Sisyphus, Balloon, Grey Diomed, Cormorant, Maid of all Work, Seagull, Rattler, Shovel, &c. &c., all of which were of great profit to their owners. By Phyrrhus alone they gained 10,400 gs.; and received 1,625 gs. in forfeits. On the turf, the engagements of these two gentlemen were always most honourably kept; and nothing could exceed the good humour with which Mr. Fox alluded to his own losses, observing with much jocularity, "His horses had as much bottom as other people's, but they were such slow ones they never went fast enough to tire themselves." He was, however, occasionally very lucky, and as it was the fashion in those days to bet, as well as to play, for very large sums, he sometimes netted a considerable amount. On the celebrated match in April 1772, at Newmarket, in which Pincher lost by half a neck only, by taking the odds, two to one on Pincher, he is said to have won nearly sixteen thousand guineas. On the death of Lord Foley in July 1793, in whose judgment in racing matters Mr. Fox placed the greatest confidence, Mr. Fox relaxed his ardent pursuits on the turf, from which he soon afterwards entirely retired. On coming into office with Lord North in 1783, Mr. Fox sold off his race-horses, and retired from the different racing clubs; but in the October of the same year we find him again running horses and attending the meetings at Newmarket, and on more than one occasion has the king's messenger been obliged to seek the sporting minister of the crown among the horsemen on the heath, in order to deliver to him government dispatches. It was his well-known attachment to field sports which, previous to the meeting of Parliament, after Mr. Fox’s dismissal from office, at the end of 1783, gave rise to the following jeu d’esprit:

"INTELLIGENCE EXTRAORDINARY."

"On Monday, for the entertainment of British sportsmen, a noble hunting match will take place upon St. Stephen’s common, in consequence of a remarkable fine Fox having been recently turned out of the King’s Park. The attention of the public has been uncommonly attracted upon this occasion; and the odds are six to four that reynard will not be run down. Though the hunters are well mounted, many experienced jockies are of opinion, that they will not be able to keep their seats, and others think that the puppies of the pack are not sufficiently staunch or entirely at command. It is whispered also, that what the enemies of reynard cannot accomplish by a fair chase, they mean to effect by way of fraud, a very capacious Pit being in his way; though it is generally imagined that, instead of falling into it, the animal, from his known sagacity, will either run round, or leap over it; and that upon the whole, instead of a Fox-hunt, it is not improbable the day’s sport will end in a wild goose chase!"

When he had a horse in a race, Mr. Fox was all eagerness and anxiety. He always placed himself where the animal was to make his final effort, or the race was to be most strongly contested. From this spot, he eyed the horses advancing with a most immovable look; he breathed quicker as they accelerated their pace; and when they came opposite to him, he rode in with them at full speed, whipping, spurring and blowing, as if he would have infused his whole soul into the courage, speed and perseverance of his favourite racer. But when the race was over, whether he won or lost, seemed to be a matter of perfect indifference to him, and he immediately directed his conversation to the next race, whether he had a horse to run or not.*

In the beginning of this year, the celebrated jockey, Samuel Chifney, died in great distress, at his lodgings in Fleet Lane, in the rules of the Fleet prison. Chifney came from Norfolk early in life, and served but a short apprenticeship to the turf before his judgment and fine riding raised him to the first rank among the riders of his day. We find him, accordingly, at various times, acting as the principal jockey of the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Bedford, the Earl of Grosvenor, and several other noblemen and gentlemen. He was cotemporary with Oakley, Hinchley, John Arnul, Clift, Sam Arnul, etc., and the latter end of his career, with Buckle, all famous jockeys of their day. In height, Chifney was about five feet, five inches, with perfect symmetry, and light, though extremely muscular. He had a peculiar and easy seat in riding a race. In his "setting to," as it is technically called, he sat very backward on his horse, as represented by Stubbs, in his portrait of him on the Prince of Wales's Baronet, riding with a very slack rein; and he had a singular method of bringing his horse, when at full speed, to change his leg, which he accomplished in a quick and masterly manner. He was the inventor of the bit which bears his name, and which he maintained would prevent any horse from running away. He was the author of a book called "Genius Genuine," which we have noticed in another part of this work, in explanation of his conduct in the two races of the Prince of Wales's Escape. That part which relates to his peculiar style of riding, we shall notice when we come to "the science of riding races." It may be observed, with justice, that his mantle descended to his son and namesake, the present Chifney, of Newmarket.

In the sporting obituary of this year, we find the name of Mr. George Stubbs, the celebrated painter of horses. This eminent artist was the son of a respectable currier and leather-cutter of Liverpool, and was intended to succeed to his father’s business. From his childhood he evinced a taste for that profession in which he, in after life, gained so eminent a rank, and when a boy he would frequently steal from his father’s warehouse to the stable, to delineate a favourite horse. His earliest effort was the model of a horse, which he presented to the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, in his native town, and for which he was awarded the gold medal, with a complimentary letter. The fame of the young artist becoming known, the Earl of Grosvenor, and other noblemen and gentlemen, subscribed sufficient to enable him to complete his studies in Italy, where he obtained several prize medals, and his works were always admired. The origin of his three celebrated pictures in enamel, is thus related by one of his biographers.

"Having remained in Italy the time necessary for his improvement, Mr. Stubbs embarked for England; and during his passage, he became acquainted with a gentleman, a native of Africa, whose taste and pursuits in life were similar to his own. This gentleman had been to Rome, and was returning to his family; he was liberally educated, and spoke the English language with accuracy. His information made him a delightful companion to Stubbs, who often expressed how much it would add to his gratification if he could but behold the lion in its wild state, or any other wild beast. His friend, on one occasion, gave him an invitation to the paternal mansion he was about to visit. The offer was accepted with pleasure, and Stubbs landed with his friend at the fortress of Centa.* They had not been on shore many days, when a circumstance occurred most favourable to the wishes of our painter. The town where his friend resided was surrounded by a lofty wall and a moat. Nearly level with the wall a capacious platform extended, on which the inhabitants occasionally refreshed themselves with the breeze after sunset. One evening, while Stubbs and his friend were viewing the delightful scenery, and a thousand beautiful objects, from this elevation, which the brilliancy of the moon rendered more interesting, a lion was observed at some distance, directing his way, with a slow pace, towards a white Barbary horse, which was grazing not more than two hundred yards distant from the moat. Mr. Stubbs was reminded of the gratification he had so often wished for. The orb of night was perfectly clear, and the horizon serene. The lion did not make towards the horse by a regular approach, but performed many curvatures, still drawing nearer towards the devoted animal, till the lion, by the shelter of a rocky situation, came suddenly upon his prey. The affrighted barb beheld his enemy, and, as if conscious of his fate, threw himself into an attitude highly interesting to the painter. The noble creature then appeared fascinated, and the lion, finding him within his power, sprang in a moment, like a cat, on the back of the defenceless horse, threw him down, and instantly tore out his bowels."

On his return to England, Mr. Stubbs became exceedingly attentive to his profession, and met with great patronage, and to him we are indebted for the portraits of many of the most celebrated race-horses of his day. His anatomy of the horse was held in the highest estimation, both in this country and abroad, and his sporting pictures continue to this day to retain their places in the galleries of our nobility and gentry.

In the course of this year, the turf lost several of its oldest and best supporters. Mr. Wentworth died at Towlstone Lodge, Yorkshire, August 30th, aged 88. He commenced on the turf in 1754, and continued this pursuit up to the period of his death. The following is a list of some of his best horses; 1747, Little David by Foxcub; 1748, Comet or Trimmer by Cade; 1754, Ladylegs by Whitin; 1755, Maria by Second; 1756, Star by Regulus; 1757, Patriot by Regulus; 1760, Fortune by Lot; 1760, Volunteer; 1762, Chatsworth*

* In 1769, at York, this horse won the Great Subscription purse, beating Gimcrack, Bay Malton, &c., running in the name of Sir Lawrence Dundas, then Mr. Wentworth's confederate. Much money changed hands on this race, and Mr. Wentworth had, afterwards, an excellent painting made of it, containing likenesses of the six horses running in it, with portraits of their riders, Charles Dawson, Leonard by Blank; 1764, Kipling by Young Snip; 1765, Carabineer by Young Cade; 1768, Ancaster by Blank; 1775, True Blue by Herod; 1776, Fearnought by Engineer; 1778, Thornville* by Herod; 1781, Rockingham by Highflyer; 1783, Poor Soldier, by Eclipse; 1789, Ormond by Match'em; 1792, Prince Charles by Highflyer; 1797, Chance by Lurcher; 1799, Primrose by Benningbrough; 1803, Centurion by Benningbrough; 1804, Margaret by Benningbrough; 1806, Amethyst by Chance; and many others, too numerous to mention.

Mr. Wentworth's first trainer and rider was Mr. Moody, who had the training ground at Hatfield, near Doncaster; and who, upon his retirement, was succeeded by John Hutchinson, as trainer, and Mr. Leonard Jewison, as jockey. When Mr. Wentworth went to reside at Towlstone, in 1760, he removed his horses there also. Mr. L. Jewison's† first ride was at Nottingham, July 10th. 1760, when he rode Darrington-Cade; and his last time was on Ormond, at Doncaster, Sept. 18th, 1794; making thirty-four years of service as a jockey.

Jewison, Wm. Golding, Michael Mason, John Singleton, and Robert Collins, all crack jockies of that day. This picture is, if we mistake not, still in the possession of the present Earl of Fitzwilliam.

* This horse ran four miles, at York, in seven minutes and a half for the Subscription purse.

† Leonard Jewison was born at Beverley, in 1737, and was brought up in Mr. Wentworth's service, under Wm. Moody.
Mr. Wentworth was the owner of many valuable paintings on sporting subjects, among which may be enumerated,—Portraits of Frampton, (see frontispiece of our first volume), Chatsworth, Pumpkin, Carabineer, Mark, Melpomene, Lothario, Ancaster, Burford, Pigeon, Chance, Baronet, Dungannon, Anvil, and other celebrated race-horses; two views of a country race-course; view of racing at Newmarket; the Earl of March's carriage match; Newmarket courses, etc.

The following anecdote of this genuine sportsman's courage and humanity deserves a place here. When Mr. Wentworth resided at Barmbrough Grange, near Doncaster, in 1759, he on one occasion, placed Miss Howe, a near relative of Earl Howe, and an excellent horsewoman, on Polyphemus, his first racer, then taken out of training to make a hunter. Following Sir Rowland Winn's hounds, they had occasion to cross the river Don, about five miles west of Doncaster, and for that purpose took the ferry-boat. When about the middle of the river, Miss Howe's horse leaped out of the boat, and dragged the young lady after him; on which, Mr. Wentworth offered to pay any reward to whoever would swim and save the lady; but no person offering, though several were present, Mr. Wentworth immediately jumped into the river, at the risk of his own life, which, with that of Miss Howe, was in great danger. On seeing this, Old Peter, the huntsman, instantly ran to the boat, and extended the whip to Mr. Wentworth, who had got hold of Miss Howe, and he fortunately caught the lash of it, and they were then, with some difficulty, brought safe into the boat.

In this year, died, at Newmarket, Thomas Panton, Esq., aged 87, one of the oldest members of the Jockey Club, and a constant patron of the turf. Also Hugo Meynell, Esq., at Brighton, at the age of 81, the father of Leicestershire fox-hunting, whose fame belongs more properly to the annals of the chase. To the above, may be added John Hilton, many years judge at Newmarket, Epsom, Bibury, and other race-courses, and generally esteemed for his strict integrity and obliging manners.

In the First Spring Meeting at Newmarket, in this year, several race-horses in Mr. Stevens's stable were poisoned, by arsenic being put into the trough at which they were watered. A reward of a hundred guineas was immediately offered for the discovery of the offenders, who, however, succeeded for that time in eluding the pursuit of justice; but in 1811, emboldened by their success, they again perpetrated a similar offence, and were apprehended and punished, as we shall notice in our next chapter.

First, in consequence, on the list of this year’s turf obituary, stands the name of the Duke of Queensbury, who was for upwards of half a century the great leader of the sporting world. This nobleman died on Sunday, December 23rd, in the 86th year of his age. James Douglas, Earl of March, Baron Douglas (in the English peerage), Duke of Queensbury, Knight of the Order of the Thistle, &c. &c.; was born in 1725, and succeeded to Charles, his father, in 1778. He began at an early age to excite the attention of the sporting and fashionable world, both in London and Newmarket. His first feat at Newmarket was his match with the Duke of Hamilton, in 1756, in which these noblemen rode their own horses, and the Duke, then Earl of March, proved the winner. His figure, at that period, is described as being thin, agile, and admirably adapted for riding a race, and he is said to have shewn considerable judgment and skill in jockeying his horse on this occasion. His next feat was the famous carriage match against Count O'Taafe, of which we have given a description and plate in the first volume of this work.*

His Grace was one of the most successful frequenters of the turf, being extremely cautious, and the "knowing ones" soon found out that he was not to be "done." He was also esteemed a first-rate judge on racing matters and horses. In the early part of life, he proposed marriage to Miss Pelham, the daughter of Mr.

* Vide Vol. I.
Pelham, then Secretary of State, and the niece of the Duke of Newcastle, then prime minister; but his suit was rejected; whether on account of his not being at that period in possession of the immense fortune he afterwards succeeded to, or the gaiety of his private life, does not appear. This created what is called a sensation, in the fashionable world of that day; and it is not unworthy of remark, that both the lady and her rejected suitor continued single to their deaths, Miss Pelham's preceding that of her lover's by only a few years. His Grace was very charitable in private, and occasionally contributed most nobly to national purposes.

Richard Goodisson, of Newmarket, trained and rode for the Duke for many years. His Grace's name first appeared in the Racing Calendar in 1743, and for the last time in 1806. No nobleman had ever better cause to complain at the continued scurrility of the diurnal writers of his day than he had; but he appears to have treated all the coarse invective levelled against him with the greatest good nature and forbearance. We have given the two following extracts as specimens of the coarse-ness of that period of party rancour; while at the same time it must be confessed that they bear hard upon some of his eccentricities, to which we shall not more particularly allude.
ELEGY*

OLD Q.

"Longa Tythonum minuit Senectus."—Hor.

And what is all this grand to do
That runs each street and alley thro'?
'Tis the departure of Old Q,
The Star of Piccadilly.

The K—g, God bless him! gave a whew!
"Two Dukes just dead—a third gone too!
What! what! could nothing save Old Q,
The Star of Piccadilly."

"Thank Heaven! thank Heaven!" exclaims Miss Prue;
"My mother and grand-mother too,
May now walk safe from that vile Q,
The star of Piccadilly."

The jockey boys, Newmarket's crew,
Who know a little thing or two,
Cry out—"He's done! We've done Old Q!
The Star of Piccadilly."

On Richmond's sunny bank there grew,
'Midst violets sweet, a wanton yew,
Crabbed and old; and that mourns Q,
The star of Piccadilly.

The Monsieurs and Signoras too
Like cats in love, set up their mew,
"Ah morto, morto, poe'ro Q!
The Star of Piccadilly."

Townshend, Macmanus, all the hue
And cry of Bow-Street, each purlieu,
Each little corner, wants its Q,
The Star of Piccadilly.

* Written in 1804.
Poll, Peggy, Cath’rine, Patty, Sue,
Descendants of old dames he knew,
All mourn your tutor, ancient Q,
The Star of Piccadilly.

Old Nick, he wisk’d his tail so blue,
And grinn’d, and leer’d, and look’d askew—
"O ho!" says he, "I’ve got my Q,
The Star of Piccadilly."

On wings of sulphur down he flew:
All London, take your last adieu—
There, there away he claws Old Q,
The Star of Piccadilly.

And now, this may be said of Q—
That long he ran all folly thro’,
For ever seeking something new:
He neither car’d for me, nor you,
But, to engagements strictly true,
At last—he gave the devil his due;
And died, a boy of eighty-two—
Poor Q of Piccadilly.

The following appeared after his death:—

OLD Q.

To the popular tune of "Come listen awhile to my lay," &c.

You’ve heard of the once sporting fame
Of him who has now run his race—
I mean that blood stallion by name
"Old Q." or some call’d him, "Your Grace."

No meeting in youth would he shun;
Nay the dog was so knowing and arch,
He was bang up; at all was his fun;
And he tipp’d knowing Jockies—the March.
Sing tol de rol lol, &c.

As fix’d as the starting post—he
On Knavesmire and Epsom appear’d;
He knew how to bribe with a fee,
But he ne'er was himself to be queer'd.
Well train'd were his blood horses fleet;
Like wind o'er the course they would scud;
While each rider so firm in his seat,
Did honour to Queensberry's stud.

But if for the sweepstakes or plate,
Old Q. would with energy start;
'Twas equally order'd by Fate,
He should race after ev'ry girl's heart.
On the charms of dear woman he'd doat;
Nay, to speak plain, I'll tell ye, between us,—
O'er a post had you clapp'd petticoat,
He'd have instantly sworn 'twas some Venus.

But age, that will weaken the limbs,
And check the bold speed of Eclipse, Dous'd one of this rare Stallion's glims,*
And made him grow stiff in the hips.
Ne'ertheless he would not yield an inch,
In loosening bright Beauty's dear zone:
'Twas his maxim—"The dog that can flinch
Is not prime—But I'm blood to the bone."

Well, what though the old buck's done up,
He dash'd away while he was able;
So his memory ensures him Fame's Cup,
With every true friend to the stable.
As for daughters of Cythera's isle,
They'll drain all the sluices of grief;
'Till Four-in-hand blades make 'em smile,
Prime, bang-up boys—will bring 'em relief.

Possessing enormous wealth, and naturally of an independent character, the Duke of Queensberry's maxim through life had been to please himself, regardless of the opinion of the world.
The weak points of his character in manhood, and

* Towards the latter period of his life, the Duke lost the sight of one of his eyes.
the foibles of his age, are both to be traced to this blameable indulgence.

The following is an abstract of the will of this eccentric Peer, upon whose death the titles of the Duke of Queensberry and the Earl of March became extinct.

His grace devised all his freehold and copy-hold estates to Lord and Lady Yarmouth for their lives, and the life of the survivor of them, and after their death to Frances, daughter of the said Lady Yarmouth, then of the age of eleven years, or thereabouts, and the children of the said Lady Yarmouth, born, or to be born, and their heirs for ever. And he appointed Sir James Montgomery, Bart., Edward Bullock Douglas, Esq., and William Murray, Esq. executors. He directed all legacies to be paid within three months after his decease, and all annuities to be paid half-yearly; and he directed his executors, out of his personal estate, to invest, in their names, as much stock as would be sufficient for the payment of the annuities.

Our readers will perhaps excuse our prefacing the prices realized by his stud with the following anecdotes of the late Duke of Grafton, whose death we noticed in the preceding chapter.
They show that nobleman's readiness of repartee, and good nature, for in those days such mar-plots usually met with severe and summary punishment for spoiling the sport of the "great."

"His Grace being fox-hunting, near Newmarket, a Quaker, at some distance, upon an adjoining eminence, pulled off his hat, and gave a view holla!—The hounds immediately ran to him, and being drawn off the scent, were consequently at fault, which so enraged the Duke, that, galloping up to the offender, he asked, in an angry tone,—"Art thou a Quaker?"

"I am, friend," replied broad-brim.—"Well, then," rejoined his Grace, "as you never pull off your hat to a Christian, I will thank you in future not to pay that compliment to a Fox."

On another occasion, when hunting, the Duke was thrown into a ditch; at the same time a young curate calling out, "Lie still, your Grace!" leaped over him, and pursued his sport. Such an apparent want of feeling, we might presume, was properly resented: not so; on being assisted to remount by his attendants, the Duke said, "That young man shall have the first good living that falls to my disposal; had he stopped to have taken care of me, I never would have patronized him." He was delighted with an ardour similar to his own, or perhaps with a spirit that could not stoop to flatter. His Grace kept his resolution, and gave the young clergyman the first living which became vacant within his patronage.

On the 23rd of January, 1810, died Mr. Edward Tattersall, of Hyde Park-corner, the father of the two gentlemen so well known as the present proprietors of the most extensive and profitable business in horses, in the kingdom, and in which they succeeded him. His father, Edmond Tattersall, who founded the famous horse-repository that bears his name, died in 1795, as will be seen by reference to another part of this work, in which we have given a description of this well-known establishment, with a brief history of its founder.

On the 8th of September, Thomas Field, the jockey, died at Richmond, in Yorkshire, aged 55 years. He was considered an excellent rider and trainer in his time, in which capacities he had been employed by Sir L. Dundas; Sir W. Vavasour; Sir Thomas Gascoigne; Sir H. T. Pane, &c, Barts.; and Messrs. Wentworth, Cornforth, Wetherill, Shafto, &c.

At the commencement of the First Spring Meeting at Newmarket, in this year, Spaniard, Pirouette, The Dandy, and Sir F. Standish's Eagle colt, died in consequence of arsenic having been put into the troughs at which they were watered. Two horses, Reveller and Cœlebs who, drank some of the poisoned water, recovered.

This atrocious act created general indignation, and a reward of 500 gs. was immediately offered by the Jockey Club for the discovery of the guilty party.

On the 15th of August, Daniel Dawson, a low touter*, was apprehended at Brighton and committed by Mr. Conant, the Magistrate, of Marlborough Street, to Cambridge goal; a true bill having been found against him by the Grand Jury for poisoning horses at the Newmarket Spring Meeting, in 1809. His trial and execution took place in 1812.

On the 15th of April, Mr. Alexander Bartholomian, the proprietor and printer of the York Herald, an old established and well-known sporting newspaper, died at York.

In May of this year the attention of the public was occupied by the trial of Daniel Dawson, at the Spring assizes for the County of Cambridge, for poisoning the Eagle colt, the property of Sir F. Standish, at Newmarket, in the spring of 1811. His accomplice in crime, Cecil Bishop, having been admitted King’s evidence, disclosed the cruel and atrocious practices they had carried on from the year 1808 to the period when they committed the offence for which Dawson was then tried.

It appeared from this fellow’s evidence, that in 1809, Dawson had poisoned a brood mare and a hack, by putting corrosive sublimate into a trough at Doncaster, and that he (Dawson) had confessed to him that he had physicked Lord Darlington’s Rubens, previous to the race for the Pavilion Stakes in 1808, but the dose not being strong enough, Rubens recovered and won the race.

After mentioning other similar misdeeds, Bishop proceeded to describe how, at the instigation of Dawson, he had gone to Newmarket, and by means of a crooked syringe, had contrived to introduce a solution of arsenic into Mr. Prince’s troughs at the Ditch, and watched them till he had seen the horses drink, when he immediately went off to Dawson, informing him of the fact, that he might give the necessary notice to his allies in the betting ring.

Notwithstanding this evidence, the Judge decided, without hearing the arguments of counsel, that the prisoner must be acquitted, on the grounds that the law did not recognize him as a principal. The Judge, however, refused to take bail for the prisoner, and held him in Cambridge gaol for trial at the autumn assizes on another indictment, charging him with poisoning two brood mares, the property of Mr. Northey, and a hack, belonging to Mr. Adams of Royston, at Newmarket, in 1809 and 10.

Accordingly, on the 22nd of July, Dawson was again tried before the Hon. Mr. Justice Heath, his indictment being laid under the Act, 9 Geo. I. c. 22, sometimes called the Black Act. Upon the evidence of Bishop and others, he was convicted of having infused poison into the troughs of Mr. Stevens, on the 10th of July 1809, and sentenced to death by the Judge.

Dawson behaved with a coarse levity during the trial, frequently making use of oaths and horrid imprecations, whilst the witnesses were giving their evidence. His defence was a simple denial of his guilt, and he called no witnesses in his behalf.

Lord Foley, Lord George Cavendish and others exerted themselves to obtain the extension of the royal clemency to his case, but without effect, and the unhappy criminal suffered the extreme penalty of the law on Saturday, the 8th of August, on the drop of Cambridge Castle. Nearly 10,000 persons were present on this occasion. His last words on the scaffold were to the effect that he was impressed with an idea "that he should ascend to heaven from the drop."

Sir Charles Bunbury was exceedingly fortunate this year with his famous horse Smolensko; but we shall take another opportunity of noticing the performances of this splendid racer.

One unfortunate "better," Mr. Robert Brograve, having lost upwards of £8000 at Epsom, by backing the field against Smolensko, and being unable to pay his bets, shot himself to avoid the shame of meeting his "turf" creditors, although he had £4000 in the hands of his bankers. Among other losers by this gentleman's unhappy death we find the name of Mr. Gully, the once celebrated pugilist, but who, at this time having left "the ring," had become one of the principal "betters on the turf."

The Claret stakes at Newmarket this year, were won by Comus beating Cato, Crew, and Historia; but on weighing after the race, Chisney, who rode Crew, made a complaint of crossing against both Comus and Cato, but the Jockey Club upon the evidence of the rider of Historia, decided in favour of the winner.

In this year died, in Lord Montgomery's stud, the valuable stallion, John Bull, whose sire, Fortitude, was got by Herod, and dam by Eclipse. He was bred by the Earl of Grosvenor, and in 1792 won the Produce stakes at Newmarket, and the Derby at Epsom. He was the sire of Alfred, Cæsario, Enterprize, Ferdinand, Muly Moloch, Vandal, Violante, &c. &c.

Only two horses, Smolensko and Solyman, were entered for the Claret stakes this year, no others venturing against them, both being at the time first favourites for the Derby.

The following celebrated race-horses changed hands this year; the Duke of Rutland's Grimalkin sold to the Emperor of Austria for 1700 gs. (his Grace refusing 2000 gs. for Soothsayer); Mr. Gascoine's Cannon-ball by Sancho for 2000 gs. to Lord Jersey; and Mr. Watts' Tramp to the same nobleman for 1200 gs.

On the 25th of July, the stud of Mr. R. Ladbroke, then lately deceased, was sold at Messrs. Tattersall's, and produced 2,925 gs. Whalebone by Waxy, fetched 510 gs.; Octavius by Orville, 630 gs.; Hamlet by Hambletonian, 510 gs.; Eagle, 260 gs.; Miss Wasp, a brood mare by Waxy, 400 gs.; &c. &c.

The Goodwood races, which during the war had suffered from the absence of the Duke of Richmond, while serving in the armies of his country, were this year revived, with excellent sport, and a fashionable and numerous attendance. Among other distinguished visitors, the Duke of Wellington accompanied the noble proprietor on the course.

In September, the well-known and eccentric Colonel Thornton left this country to take up his residence in France, where he continued till his death. He took with him three carriages, ten horses, and his falconer and hawks.

On the 29th of the same month, the following race between Captain Hanson's grey gelding, and a bay horse, the charger of an officer of the 14th dragoons, excited much attention in the sporting world. The conditions were to gallop twelve miles over Blackwater trotting ground; and the match was won by the bay horse, which performed the distance as follows, viz:

The Duke of Dorset, a young and amiable nobleman, who only came of age on the 15th of November, 1814, most unhappily lost his life from an accident he met with while hunting in Ireland, in the February of this year. Carried by Lord Powerscourt and his attendants to the nearest dwelling, and placed on a hard mattress, he requested to be raised, in order that he might breathe more freely; and while this was being done, fancying himself slipping off the couch, he exclaimed: "I am off!" and shortly after expired.

We quote this circumstance merely that we may refer to the immoral and unworthy feeling which must influence those who could parrot this simple exclamation into the defiance of the atheist and infidel, and then quote it as an instance of the "gross irreligion of sportsmen."

On the 26th of February in this year, 1816, Joseph Rose, for many years jockey to Thos. Stapleton Esq., died at York in the 80th year of his age.

On the first day of the Craven Meeting at Newmarket, the following match attracted an immense concourse of spectators. It was between Mr. Neville's ch. c. Sir Joshua by Rubens, 8st. 2lb., and Mr. Houldsworth's b. c. Filho da Puta, by Haphazard, winner of the Doncaster St. Leger stakes in 1815, 8st. 9lb.; R. M., 1000 gs. h. ft. Sir Joshua took the lead, which he maintained throughout, winning by a neck, after a spirited struggle. W. Arnold jockied the winner, and T. Goodison rode Filho, in excellent style. Large sums depended on this event; the betting at starting being eleven to eight and six to four on Sir Joshua.

After Sir Joshua had been beaten at the First Spring Meeting at Newmarket, by Castrella by Castrel, for the Handicap sweepstakes of 100 gs. each, A. F., Mr. Houldsworth challenged Sir Joshua to run the same match over again for 2000 gs. which offer was declined by Mr. Neville, who had the misfortune to lose this famous horse from an accident at Newmarket, on the 14th of December.

As this case is one of rare occurrence, we give the report of Mr. Bowles of Cambridge, who was employed to examine the carcase. "With respect to the appearance of Sir Joshua, on opening his abdomen, I found at least four pails full of coagulated and fluid blood. His near pelvis bone was fractured, just where the head of the thigh is recurved into the socket, and a portion of the fractured bone had forced its way into the abdomen, and by tearing the blood vessels, made an immense wound, which caused the fatal hæmorrhage. I think the accident must have occurred from the horse getting up hastily, having seen several similar fractures; but no instance in which the bone had forced itself into the cavity of the belly. Sir Joshua's lungs, and every other part which I saw, appeared perfectly sound."

On the 22nd of April Mr. Bruen's b. f. Wire by Waxy, which he had purchased of the Duke of Grafton six months previously for 3000 gs. won a Gold cup and stakes to the amount of 3000 gs. over the Curragh, Ireland. This race excited considerable interest in England, as well as in Ireland, and Mr. Bruen is said to have won £20,000 on the event.

On the 16th of June, Edward Ellerker Esq., died at Hart, near Hartlepool, in the 84th year of his age. This gentleman was well known on the Turf, as an owner and breeder of race-horses, among the most famous of which were Snake, Regulus, Charmer, Minerva, Saxoni, Windlestone, Cardinal York, Cleveland, Archduke, Slender Billy, Lorenzo, &c.

No less a sum than 300,000 gs., is said to have been paid and received at Tattersall's in the settlement of the betting at Epsom races in this year.

On the 21st of October in this year General Gower's stud was sold at Tattersall's. The following are some of the prices:

Raphael, stallion, four years old, by Rubens out of Iris. . 205
Iris, brood mare, by Brush, covered by Haphazard. . . 75

The amount realized, by the sale of the whole stud, two year olds and yearlings included, was 2,463 gs.

The inhabitants of the parishes of Hammersmith and Fulham had subscribed and made preparations for the establishment of races annually on Wormwood Scrubs, when the following notice put an end to their exertions, which have never been renewed:—

"I do hereby give you notice not to come upon, or trespass, or commit any trespass in or upon a certain place called Wormholt Wood, otherwise Wormwood Scrubs, in the parish of Fulham, and the county of Middlesex; and that in case you do so after this notice, you will be considered a wilful trespasser, and an action of law will be forthwith commenced against you for the same.

"Signed by the solicitor, in behalf of the Quarter-Master-General of the Forces."

In the same month, the well-known Colonel
Mellish died, at his farm at Hodsack Priory, aged 37. Had this gentleman confined himself to the turf, there is no doubt but that he would rather have increased than injured his fortune, as he was generally allowed to be a perfect judge of the powers, the qualities and capabilities of race-horses. Instead of this, he followed with avidity, and an utter recklessness of expense, every sporting pursuit, and even among the pugilists he was reckoned the patron of their art, which was then much more in vogue as a public amusement than at the present day. As a natural consequence, the late Colonel soon ran through his immense paternal property at Blythe, which was accordingly sold, and he retired to his farm at Hodsack Priory, bearing his change of circumstances with perfect equanimity. During the short period which he served in the Peninsular War, he obtained much credit for his military talents, his activity, and patience of fatigue, and was appointed aid-de-camp to General Sir Rowland Ferguson.

He made his first appearance on the turf at Durham races, in 1801, when his horse, Welshman by Sir Peter, (rode by W. Pierce), won a match of 50 gs., and from that period up to his death, we find him constantly running horses for the principal plates and stakes in the kingdom. In 1804, his famous horse, Sancho, won the St. Leger stakes at Doncaster, and in the year following, they were won by his horse, Stareley.
On the 9th of September, Mr. Richard Goodison, the well-known trainer, died at Newmarket.

The Stewards of the Jockey Club having taken into consideration the case laid before them by the Stewards of Doncaster Races, respecting the St. Leger Stakes, and having examined Mr. Lockwood, the person appointed by the Stewards to judge and start the race, are decidedly of opinion that the race should have been adjudged to Antonio, and, consequently, that the stewards should not have allowed a second race.

The stallions Election and Young Whiskey died this year.

On the 31st of March in this year, the turf was deprived, by death, of one of its oldest patrons, Sir Charles Bunbury, who died at his residence in Pall Mall, at the advanced age of 82. This excellent sportsman had been on the turf for nearly half a century, during which period he kept a numerous and valuable stud of race-horses, which he ran for all the principal stakes and plates throughout the kingdom, and with no small share of success. His horse Diomed won the first Derby stakes at Epsom in 1780, and among the performances of his best horses, too numerous for our limits, we may mention those of Eleanor and Smolensko as most worthy of attention. The former famous mare won both the Derby and Oaks in 1801, besides many other stakes, and in 1813, Smolensko carried off the Derby, and afterwards gained enormous sums for his owner by his successful running.

In private life Sir Charles Bunbury was generally esteemed for his amiable temper and kindness of heart; while on the turf he was reckoned a first rate judge of race-horses; and as he bore throughout his career the highest character for integrity, he was the great authority referred to on all subjects connected with racing.

* Case 3. Decisions of the Jockey Club in the Racing Calendar for 1822.—The Duke of Rutland and Mr. Wyndham, whose filly and colt ran a dead heat for a sweepstakes in the Craven Meeting this year, afterwards agreed to divide the stakes; but it being deemed necessary for one of the horses to walk over, a doubt arose as to the mode of settling bets, and the following cases were submitted to the Jockey Club. 1st. A. bets B. 5 gs. on the field against one of the horses which ran a dead heat; 2nd. A. bets B. five to two against the other; 3rd. A. bets B. three to one that one of the horses which ran the dead heat and Augusta in the Claret stakes did not both win. The stewards and members of the Jockey Club decided that in the first and second cases the money betted must be put together and then divided equally between the parties; and in the third case, that the dead heat being the first event, the bet thereby became void.

The stallions Allegro, Sovereign, and Leopold were sent to Russia, and Usquebaugh and Crispin died.

The unexpected decision of this year's St. Leger at Doncaster, caused an excitement in the sporting world as great as that occasioned by the two races of the Prince of Wales' Escape in 1791, the cases being also very similar. We cannot do better than quote the following remarks of a well-known sporting writer upon this race.

"It is impossible to describe the sensation excited by this race in the sporting circles in London and Doncaster, and all parts of the kingdom, previous to this event,—the hopes of one party of betters, the fears of another squad, the doubts of a third, and the numerous double events connected with Swap to the end of the chapter."
A thousand reports had also got into existence respecting the great favourite Swap; first, 'that he could not win;' secondly, 'that he had not quality enough belonging to him to carry off the St. Leger stakes;' and lastly, 'that he must not win if the Newmarket people were ever to be seen any more on the latter course as a host of betters.' 'What a chance for the groom to make his fortune,' was observed by an old file, 'if he understood management.' 'No, no,' cried a thoroughbred sportsman, 'there is too much honour at Doncaster for that sort of thing!' It has, however, come off right for the legs; and instead of being floored to the danger of levanting, they are now bang-up in the stirrups, as to the receipts of lots of blunt.'

Enormous sums were lost on these two races, and the easy manner in which Swap, two days afterwards, beat Theodore for the Gascoigne stakes, confirmed the general opinion of foul practice. Certain it is, that two notorious legs "laid it on thick in the right way," both of whom afterwards figured in no very creditable way both at Newmarket and Doncaster. The other performances of these two horses were very insignificant — those of Swap being the best.

The Hon. Mr. C. Trevor, a most promising young sportsman, met with his death this year, from running against a post while riding a race, having incautiously turned his head too far round, to observe the position of the other horses in the race. As this accident has occurred several times, we purpose noticing the subject more fully in our chapter on jockies and jockeyship.

His Majesty signified his intention, in the October of this year, of giving the sum of 100 gs., to be run for annually at Manchester, to commence in the year 1824, by horses, mares, or geldings, carrying the following weights, viz: four years old, 10st. 2lb.; five, 11st.; six, 11st. 5lb.; and aged, 11st. 7lb. Heats, three miles, and a distance, &c.

Hampden, the winner of the King's plate at Newmarket, performed the distance, 3 miles, 5 furlongs, and 187 yards, in seven minutes, four seconds, carrying 10st. 4lb.

In the month of November, the Marquis of Sligo was the holder of the Northumberland gold cup, the Peel cup, the Whip, the Sligo whip, and the King's, an extraordinary instance of success on the Irish turf, and the first time these prizes ever fell together into the possession of one individual.

In the course of this year, the following famous stallions were lost to the British turf, viz: Soothsayer, Antar, and Interpreter, sent to Russia, Rainbow to France, Steeltrap to New South Wales, Poulton by death.

At the Doncaster races of this year, an eccentric individual, named James Hirst, attracted much observation, from the singularity of his "equipage." It consisted of a body, composed of hazel sticks, plaited, and secured with strong cord, with a head covered with old check bed-furniture. This machine was mounted on four large light cart-wheels, of equal size, and was drawn by one horse at a rapid rate. The old "squire," as he was called, had for many years indulged in similar vagaries, and had such an objection to paying taxes, that it has been affirmed that he, at one period, drove mules instead of horses; trained a pig to serve as a pointer for his shooting; and even has been known to ride a bull with the Badsworth hounds.* This eccentric old sportsman died in Yorkshire, in 1829, at the advanced age of 91 years.

It was the general opinion that Glenartney could have won this year's Derby, and it was commonly remarked that few instances had occurred of two such horses having been bred in one year by the same owner. That his noble owner thought highly of this horse may be readily inferred, from the fact of his refusing 5000 gs. for him, after this race, although he sold Mameluke during the Ascot Meeting, to Mr. Gully, for 4000 gs. As our authority for the first part of this statement, we will quote the editorial description of this race, given in the Old Sporting Magazine.
"After three false starts, the final go was given; Bachelor, Mameluke, Glenartney, Edmund, Windermere, Gaberlunzie, and the Espagnole colt, got well away. In a twinkle Glenartney had the lead and kept it; at Tattenham corner every horse but Mameluke was beat; the two came along at little more than an easy exercising pace. Edmund, Gaberlunzie, and Lord George made a fruitless attempt to come up. At the distance, it was poundage on Glenartney, but Harry Edwards' powerful arms, thanks to a strong bridle, pulled his horse well together, though not quite double. Robinson's judgment at the instant slipped Mameluke, and he was declared winner. Edmund was third, Lord George fourth, and Gaberlunzie fifth, but without a chance. It is proper here to state, because such has been publicly before mentioned, that Lord Jersey's jockeys had positive orders not to consider each other, but each was to win if he could. No doubt such was the fact, and if his Lordship and party, of the two, wished Mameluke to win, it is lucky for them; for we fully agree, with a remark made on the settling day, that had Glenartney's bridle broke, he could not have lost."

Horses, in training, of the Duke of Grafton. Rufus by Election, four years old, 340 gs.; Bolero by Partisan, four years old, 290 gs.; Goshawk by Merlin, three years old, 700 gs.; Norman by Abjer, 350 gs.; and Daemon by Amadis, 140 gs.
The best horses in the stud of Mr. Mytton, a name well known in the sporting world, realized the following prices, being sold at Halston by Mr. Beardsworth, viz:—Whittington by Filho da Puta, 290 gs.; Longwaist by Whalebone, 860 gs.; Flexible by Whalebone, 530 gs. The famous stallion Figaro, was also sold by Messrs. Tattersall for 1,850 gs.

By the exertions of the stewards, the sport for this year at Epsom races was much increased, no less than three new stakes having been opened.

The right of the Jockey Club, to warn persons off the Newmarket race course, was fully established at the Cambridge assizes, by a verdict to that effect, given by a jury in an action for trespass, brought by the Duke of Portland against S. Hawkins, Esq.; who had been forbidden the race course, on account of having used unbecoming language to Lord Wharncliffe on the heath, for what the former gentleman considered an unjust decision of the Jockey Club. On the trial, evidence was produced by the Jockey Club, that the proprietorship of the race course had been vested in that body, since the year 1753, as tenants of the Duke of Portland.

On the 26th of June, Mr. James Croft the trainer, died at Middleham, Yorkshire, in the 42nd year of his age. Among the principal patrons of this well-known northern trainer, we find at different times the names of the Duke of Leeds, Lord Kelburne, the Hon. Mr. Petre, Sir Wm. Maxwell, Mr. Gascoigne, Sir B. R. Graham, &c., and the following winners of the St. Leger came out of his stable, viz:—Filho da Puta, the Duchess, Theodore, and Jerry. The year 1822, when Theodore won the St. Leger, produced a case we believe unparalleled in the annals of racing; the four first horses in the race having been all trained by Mr. Croft.

Upon the retirement of Mr. Robson, the well-known trainer, of Newmarket, from the turf in the course of this year, many of the leading members of the Jockey Club subscribed for a piece of plate, which they presented him in testimony of their regard for the integrity, zeal, and ability, displayed by him for many years in his business.

Towards the middle of June in this year Mr. J. Kearton, the veteran jockey, died at the advanced age of 93. This well known rider’s career commenced in the training stables at Middleham, and his talents for riding, combined with his strict integrity, soon introduced him into excellent employment. In his day, "the golden age of the turf," he won a greater number of gold cups than any of his contemporaries. In 1784 he won the Doncaster St. Leger, then the ninth year of its establishment, on Omphale; but at that time this stake was not productive of so much competition as the gold cups and other prizes.

Towards the end of his life Kearton, after a tedious litigation, became possessed of a considerable property, which no doubt soothed his declining years. For the last three years of his life he was totally blind, and confined to his bed; but he retained his mental faculties unimpaired to the last.

It is worthy of remark, that Kearton, and his cotemporaries, John Pratt, John Singleton, J. Oakley, Joseph Rose, and John Sheppard, all died about this period, at very advanced ages, and in full possession of their mental faculties to the last.

At Shrewsbury races, in this year, Clift the jockey evinced remarkable coolness and courage under the following very dangerous circumstances: as he was riding Niagara for the Member’s plate, the bridle broke, so that the bit came entirely out of the horse’s mouth; upon which, with great presence of mind, he gathered up the dangling bridle, and guided his horse with his whip, till she stopped at the winning chair.

On the 26th of June, in this year, the turf was deprived by death of the support of its most illustrious and earnest patron, George IV. In 1784, the Prince of Wales made his first appearance as a proprietor of race-horses, and soon entered into the pursuits of the turf with all the ardour of a thorough sportsman, and was generally allowed to possess great judgment in all matters appertaining to race-horses and races. In 1786 he was compelled, from the embarrassment of his circumstances, to part with his racing stud; but two years afterwards, upon his debts being paid and his income enlarged by parliament, he returned to the enjoyment of his favourite amusement with increased zest.

As we purpose giving a detailed account of the success of George the Fourth's race-horses, we will confine ourselves here to a brief explanation of the unfortunate event which occasioned his second retirement from the turf in 1792.

At this distance of time, when all the angry feeling engendered by interest and partisanship has passed away, a plain statement of facts, as they occurred, is all that is necessary, leaving it to the reader to draw his own conclusions.

On the 20th October, 1791, the Prince of Wales’ best horse, Escape, ridden by the late Samuel Chifney, was beat by Coriander, (by two lengths,) and Skylark, for the plate, for which he was the favourite in the betting; Ditch-in. On the following day, the betting, being 4 and 5 to 1 against Escape, this horse, jockied again by Chifney, beat Skylark and other horses easily, B. C.

Upon this, a great outcry was raised at Newmarket by the losers, who did not hesitate to say that Chifney had rode to lose on the 20th, and that the Prince of Wales was implicated in the cheat. The Prince, on the contrary, affirmed that he had not a stiver on the first race, while on the second, he only won about 400 gs.

In order to satisfy the Jockey Club as to Chifney's riding in these races, he made an affidavit, of which the following is a copy; he also caused him to be examined by Sir Charles Bunbury, Ralph Dutton, and Thos. Panton, Esquires, the Stewards of the Jockey Club.

"Middlesex.

"Affidavit of Samuel Chifney, of Newmarket, in the county of Cambridge, rider, maketh oath and saith, that he, this deponent, did ride Escape belonging to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, in a race in which he was beaten, on the 20th October, 1791, at Newmarket; and that he did also at Newmarket ride the same horse in another race, on the next day, viz. the 21st of October, 1791, in which he won. That he made no bet whatsoever against Escape for the 20th of October, 1791, when he was beaten; but this deponent had one bet of 20 gs. upon Escape, and no more, for the 21st of October, 1791, when he won, which was betted for the deponent by Mr. Vauxhall Clark. And this deponent further saith, that he was not interested or concerned directly or indirectly in any other bet whatsoever against or for Escape, for either of the before mentioned days. And this deponent further maketh oath that on the said 20th of October, 1791, he neither did, nor caused or procured to be done, anything to check, hinder, or prevent the said horse Escape, from winning, but on the contrary, did everything which his judgment suggested to him, and his powers enabled him, to make Escape win the race he ran on the 20th, &c. And this deponent further maketh oath and saith: That in no place that he has had the honour of living in since 1784, has he won a guinea against any horse that was beat, where he either trained or rode him. And this deponent further maketh oath and saith: That which is asserted in the foregoing narrative or statement is true, with his thoughts on the same.

(Signed) Samuel Chifney.
Witness, John Collick.”

In 1804, Chifney published a narrative of these occurrences, to which he added some directions for riding races, which we shall notice in another place. In this little work, to which he gave the name of "Genius Genuine," and which was published by subscription of five guineas each, and is now very scarce, he accounts for Escape's losing on the 20th, from his being short of work, and states that the gallop of that day was the means of getting him into sufficient trim to win on the following.

Notwithstanding Chifney's affidavit and explanation, Sir Charles Bunbury informed his Royal Highness, that if he suffered Chifney to ride his horses, no gentleman would start against him. The Prince was too generous to sacrifice his jockey, and therefore declined the turf altogether for some years.

On the 10th of December, 1792, part of the Prince of Wales' and the whole of the Duke of York's studs were sold. The following is a list of the horses, with the price fetched by each.

VOL. II.
The Prince returned to the turf in 1810, but did not visit Newmarket for some years after; and even when at length, having received the following letter, which was agreed to unanimously at a numerous meeting of the Jockey Club, held at Brighton in 1805, he consented to forgive the insult he considered had been put upon him, and again to attend the Newmarket meetings, his Royal Highness left off sending horses there after the completion of his engagements in 1808, and confined his patronage to Brighton, Lewes, Bisbury, Kingscote, and Maddington, for many years.

"To H.R.H. the Prince of Wales,

"May it please your Royal Highness,

"The members of the Jockey Club, deeply regretting your absence from Newmarket, earnestly entreat the affair may be buried in oblivion, and sincerely hope that the different meetings may again be honoured by your Royal Highness's condescending attendance."

A rumour having gone abroad, at the commencement of Doncaster races for this year, that certain parties intended starting horses, for the sole purpose of getting in the way of "certain favourites," and thus causing confusion, "a practice by no means uncommon with the northern gentry of a certain genus," the stewards issued the following notice; which, if mischief was intended, certainly produced the desired effect, viz:—

"At a meeting this afternoon of the gentlemen connected with the turf, it being stated that strong and apparently well-grounded suspicions are entertained that a determination has been entered into by certain individuals to interfere with the fair start and just decision of the "race for the St. Leger," it has been resolved, that in the event of any nefarious act of the kind being attempted, it be strongly recommended to all future stewards, not only to prevent every jockey who has been proved either to have created false starts, or otherwise to have behaved unfairly, during the race, from ever again riding at Doncaster; but that the master of these jockeys, if afterwards proved to have been implicated in such transaction, be prevented ever again starting a horse at these Meetings."

By order of the Stewards,
J. Lockwood, Jun.
Clerk of the Course.

Doncaster, 19th September, 1831.

On New Years' Day, John Mangle, for many years considered an excellent jockey, died at Middleham, Yorkshire, in the 80th year of his age, and in the enjoyment of an independence acquired by his talents and unsullied integrity. He succeeded in carrying off the St. Leger no less than five times; viz: in 1780, 86, 87, 88, and 92.

In June, the racing stud of the Earl of Sefton, on his retirement from the turf, was brought to the hammer, and realized 3,609 gs.

On the death of George IV., some anxiety was felt by the sporting world as to the degree of patronage his royal successor would bestow upon racing. This was, however, soon at an end; for although his late Majesty, William IV., sold off the horses in training, he determined to keep up a stud of about twenty-five brood mares, putting them to the best stallions, and selling the produce annually at Tattersall's as yearlings; a truly patriotic resolution, and in which he persevered till the day of his death. In addition to this mark of royal favour, his Majesty was also pleased to grant 100 gs., to be run for annually at the Liverpool Aintree Meeting, besides having the hoof of the celebrated Eclipse set in gold, and given as a challenge prize to be run for at Ascot, with a sweepstakes of 100 gs. each, with 200 gs. added by his Majesty.

On Saturday, the 5th of November, in this year, one of the most interesting events that ever occupied the attention of the sporting world, was decided at Newmarket. This was a match made between Colonel Charité and George Osbaldeston, Esq., for 1000 gs. aside; Mr. Osbaldeston undertaking to ride two hundred miles in ten hours, with an unlimited number of horses. The ground over which the match was performed, was four miles in length, beginning and ending at the Dukes' stand. Mr. Osbaldeston started at twelve minutes past seven, dressed in a purple silk jacket, black velvet cap, doeskin breeches, and top boots, and dividing the distance into heats of four miles each, performed it with twenty-eight horses, as follows.

Broke down a short distance from home, and trotted in, in a sad state.

48 miles in 2h. 1m. 5s. Coroner started badly. Other horses went off with him to prevent his bolting. After this round, Mr. Osbaldeston drank a mouthful of weak brandy and water. 60 miles in 2h. 33m. Emma ran on the wrong side of a post, coming down the Ditch, but Mr Osbaldeston turned her, and made his round good.

100 miles in 4h. 19m. 52s.

At the close of this round, Mr. Osbaldeston took a mouthful of bread and some brandy and water.

This round was the quickest in the match, and wonderful when we consider that in the famous match between Hambletonian and Diamond, at racing weights, the B. C. was only run in 8m. 28s., "while Mr. Osbaldeston rode 11st. 2lb."

120 miles in 5h. 11m. After this round, Mr. Osbaldeston rested six minutes and a half, and lunched upon a cold partride and brandy and water in the stand, but although wet to the skin, refused to put on dry clothes.

In this round Mr. Osbaldeston was thrown, but receiving no hurt, soon remounted; he, however, appeared a little distressed when he came in, which put the opposite party in hopes. Among other bets, 1,000 to 100 sovs. was laid that he did not perform the distance in 9 hours.
Mr. Osbaldeston did not appear much fatigued with his extraordinary task; but, on its conclusion, rode into Newmarket on his hack amidst the congratulations of his friends and the cheers of the multitude, and having taken a warm bath, and after two hours’ repose, joined a dinner party, as if nothing had happened.

Owing to the remissness of his friends in laying on money "for his account," as he himself declared, he did not, after deducting expenses, win more than £1,800 on this event.

Shortly afterwards, upon its having reached his ears that many had spoken slightly of the difficulty of this performance, he published the following challenge, which, we need scarcely add, has never been accepted, viz:—

"I challenge any man in the world, of any age, weighing or carrying my weight, to ride any distance he prefers, from 200 to 500 miles, for £20,000, but if he will only ride 200 or 250 miles, I will ride for £10,000. Or, I will ride against the jockey of 7st. whom they talk of backing to ride 200 miles in eight hours, receiving thirty minutes for the difference between 7st. and 11st. Or, I will take £10,000 to £3,000, or £20,000 to £6,000, that I ride 200 miles in eight hours, which, it must be allowed, would be a wonderful performance for 11st. odd, and I think almost impossible; at least, a single accident would lose the match, and I should scarcely have time to mount and dismount. I am always to be heard of at Pitsford, near Northampton.

(Signed) George Osbaldeston."

Pitsford, Wednesday, Nov. 16th, 1831.

The following verses, suggested by this exploit, appeared in the December number of the New Sporting Magazine, to which talented periodical we acknowledge ourselves considerably indebted for the description of Mr. Osbaldeston's match, of which it contained the fullest and most correct account of the day.
HISTORY OF THE

TIME AND THE SQUIRE.

A MATCH.

Time "'gainst the field," the parsons cry,
And add, by way of commentry
To warn each racing sinner, Whatever length life's course may be,
" A. T., M. M., or T. Y. C.,
" Time's sure to be the winner."

" Out upon their authority!"
The Squire exclaims; " What's Time to me " That I his steps should follow?
" To challenge him I'm not afraid."
" Done," replies Time ; a match was made,
And Time was beaten hollow.

The following famous horses changed hands, this year, viz:—The Saddler, 3 yrs. old, purchased by Mr. Wagstaff, for £3,000; Fang, 2 yrs. old, by Mr. F. Richardson, for £3,300 and half his engagements; Emancipation, 4 yrs. old, by Mr. Gully, for 1,500 gs.; Chancellor, 3 yrs. old, by Lord Wilton, for 800 gs., and Laurel, by Mr. Theobald for 1,200 gs.

In our sporting obituary for this year, we have to record the death of Mr. James Weatherby, of Oxendou Street, Haymarket, at the age of 64. This gentleman was, for many years, keeper of the Match Book at Newmarket, and publisher of the Racing Calendar, in both which offices he was succeeded by his sons, the present Messrs. Weatherby.

The Doncaster Meeting this year was but thinly attended, from the prevalence of the cholera; and the sport was marred by the general mistrust and indignation directed against parties whose appearance on the turf, as owners of favourites for stakes of the first magnitude, must ever be attended with unpleasant results.

At the commencement of the meeting, it transpired that a Mr. E. Bond, the proprietor of the Athenæum gaming-house, in London, and hitherto unknown on the turf, had purchased Ludlow, a horse in great favour for the St. Leger, and dreaded as a formidable rival to Mr. Richardson's Fang, of Mr. Beardsworth, for no less a sum than "5000 gs."

This naturally excited general suspicion of the existence of one of those confederate plans by which the public are plundered for the benefit of the few, and which bring such odium upon the turf. Upon being roundly charged with this, Mr. Bond confessed that there was a "fourth party" concerned in the alleged purchase of Ludlow, besides his brothers and himself, but declined naming him. It is, however, an act of justice due to this individual and his brothers, that we should place before our readers his own vindication of the charges made against him, and which appeared in the following letter addressed to the Morning Herald newspaper:

Sir,

"I feel confident that common justice will induce you to insert the following. I bought Ludlow: I gave 5,000 gs. for him, public opinion saying he was the best horse. I backed him to win £2,925 of Mr. Thomas, £2,400 of Mr. Halliday, £1,600 of Mr. Crockford, £1,000 of Mr. Botsul, besides smaller bets on the St. Leger stakes, making in the whole £15,000. I challenge the whole betting world to prove I laid one guinea against him. Respecting the fourth party, I still say that the public has nothing to do with it. I have shown, as far as I had control over the horse, that the running, riding, and my intentions, were perfectly honest. Why am I called on for more?"

(Signed) Ephraim Bond.

26, St. James's Street,
25th Sept. 1832.

Be the merits of this case as they may, one thing is certain, viz: that the suspicion of something wrong being intended, was general before the race, and gave a material check to speculation on its chances; besides which, Mr. Gully's carrying off the prize, chiefly owing to the splendid riding of Robinson, was hailed with universal satisfaction.

A dispute arising out of this affair, occasioned a duel between Mr. Gully and Mr. Osbaldeston, in which the former gentleman had a narrow escape of his life, his adversary's bullet having passed through his hat.
The Earl of Scarborough and Lord Amesbury, better known as Charles Dundas, Esq., M.P. for Berkshire, two of the oldest and most staunch supporters of the turf, died in the course of this year. Both had reached a very advanced age, and were generally esteemed.

In the turf obituary of this year we find the names of more than one distinguished sportsman. First on the list stands the late Earl Fitzwilliam, who departed this life on the 8th of February, 1833, at Milton Abbey, near Peterborough, Northamptonshire, at the advanced age of 85; during seventy-seven years of which period he was a peer, having succeeded to the title when only eight years of age. Devotedly attached to the manly field-sports of his native country, the late Earl "won golden opinions" from his fellow sportsmen, by his amiable manners and good nature. His first connection with the turf was about the year 1770, as the confederate of his uncle, the Marquis of Rockingham, then considered the leading patron of racing. This confederacy continued till the Marquis's death in 1782, upon which Earl Fitzwilliam took the stud and stables to himself.

Among the many celebrated race-horses which this nobleman's stables produced, may be mentioned the following, whose principal performances are given in this work, viz:—Pewit by Tandem, Minstrel by Phenomenon, Cade by Phenomenon, Sir Solomon by Sir Peter, Orville by Beninbrough, Woodpecker by Buzzard, Paulina by Sir Peter, Knowsley by Sir Peter, Cervantes by Don Quixotte, Pumpkin by Stamford, Amadis by Don Quixotte, Cid by Sancho, Cossack by Sir Paul, Anselmo by Cervantes, Cardenio by Cervantes, Peppercorn by Capsicum, Civet by Cervantes, Beatrice by Ar-drossan, Dramatist by Comus, Humphrey Clinker by Comus, Mulatto by Catton, Medora by Cervantes, Ballad Singer by Tramp, Leo by Comus, &c., &c.

Earl Fitzwilliam was by no means fortunate in winning many of the great stakes, with the ex-ception of the St. Leger, which he won in 1789 with Pewit, in 1802 with Orville, and in 1807 with Paulina.

Old John Singleton trained and rode for Lord Fitzwilliam, when confederate with the Marquis of Rockingham, until 1774, when his advanced age compelled him to resign the saddle in favour of Christopher Scaife, who had married Singleton's daughter. On the retirement of Single-ton from the training department, he was suc-ceded by John Lunn, who soon after resigned in his turn; upon which Scaife took the entire management of the stud, but met with an accident at Stamford races, in 1793, in consequence of which he never rode again.
On the elder Scaife's retirement from the stable 1808, his son John succeeded him, and retained the situation till 1825, when it was placed in the hands of Clift and his son Thomas.

The successors of Old Scaife, as his Lordship's jockies, were, a son of his, young Christopher Singleton, for a short time, then John Singleton, Jun. (nephew to the Old Singleton,) till the end of 1802; John Jackson from that period till 1804, succeeded by Old Shepperd, till 1806; when the present veteran, Wm. Clift, obtained the appointment, which he filled with honour for many years, until the encroachments of age obliged him to resign it. After him, Thomas Lye rode for Lord Fitzwilliam for about two years, and was superseded by Henry Edwards, the last jockey who rode for the late Earl.

In 1831, the Earl retired from the turf, upon the advice of his relations, occasioned by some circumstances connected with the race at York in that year, when his horse, Medora, was beaten by Lord Scarborough's Cambridge, and the Duke of Leeds' Jenny Mills, entirely owing to the bad riding of Edwards—which was so bad, indeed, as almost to warrant the conclusion of its having been intentionally so.

On the 9th of March in this year, Ralph Riddell, Esq., of Felton Park, near Morpeth, Northumberland, died, universally esteemed. This worthy sportsman made his début on the turf in 1791, and from that period, to the day of his death, was one of its firmest and most honourable supporters. Among his horses, we find some of the most celebrated racers this country ever produced, and which made their appearance in the following order, viz.: In 1800, Merry Andrew by Walnut out of Sylvia; in 1811, XYZ, by Haphazard, dam by Spadille; in 1813, Encore by ditto, dam by Star; in 1814, Dr. Syntax by Paymaster, dam by Beningbrough out of Jenny Mole by Carbuncle; in 1816, Lydia by Remembrancer out of Helen, by Hambletonian; in 1824, Caccia Piatti by Whisker, dam by Walton; in 1828, Zodiac by Centaur, dam by Eaton; in 1829, Principe by Whisker out of Princess by Comus, &c., &c.

The most celebrated of these, and the best horse Mr. Riddell ever possessed, was Dr. Syntax, which he purchased of Mr. Knapton, of York, a well-known breeder of blood-stock, who had bought him when a foal, from Humphrey Osbaldeston, Esq., of Hunmanby, near Scarborough, Yorkshire, by whom he was bred.

It appears that Dr. Syntax ran no less than forty-nine times, out of which he won thirty-six races, in which he defeated all the first rate horses of the day, and gained his owner the sum of £3,654 in ten years, in the following order, viz.:—

In addition to these sums, he won 20 gold cups, viz.: one at Middleham, five at Lancaster, seven at Preston, one at Pontefract, five at Richmond, and one at Northallerton.

This famous race-horse was about 15 hands and an inch high, and of a dark brown colour. Worn out with old age, he was shot at Newmarket on the 15th of July, 1838.

Sir Harry Goodricke and Mr. Francis Richardson died this year. The former gentleman was well known in Leicestershire, as a master of hounds, in which capacity he was generally esteemed, both for his knowledge of the noble sport of hunting, and his good-nature in the field.

The latter well-known turfite was of low origin, but acquired some property and much notoriety by betting in the ring. His last speculation with Fang was not successful, as we have before explained.
The Duke of Cleveland's Chorister by Lottery, winner of the St. Leger in 1831, died in this year. Cadland, (winner of the Derby in 1828), Lottery by Tramp, Napoleon and Tetotum, were sent to France during this year.

Mr. Shard's Reveller was sold at Tattersall's in October, and purchased by the Marquis of Exeter for 400 gs.

This year was distinguished by the first appearance of "Plenipo" by Emilius, and "Glencoe" by Sultan, two of the best horses that recent turf history has to boast of. Such being the case, a brief summary of the performances of these celebrated race-horses, in this year, may not be unacceptable.

Both these horses made their debut at the Newmarket Craven Meeting, where Glencoe won the Tuesday's Riddlesworths, beating Zulima, the winner of the July stakes, and others, in a common canter. On the same day, Plenipo won a sweepstakes of 50 sovs. easily, by two lengths.

The next performance of these two famous rivals is one to which particular attention cannot be too earnestly recommended, as it proves, beyond a doubt, that Plenipo was equally superior for speed as for stoutness; which latter point, has been repeatedly denied by those parties who pretended to perceive nothing singular in his defeat for the St. Leger. This race was for a sweepstakes of 100 sovs. each, R. M., and at starting, the betting was 5 to 4 on Glencoe. According to orders, Glencoe was sent off at a terrific pace, it being thought that Plenipo could not hold out; a mistake soon made evident; for it appeared that he could not only stand the pace better, but had really more of it left in him; which he soon proved,—for, upon Glencoe’s beginning to give way, he took the lead, and won easily by four lengths.

After this race, large offers, we believe as much as £5,000, were made to Mr. Batson for his horse, all of which were declined by that gentleman, who declared his intention of keeping him to run for the Derby. These offers must of course be always looked upon with great suspicion, as few persons would give so enormous a sum for a favourite for a great stake, for the mere chance however good, of winning it; while by losing, they might acquire large sums, without running any risk.

Nothing could exceed the style in which Plenipo carried off the Derby stakes at Epsom, winning, with ease, by two lengths; the race being run at a rate of speed which the oldest sportsmen present all agreed that they had seldom before witnessed. Among the rejoicers at Mr. Batson’s splendid victory, his tenants were, no doubt, the most sincere; that gentleman having promised them, that if he should win the Derby, they should all hold their farms rent free for a year.

Plenipo’s next appearance was at Ascot Heath, where he walked over for the St. James’s Palace stakes; Glencoe, and sixteen other crack horses, declining the contest.
At Goodwood, Glencoe won the Cup, in a canter, by three lengths, proving his great superiority as a racer, it being the first time this cup was won by a three years old.

So high did Plenipo stand in public opinion on the day of the St. Leger, that the betting, up to the period of starting, was 5 to 2 on him, while the odds against Touchstone, the winner of the race, were 50 to 1. Eleven horses started for this great race, Bubastes taking the lead at a very severe pace; and although this horse was not even placed for the Derby, before reaching the Red House, he had totally defeated the great Plenipo who came in last but one; Shilelah, the second for the Derby, coming in fourth.

Nothing could exceed the excitement and vexation of the numerous backers of Plenipo, upon witnessing this unexpected termination of the race; nor were they slow to make those accusations of foul play which are always rise on these occasions. It must be confessed, that the fact of a horse of such undoubted superiority, running so badly when backed to an enormous amount, is "ugly enough;" and to this day, no explanation has reached the public, throwing the least light upon the matter. By the majority, the horse is considered to have been totally unfit, from fatness and want of training, to run a yard. As for those few who pretend that he was fairly defeated by the severe running made by Bubastes, their opinions must have been formed without reflection.

However all this may be, it must ever be regretted that Mr. Batson did not afford that thorough knowledge of everything concerning the management and training of his horse, to which the public had an undoubted right; and although that gentleman's high character for integrity, places him above the shade of suspicion of foul practice, he must still labour under the charge of, at least, carelessness, for having, with his great experience on the turf, suffered so splendid an animal to be ruined by an ignorant or designing trainer.

The remaining performances of this second Eclipse, still further confirmed the public opinion that he could have carried off the St. Leger with great ease. But after the "Doncaster affair," few could be found to back him, and those few suffered at Ascot for their credulity; as we shall presently shew.

A reference to the racing for the following year, (1835) will show our readers that at the Newmarket Craven Meeting, Plenipo again made his appearance. On this occasion, his condition was perfect, and his fine form, muscle, and legs, clean as a foal's, excited general admiration; and it was universally admitted that he was a perfect model of what a race-horse ought to be. His first race was for the Craven stakes, when he defeated Col. Peel's Nonsense, 5 yrs. old, the Duke of Cleveland's Shilelah, 4 yrs., Lord Chesterfield's Glaucus, 5 yrs., and five others. The pace was terrific, all doing their utmost to choke off the "phenomenon," but in vain, Plenipo winning easily by a length.

His next performance, in the same meeting, excited great interest, from a doubt which existed among many experienced turfites as to his being able to run a short distance at a great rate of speed. This race was for a subscription plate of £50, T. Y. C., a distance not much exceeding half a mile; and Lord Orford entered his horse, Clearwell by Jerry, five years old, for the purpose of clearing up this doubt, that horse having the reputation of first rate speed for that distance. This event was decided by Plenipo winning by three lengths, and his jockey, Robinson, declared that his horse "was never at half his speed."

The close of the Craven Meeting, and Plenipo's last appearance, took place on the same day, when he walked over for the Port stakes. This was contrary to what was held out to the public, as it was implicitly believed, up to the day of the race, that he was to start for the Gold Cup at Ascot, where he would again meet Bran, (the second for the St. Leger), and Glencoe. Great was the consternation of his unfortunate backers when they learned that their favourite was not to start on the morrow, but had gone "no one knew whither."

Whether or not this "backing out" was caused by the horse being amiss, no person could say; the most complete secrecy having been preserved up to the last moment, as to his condition, health, and movements. It is however only fair to state, that in answer to the animadversions of the sporting writers of the day, Mr. Batson addressed a letter to the editor of the Morning Post, stating that he had declared the fact of his horse being "amiss" in the Jockey Club stand at Ascot on Wednesday morning, (the day previous to the race). This, however, can scarcely be called making it public, which was his only correct course.

So strongly excited was the indignation of the public by this inexplicable conduct, that Craven, in giving an account of this affair in the Old Sporting Magazine, mentions as a fact that "Mr. Batson's trainer, George Paine, was advised by one of the most respectable of his calling to leave Ascot early on Thursday, for he did not consider it safe for him to remain there during the day."

The race for the Ascot Cup terminated as might be expected, Glencoe proving an easy winner by a length, "beating, among eight others, Bran, the conqueror (?) of Plenipotentiary."

In addition to this splendid performance, Glencoe won in 1834 the 2000 gs. stakes, the Goodwood Cup and the Garden stakes.

We shall close this account of their performances with the full pedigrees of these two splendid racers.

Mr. Batson's Plenipotentiary was foaled in 1821, and got by Emilius out of Harriet by Pericles, (son of Evandez); grandam by Selim; great grandam, Pipilyna by Sir Peter; great great grandam, Rally by Trumpator; great great great grandam, Fancy (sister to Diomed, winner of the Derby in 1780) by Florimel; great great great great grandam, Sister to Juno by Spectator; great great great great great grandam, Horatia by Blank; Childers, Miss Belvoir by Grey Grantham, Paget Turk, Betty Percival by Leede's Arabian out of a daughter of Spanker.

Glencoe, the property of the Earl of Jersey, foaled in 1831, was got by Sultan out of Trampoline by Tramp; grandam, Web (sister to Wire) by Waxy; great grandam, Penelope by Trumpator; great great grandam, Prunella by Highflyer; great great great grandam, Promise by Snap; Julia by Blank; Spectator's dam by Partner; Bonny Lass by Bay Bolton; Darley's Arabian, Byerly Turk, Taffolet Barb, Place's White Turk; Natural Barb mare.

On the 27th of March, Mr. Ridsdale's action for an assault against Mr. Gully, then Member of Parliament for Pontefract, was tried at York. It appeared from the evidence that Mr. Gully having met Mr. Ridsdale out hunting, commenced a conversation with him, as to whether he had said that he (Mr. Gully) had won £12,000 on the previous St. Leger. Mr. Ridsdale answered in the affirmative, upon which some words arose, and Mr. Gully, losing his temper, struck him on the back with his whip. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, with £500 damages, and it may be remarked, as a singular coincidence, that in the cause "Colonel Thornton v. Flint," tried in the same city in 1808, the same damages were given for the same offence.

On the 21st of October, the venerable Earl of Derby departed this life at Knowsley Park, near Preston, Lancashire, in the 83rd year of his age, universally beloved and regretted. This veteran sportsman, whose name will ever live in the sporting annals of his native country, as the originator of the Epsom Derby and Oaks' stakes, made his debut on the turf in 1776, when he succeeded to the title on the death of his grandfather, the eleventh Earl. He soon entered with ardour into the exciting business of the race-course, became a member of the Jockey Club, and one of the most distinguished leaders of that most famous circle of sportsmen, whose support of our national pastime has caused that period to be remembered as the "golden age" of the British turf.

* See page 316, vol. i.
In 1779, the Earl of Derby instituted the Oaks' stakes, which he won with his mare, Bridget by King Herod. But although he generally started horses for this stake and the Derby, he met with no great success, having only won the former once more in addition to the above, viz: with Hermione by Sir Peter in 1794, and the latter once with his celebrated horse, Sir Peter Teazle.*

After the year 1797, his Lordship almost entirely left off running horses at Newmarket, confining his support chiefly to races in his own provincial district, which did not fail to experience that increase of trade, the invariable effect of respectably and numerously attended turf meetings.

Lord Derby's first trainer, we believe, was old Saunders, who was succeeded by his son, and upon his dismissal, (about the year 1825), Bloss, a relative of Bloss of Newmarket, took office, which he held until his noble master's death.

Among his Lordship's jockies, we find the names of Pierse, Dunn, (who was killed at Chester), R. Spencer, Benjamin Smith, Johnson Lye and Templeman.

The Earl was also most enthusiastically attached to hunting and cocking, in which latter pursuit he was, we believe, generally considered unrivalled. His Lordship married twice, his second wife being the exemplary and accomplished actress, Miss Farren.

Ebor was purchased this year for the Emperor of Russia, of Mr. Wm. Barton of Fulford, near York, for 500 gs.; and Tranby, from the royal stud at Hampton Court, was sold for 1,000 gs. for America.

The following celebrated stallions died in the course of this year:

Longwaist, the ornament of the Underley stud, in May, in consequence of accidentally striking his head against the doorway of the stable. The performances of this famous racer are comprised in the years from 1824 to 1828; during which period, he won twenty-seven prizes, fifteen of which were gold cups. Longwaist had just attained the age of fourteen years, and only a short time previous to his death, his owner, Mr. Lowell, refused £5,000 for him; observing, that no sum of money would induce him to part with him. Longwaist was got by Whalebone, son of Waxy, out of Nancy by Dick Andrews, son of Joe Andrews by Eclipse; grandam, Spitfire by Benningbrough, son of King Fergus by Eclipse; great grandam by Young Sir Peter, son of Doge; great great grandam by Engineer; great great great grandam by Wilson's Arabian; Hutton's Spot, Mogul, Crab, Bay Bolton, Curwen Barb, Spot, White-legged Lowther Barb, Old Vintner mare.

Partisan died at Link's Farm, Newmarket, aged twenty-four years. His performances as a three year old were very inferior, but as a four year old, he beat Bourbon and many other good horses. Partisan was bred by the Duke of Grafton, and foaled in 1811, being got by Walton out of Parasol by Pot-8o's; her dam Prunella by High-flyer, &c.

In the month of December, Tramp being completely worn out with age, was shot at How-bridge Farm, near Malton. Tramp made his debut at Malton Craven Meeting, in 1813, and closed his career at Doncaster in the following year. He was very successful as a stallion; for at the time of his death, the total value of the stakes won by winners of his get, was calculated by a well known sporting writer to have amounted to £67,501.5s. Among these, we find two winners of the Derby, St. Giles and Dangerous; one of the St. Leger, Barefoot; two of the "whip," Zinganee and Red Rover. He was bred by Richard Watt, Esq., of Bishop Burton, near Beverley, Yorkshire, and foaled in 1810, being got by Dick Andrews, son of Joe Andrews; his dam, Scamp's dam, by Gohanna; grandam, Frexinella by Trentham; great grandam by Woodpecker; great great grandam, Everlasting by Eclipse; great great great great grandam, Hyæna by Snap; great great great great great grandam, Miss Belsa by Regulus; great great great great great great grandam by Bartlett's Childers; Honeywood's Arabian, Mr. Bowe's Byerley Mare, the dam of the two True Blues, &c.

In this year, the Derby stakes, for the first time since their establishment, were won by a north country horse, Mr. Bowe's ch. c. Mundig by Catton. The north country "speculators" won heavily on this race, having backed their horse against Ibrahim, the great favourite with the Newmarket people. The betting, immediately previous to the start, was 7 to 4 and 2 to 1 against Ibrahim, 4 to 1 against Ascot (the second horse), and 6 to 1 against the winner.

By far the best horse of this year, was the Queen of Trumps, the property of the Hon. E. M. L. Mostyn, M.P., by whom she was bred in 1832.
She is a dark brown mare, and got by Velocipede out of Princess Royal by Castrel out of Queen of Diamonds, her dam by Sir Peter out of Lucy by Florizel, Frenzy by Eclipse; her dam by Engineer, Lass of the Mill by Traveller, Miss Makeless, &c. Her first appearance was at Holywell Hunt Meeting in 1834, when she won the Champagne stakes. In 1835, she won the Oaks' in a canter, the Knowsley dinner stakes at Liverpool, the St. Leger at Doncaster; thus winning both the Oaks and the St. Leger, which had never been done before. At the same meeting she was defeated by half a head, * by Ainderby, for the Scarborough stakes; and on the same day, walked over for the three year old stakes. In the following year, (1836), she won the Stand Cup, and walked over for the Marquis of Westminster's plate at Chester, the Borough cup at Newton, and a Post sweepstakes of 100 sovs. each at the Holywell Hunt Meeting.

The sporting obituary for this year contains the following names:—

On the 29th of March, that eccentric sportsman, John Mytton, Esq., died in the King's Bench prison, in London, in the 38th year of his age. Inheriting a splendid fortune, Mr. Mytton, at an early age plunged into a vortex of heedless gaiety and expense, which after a comparatively brief career, left him a bankrupt both in pocket and in health. For the history of his sporting exploits and eccentricities, we refer our readers to his Memoirs, written by Nimrod, who has performed the kind (!) office to the memory of his friend, of perpetuating the remembrance of his almost insane acts of reckless folly and extravagance; much, we believe, to the sorrow of his family.

* Her defeat was caused by a dog running almost under her legs, when within the distance, and which threw her out of her stride.

His racing career commenced in 1817, and notwithstanding the enormous sums* which he expended on his stud, he was never a winner of any of the great stakes. His best horses were, Habberley, Banker, Euphrates and Longwaist; although the latter was not successful while in his hands. Dilly was his principal trainer, and Whitehouse his jockey. The following anecdote will sufficiently illustrate the character of this erratic being, who preserved, in after life, the same giddy thoughtlessness which might have been excused in his youth. When at Westminster School, he wrote to the then Lord Chancellor, Eldon, (he being a ward in Chancery), to inform him that as he was about to be married, he required an increase in his allowance. We here must explain that our hopeful youth was at this period only about fourteen years old, and enjoyed an allowance of £400 a-year. To this modest request the Chancellor returned the following laconic

* Mr. Mytton himself declared that in 1826 he expended £70,000 on the turf.
answer:—“Sir, If you can’t live on your allowance, you may starve; and if you marry, I’ll commit you to prison!”

Richard Wilson, Esq., of Bildeston House, Suffolk, died in June, in the 75th year of his age. This gentleman was the proprietor of the Bildeston breeding establishment, which was his favourite hobby for nearly a quarter of a century, and which was sold off by Messrs. Tattersall’s after his death. He made his debut on the turf in 1821, but for several years previous had been known as a breeder of blood stock. His success was trifling, and he is better known as a breeder than owner of first-rate race-horses, and was esteemed for his great evenness of temper. His first regular stud sale took place in 1822, when his stud being small for that and the three succeeding years, the produce did not realize more than about £500 a-year. In 1829, he had so far increased it that it produced £1400, and in 1832, £1600, but fell off again in two following years. Notwithstanding that his stud is supposed to have cost him a large sum annually, he is thought to have died in good circumstances, having been left a legacy of £40,000 by Lord Chedworth, and been many years the confidential steward of the Duke of Northumberland.

Richard Shepherd, a trainer on the northern turf, died at Langton Wold, after a short illness, aged 43. His first master was Old Sykes, a very excellent trainer, but an original of the first water; and under his able tuition, he soon showed promise of that skill in training for which he was afterwards distinguished.

Many are the droll stories told of his master, Sykes, but we will content ourselves with one anecdote, which sufficiently shows the character of the man. Being on a sick bed, he wrote a letter to an intimate crony, containing this advice, "I have done many in my time, Tommy, but never did you; don't be agen Merlin for the Leger."

Upon Sykes's retirement, Mr. Richard Watt, of Bishop Burton, then confederate with Mr. G. Crompton, appointed Shepherd to his situation, in which he had the good fortune to bring out, among others, the following well known and successful racers, viz: Abbot, Cæsar, Catiline, Lottery, Barefoot, Abron, Brutandorf, Memnon, Belzoni, &c., &c. Upon the dissolution of the confederacy which existed between Mr. Watt and Mr. Crompton, Shepherd commenced with an open stable, and trained, at different periods, the horses of Mr. Vansittart, Mr. Allen, Mr. Barrow, Mr. Gully, &c.

In the same month, Bartle Atkinson, for some time trainer to the well known Col. Mellish, and afterwards to the Duke of Leeds and Sir H. Tempest Vane, Bart., closed his mortal career, aged about 60. He was first brought into notice by Wm.
Peirse, the trainer, and while his weight permitted, was in much requisition as a jockey. Being compelled to relinquish his business as a jockey, he for some time turned hunting groom, until a handsome legacy, left him by his master, enabled him to commence as trainer with Col. Mellish. Atkinson’s best horses were Sancho and Staveley, (both winners of the St. Leger), Stockton, Eagle, Bedale, Smuggler, Streatham Lass, Mowbray, The Engraver, &c.

On the 29th of April, William Arnull, the well known jockey, died at Newmarket, in the 50th year of his age, from the effects of the gout, to which he had been a martyr for many years. His father was John Arnull, the jockey to the Prince of Wales towards the close of the last century, and who won the Derby, upon Sir Frank Standish’s Archduke, in 1799. Wm. Arnull learned the rudiments of his profession in the stables of Frank Neale, and soon brought himself into notice for his courage and the firmness of his seat. Much of his early success is to be attributed to Richard Boyce, the trainer of the large stud of Messrs. Shakespeare and Ladbroke, who lost no opportunity of promoting the interest of the young jockey, with whom he was connected by marriage, they having married two sisters. He won the Derby four times, viz.: on Hannibal in 1804, Cardinal Beaufort in 1805, Mr. Ladbroke’s Octavius in 1812, and in 1814 upon Blucher. In the great match between Sir Joshua and Filho da Puta, Ar-null rode the former with great skill. As a jockey, he is generally admitted to have been less noted as a scientific than as a bold and strong rider, perfectly capable, however, of doing justice to his horse, and the fullest confidence was ever reposed in his integrity. In private life his conduct was unexceptionable.

The next in the fatal list is Benjamin Smith, the well known northern jockey, who died at Littlethorpe, near Ripon, on the 27th of May. Smith commenced in the stables of old John Lowther, commonly known by the nickname of Black Jack, who trained horses on Bramham Moor, on the Tadcaster and Leeds road. His next masters were Charles Dawson of Richmond, and Old John Mangles, of Middleham, the latter being the first that mounted him as a jockey. Smith was not long in pushing himself into notice, and we soon after find him riding for the Earl of Strathmore, Sir Hedworth Williamson, Sir Thomas Gascoigne, and others, no longer numbered with the living. He won the St. Leger six times, viz: in the years 1803-8-9-11-16 and 24. In his early career, he met with an accident when riding for Lord Archibald Hamilton, afterwards Duke of Hamilton, which merits being recorded, from the great courage he displayed under most extraordinary circumstances. It occurred at the York August Meeting, in 1786, when he rode his Lordship's grey colt, Ironsides, and while in the act of starting, received a kick on the leg, from Mr. Garforth's gr. h. Brilliante. Notwithstanding this, Smith rode through the race, bringing his horse in the winner, but almost fainted in his saddle when it was over, was obliged to be carried to the scale; upon medical assistance being brought, it was found that the brave fellow had actually rode and won a four-mile race with a broken limb. He retired from the turf in 1826.

Mr. Wm. Beardsworth, the proprietor of the "Repository" at Birmingham, died in that town in September. His first appearance on the turf was in 1817, and for seven years he met with indifferent success. In 1830, he won the St. Leger, with Birmingham.

In the races for the 2,000 gs. stakes, and Grand Duke Michael stakes, he met and defeated Elis.

Elis, foaled in 1833, was got by Langar out of Olympia by Sir Oliver (son of Sir Peter); grandam Scotilla by Anvil; great grandam, Scota by Eclipse; great great grandam, Harmony by Herod, Rutilia by Blank, Regulus, Soreheels, Makeless out of the Darcy Royal Mare.

In 1835, this famous horse, as a two year old, won no less than £3,465 of public money. In 1836, he ran second to Bay Middleton for the 2,000 gs. stakes, being beaten only by a neck, after a most severe race, and which excited the greatest interest in all who beheld it. At Goodwood, he won the Drawing-room stakes and the Racing stakes, and ran second to Hornsea for the Goodwood cup. After winning the Lewes stakes, beating a large field, Elis completed his greatest victory, the Great St. Leger stakes at Doncaster, winning easily by a length and a half.

In the course of this year, his Majesty received a valuable addition to his stud at Hampton Court, by a present of four Arabians, from the Imam of Muscat. They consisted of two stallions and two mares, selected by that Eastern Prince, with the greatest care and at a costly price, from the best blood of the desert, and which proclaimed the purity of their descent, by their extraordinary and singular beauty. It is deeply to be regretted that, upon the sale of the royal Hampton Court stud, in 1837, these horses were purchased by foreign governments; as we thus lost the opportunity of ascertaining whether their stock, after several generations, would prove superior to that of our best native stallions in speed or bottom.

On the 13th of May, the Rev. Wm. Harvey, better known by the familiar name of "Parson Harvey," died suddenly, in the 68th year of his age, at his living, in Caldecot, in Bedfordshire.
The eccentricities of the "parson" are still too fresh in the memory of the "sporting public" to require particular mention; nor, indeed, are they of sufficient interest to command formal record. We are bound, however, in justice to observe, that his private character was never impugned.

On the 21st of May, an inquest was held at the Mitre Tavern, Edgeware Road, on the body of the Hon. Henry Augustus Berkeley Craven, who shot himself, at his residence in Connaught Terrace, on Thursday night, after his return from Epsom. It appeared from the evidence, that the unfortunate gentleman had retired to bed at an early hour, much depressed in spirits, and was found the following morning in the back parlour, dead, with a pistol in his hand, which he had discharged into his mouth. Several letters, addressed to different friends, and evidently written by him immediately before committing this fatal act, were found on his writing-table; their contents, however, did not appear in the evidence.

It was proved that the deceased had exhibited considerable excitement at Epsom races, on the day the Derby was run for; being heard to exclaim more than once during that race, "Jersey wins!" But no evidence was given that the melancholy event was caused by losses on the race, and the jury returned their verdict, "temporary mental derangement." The real cause, however, of this deplorable event, was the losses sustained by the unhappy gentleman, in backing the field against Lord Jersey's Bay Middleton, for the Derby; and which, it is believed, would have made him a defaulter to the extent of nearly £8,000 on the 24th, the "settling day" at Tattersall's; a position his too sensitive feeling of honour made him unable to face.

Mr. Berkeley Craven's melancholy fate was deeply deplored by all who knew him, whether as a man or a sportsman; in which latter capacity, he had ever evinced the strictest integrity. He was in his 60th year, was uncle to the present Lord Craven, and a member of the Jockey Club.

On the 17th of October, a Mr. Daniel rode a half-bred horse, in a match, for £50 a-side, from the Peacock Inn, Islington, to the Angel Inn, Northampton, a distance of sixty-six miles, against the Telegraph, four-horse coach. They started from the Peacock, at a quarter before six, and arrived at Northampton at a quarter before twelve, Mr. Daniel winning, with a minute and a half to spare, and neither horse nor rider being seriously fatigued.

On the 4th of November, within a fortnight after the death of his wife, and a victim to the same incurable complaint, consumption, Frank Boyce, the well known jockey, died at Newmarket, generally esteemed. He did not rank as first rate in his profession as a jockey, and was, moreover, very unlucky, it having scarcely ever been his lot to mount a first-rate horse. And on one occasion, when on the point of winning the Oaks, in 1834, on May-day, she fell down, and broke her neck; fortune seeming to grudge him even this "slice of the good things."

On the same day, the Duke of Portland's famous stallion, Tiresias, winner of the Derby in 1819, closed his mortal career at Welbeck. Tiresias, although an excellent racer, was not successful as a stallion.

The two great races at Epsom this year, from the inferiority of the horses which contested them, and the slowness of pace with which they were run, produced less interest in the sporting circles than had been known for many years. On the Tuesday preceding the Derby day, Phosphorus was so lame, that John Day declined to ride him for that great stake; and we believe Lord Berners insisted on his starting, regardless of the earnest remonstrances of his trainer. At starting, the betting was 7 to 2 against Caravan, the second horse, while 40 to 1 was in vain offered against Phosphorus; who, contrary to all expectation, came in a winner by half a length, Mango, afterwards winner of the St. Leger, being about sixth.
The Oaks was run at a miserable pace, affording an easy victory to Miss Letty, herself a very inferior mare, having run only fourth for the Claret stakes at the Catterick Bridge Meeting in the previous March, which stakes were won by Abraham Newland, afterwards second for the Great St. Leger.

This year's race for the St. Leger stakes at Doncaster, is more remarkable for the accidents that occurred in it, than from the pace at which it was run. The first of these befell Epirus, the favourite, the betting being 2 to 1 against him. Being on the inside of the course, at the dip of the hill, he was forced, from want of room, upon the bank of the ditch, and after running nearly forty yards, and with great difficulty keeping his legs, at last fell into the ditch, throwing his jockey, Wm. Scott, on to the course, when Prime Warden ran over him, and struck him with his hind leg, by which he sustained a severe fracture of the collar-bone.

At the four-mile starting post, a greyhound ran into the course, and after causing much alarm and confusion among the eight horses, then running well together, at last ran between Henriade's legs, and threw him down. His rider, John Day, however, luckily escaped without injury.

The practice of bringing dogs to races cannot be too severely animadverted upon, from the great risk they have but too frequently occasioned to human life; and we would earnestly recommend to the superintendents of the police, to whom the care of our principal race-courses is now committed, most rigidly to enforce the penalties provided by existing acts of parliament, against all persons so offending.

To return to the race, we have to observe that it was only with much "persuasion" that Mango was at length brought in a winner, Abraham Newfoundland being a good second. Scott and Day* each

* In connexion with this year's racing, we feel it due to that public-spirited gentleman, C. C. Greville, Esq., a member of the Jockey Club, to notice certain paragraphs contained in Craven's (a) report of the Newmarket First October Meeting, published in the November number of the Old Sporting Magazine. (b)

Before quoting these paragraphs, it is necessary to observe that Mr. C. C. Greville had entered his horse, Mango, for the Newmarket St. Leger stakes. The following are the paragraphs in question.

"This evening it was universally current, that Mango had broken down, and a guinea to a shilling was the course of exchange about him for the morrow's Leger. At a late hour, there was a report that he had been out after dusk upon the heath; but the result of it, supposing the fact to have been as stated, was kept for the service of all whom it might concern. To inquiries at the Rooms, the answer was, that he was not scratched for his Wednesday's engagement."

On the day of the race, the writer continues thus:—

"At the Rooms this morning, little was done but with reference to the next Derby. It was announced that Mango would go for the Leger, but among the select, this seemed to have been anticipated, and made no change in their looks or books; but very different was the case with those who had backed the field at a pony to a pound.

(a) The gentleman who writes under the signature of Craven, and who for some time reported the racing at Newmarket for the Old Sporting Magazine, is at present the editor of the "Sporting Review."

(b) See Old Sporting Magazine, vol. xvi, second series, pages 28, 29, and 31, the November number for 1837.
maintained, after the race, that he must have won, but for the accident.

Something intended to be received as an explanation of the impression sent abroad of that horse's being broken down, was given out; but I must be permitted to say, that it was the lamest part of the whole business in my estimate. The explanation was to the effect, that the trainer, Mr. Dilly (Mango is not now in the hands of Mr. Prince), who first pronounced the case a break-down, (that is to say, a violent, generally a fatal muscular injury) presently discovered that it was merely a bruise of the foot, or some trifle of the kind. When this discovery was effected, is not stated; but at whatever time it was so providentially made, no notice of the circumstance was issued to the public till it could no longer be kept, and when it was no longer useful to conceal it. Whether any hopes existed or not, that the bruise might allow the horse to start, surely it would have been as courteous to have stated that it merely was a bruise that confined him to his stable, and not a break-down, that precluded the possibility of his crossing the threshold of its door."

Upon these paragraphs appearing in print, Mr. Greville lost no time in calling their author to account; and after some correspondence, which it is not necessary to republish here, the case was referred to the stewards of the Jockey Club, when the result was, the following apology and explanation from Craven, which was published in the May number of the Old Sporting Magazine, vol. xvii, second series, page 7, and headed:

THE LATE NEWMAKET ST. LEGER.

"In consequence of the letter addressed to the stewards of the Jockey Club, in the December number of the Sporting Magazine, a meeting was appointed by them at Messrs Weatherby's, Oxendon Street, London, for the Monday following the Craven week, to investigate the statements which appeared in my account of the Newmarket St. Leger, in the First October Meeting, 1837. The correspondence which took place between Mr. Greville and myself has already made public the points at issue, viz: whether 20 to 1 were the odds at any time against Mango for that race, and whether any concealment
In the commencement of this eventful year, the public generally were astonished by the bankruptcy had been used as to the actual nature of the casualty which had befallen him immediately preceding it.”

After briefly referring to his justification published in the same number of the Old Sporting Magazine that contained his corre-

respondence with Mr. Greville, Craven thus proceeds:—

“ In proof of the odds against his horse never having been those quoted by me, Mr. Greville called Mr. Crockford and the newspaper reporter for Tattersall’s. Without alluding to the evidence of those parties, I admit, upon the faith of a letter read to me from Col. Peel, that I was deceived by my sources of information, that the price had not been current about Mango, though offered in a single instance, and I have to express my regret for the unintentional error into which I was betrayed, both to the public and to Mr. Greville.

“ Upon the second point, Mr. Dilly, Mr. Greville’s trainer, was called; who stated, that no kind of concealment had been practised as to the accident to Mango; and also, that he had not a shilling depending upon the race for the St. Leger. A letter was read from Lord

George Bentinck, to the effect that Mango was galloped by John

Day, on the Bunbury Mile, at three o’clock, on the afternoon preceding that event, in his Lordship’s presence, a circumstance of which every one at Newmarket might have availed himself; while testimony was borne by the Duke of Beaufort, Col. Anson, and Captain Rous, to the straightforward, honourable conduct of Mr. Greville in all that related, not only to this case, but to every other in which they had known him engaged. I have thus given the authorities by which Mr.

Greville disproved the statements in my notice of the Newmarket

St. Leger, because I would place the affair before the readers of this work, as it addressed itself to me. Having expressed my regret, I have done all that an honourable man can do towards those he may have unintentionally injured. If I have been brief in my notice of the meeting, it arises from want of space alone, and a desire not to permit the earliest opportunity to escape, of informing the public of the result of it.”

We have little to observe, after quoting this ample vindication of

Mr. Greville’s conduct throughout this affair, except that it ought to of Samuel Chifney, the jockey, although then, as for many years previously, in possession of more than double the income of any two others in the same calling. Those, however, who were acquainted with the style in which he lived, "his liveried servants, champagne dinners, and elegant equipages," must have foreseen this end to such boundless and misplaced expenditure. His bankruptcy gave rise to a curious question, which was decided in a court of law, and being of some importance to trainers, we have given a brief summary of the proceedings.

On Thursday, the 15th of June, in the Court of Review, Westminster, an issue relative to the bankruptcy of this well-known jockey was tried before a jury, under the following circumstances. About the 6th of April, a fiat of bankruptcy was taken out against Samuel Chifney. Several of the creditors immediately petitioned against it, alleging in their petitions, that he was no trader, and that he neither bought nor sold for profit; that he was merely a trainer for such gentlemen as employed him, and that, not being, in any legal sense, a dealer serve as a warning to writers connected with sporting literature, not lightly to bring such charges against noblemen and gentlemen, guardians of the best interests of the turf; there being ever too many of its enemies in the field to seize upon them with avidity, and use them as the best and readiest weapons to wound our national sports, by impeaching the honour of their best and noblest patrons.

for the means of his support, the bankruptcy could not be sustained. To these petitions, several affidavits had been put in reply, but the Court, considering them to be unsatisfactory, directed that the evidence should be adduced before a jury, of the facts stated in the bankrupt's answer.

The issue, then, to be tried, was this: first, was the bankrupt a livery stable-keeper, as he alleged himself to be; and secondly, was he a general dealer in hay and corn. Several witnesses were called, who deposed to Chifney's having occasionally sold hay and corn to Mr. Tebbold, to the Duke of Cleveland, Sir M. Wood, Mr. Thornhill, to his brother, William Chifney, and other persons. The bankrupt himself was also called, and examined by Mr. Petersdorf. He stated that he had been a livery stable-keeper for upwards of thirty years; he took in to livery at Newmarket the horses of respectable persons, and did not limit the number to racers, as he had carriage-horses, brood mares, hunters, &c. He bought and sold hay and corn to several persons, but kept no accounts, and never had any books, as he was no scholar. His wife occasionally made memorandums of what was bought or sold, upon a loose sheet of paper; but, not thinking they would be necessary after the accounts were settled, they were destroyed. For the last four or five years, he has been trainer to the Duke of Cleveland, but all his life before that, he was a livery stable-keeper.
Chifney was examined at considerable length by Mr. Humfrey, who then addressed the jury, and commented with great severity on the evidence of the bankrupt and his brother; and the jury, after consulting for about ten minutes, found the following verdict:—"We are unanimously of opinion that Samuel Chifney was not a horse-dealer, for he had no board over his stables, and only liveried horses which were sent him to be trained; and we are still more unanimously of opinion that he was not a dealer in hay and corn." The trial lasted the whole day.

In consequence of this verdict, Chifney suffered much inconvenience and loss of time by imprisonment, until he took the benefit of the Insolvent Act.

This was an unpropitious year for the interests of the turf, as it witnessed the breaking up of two of the most considerable racing-studs in the country, caused by the deeply lamented deaths of their owners.

First in importance, as in the affectionate sympathies of his subjects, was that of William IV. Although no sportsman himself, most probably from the fact of the bias of the pursuits of his youthful days having been directed towards the sea, his Majesty suffered no opportunity to escape, of promoting our national amusements of the turf and the chase. Under his munificent patronage, the royal stud, bequeathed to him by his brother, attained superior excellence, only, alas! to make its dissolution the more keenly felt by the nation after his death.

Nothing could exceed the general indignation of all parties throughout the kingdom, when it became publicly known that this noble appendage to royalty was to be broken up and sold off, for the benefit of foreigners. But, notwithstanding the remonstrances of members of both houses of the legislature, without distinction of political party, the sale was persevered in.

The following memorial on this subject, was presented to her Majesty's government, from the leading members of the Jockey Club.

"We, the undersigned, have heard, with great concern, of the probability of a dissolution of the royal stud at Hampton Court. We think that the great and permanent attraction of the annual stud sale, by producing competition, enhances the value of thorough-bred horses, and thus promotes the improvement of the breed throughout the kingdom. We trust, therefore, that her Majesty's government may be induced to advise the Queen to retain the establishment; and we have the less scruple in expressing this hope, because we are persuaded that, under judicious management, the proceeds of the sale would be found, upon an average, to cover all the expense of maintaining the stud.

The following are the particulars of the sale.

The splendid stud was sold by Messrs. Tattersall, in the paddocks at Hampton Court, on Wednesday, the 25th of October; and, as might have been expected, notwithstanding the weather was unfavourable in the early part of the day, drew together an immense concourse of "all sorts," including many influential noblemen and gentlemen connected with the turf, agents from France, Germany, Russia, and Prussia, and an immense collection of trainers, breeders, and others interested in the sale, or drawn thither by curiosity.

The young stock having been recently weaned, and some of them affected by the influenza, did not look well. The best of them, that out of Wings, had suffered so severely, as to go blind, his price being thereby reduced from three or four hundred to forty-six guineas. The stallions excited great interest. The first put up, was the Colonel, who was bought of the Hon. E. Petre, after winning the St Leger, for 4,000 gs.; he broke down at Ascot in 1831, after running a dead heat with Mouche. Actæon was bought of Lord Kelburne, for 1,000 gs. The Black Arabian was purchased for Germany, and the Bay for France. The two last colt foals, and the filly out of Young Espagnole, went abroad.

The general produce of the sale was as follows:—brood mares, 9,568 gs.; colt foals, 1,471 gs.; filly foals, 1,109 gs.; the stallions and two half-bred colts, 3,541 gs.; total, 15,692 gs. Most of the lots were purchased by commission; Baron Maltzhan acting for the government of Prussia, and M. Lupin from that of France.

In this year, Sir Mark Wood, Bart., closed his short but brilliant sporting career with his life, being only in the 42nd year of his age. After the timely sale of his estate and borough of Gatton, in Surrey, to Lord Monson for £180,000,* in 1829, Sir Mark resolved to devote himself to the pursuit of the turf, and for this purpose, took up his residence at Hare Park, about five miles from Newmarket. The late Baronet was more fortunate in the first four years of his connection with the turf than afterwards; during this period, he won the Oaks with Vespa, besides numerous prizes with his famous mares, Lucetta and Camarine.

The sale of Sir Mark Wood’s racing and breeding stud took place on Saturday the 21st of October, at Hare Park.

* The borough was afterwards disfranchised by the Reform Bill, by which Lord Monson is calculated to have lost £100,000 by his bargain.
From the following return it will be seen that the six brood mares fetched £3,525; the seven horses in training 1,198; the three two year olds 766; the five yearlings 2,235; and the four foals 1,181; total 8,905.

Camarine,* by Juniper out of a Rubens Mare, her dam Tippi-

* Camarine, foaled in 1828, bred by Lord Berners, of Didlington, Norfolk, was got by Juniper, son of Whiskey, her dam, foaled in 1819, by Rubens; grandam Tippitywitchet by Waxy—Hare by Sweetbriar—Justice—Chymist—South, sister to Sir James Lovther’s Babraham by Babraham—Golden Ball, son of Partner—Mr. Grisewood’s Bushy Molly by the Hampton Court Childers—Lord Halifax’s Bushy Molly by the Chesnut Litton Arabian—Lord Halifax’s Harmer Maze by King William’s Chillaby Barb—the Byerley Turk, &c, &c.

The deeds of Camarine are, perhaps, unequalled in the annals of turf history for excellence, as the following detail will show. Although she ran far neither the Derby nor Oaks, the winners of both stakes of her year met in her a signal defeat; and no question, had the winner of the St. Leger encountered her, the same fate would have been his doom.

On the 19th October, at Newmarket Second October Meeting, 1830, Camarine the first time of her starting ran second Lord Cleveland’s br. c, Marcus by Emilius for a £50 plate for two year olds, T. Y. C., beating sixteen others in the race.

At Newmarket Craven Meeting, 1831, rode by A. Pavis, she won £50 T. Y. C., beating very easily eight others. She was then sold to the late Sir M. Wood, who paid 79 sovs. ft. for her to Mr. Stonehewer’s b. c, Zany in a match for 100 sovs., D. M. At Newmarket July Meeting, rode by Robinson, she won a stakes of 19 sovs. each, eleven subscribers, T. Y. C., beating eight others. On Wednesday in the same meeting, rode by Robinson, she won £50, one mile, and a distance, beating two others easy. At Newmarket First October Meeting, rode by Chapple, she won the Trial stakes, A. F., beating Spaniel (the winner of the Derby) and three others in a canter. On Wednesday in the same meeting, rode by Chapple, she won the Newmarket St. Leger stakes, D. I., beating Oxygen (winner of the Oaks) and four others in a canter. At Newmarket Craven 1832, rode by Robinson, she won the Clarot Stakes, D. I., beating Circassian very easy. At the First Spring she received 140 ft. from Vestris and Rubini. At Ascot Heath rode by Robinson, she ran a dead heat with, and afterwards beat cleverly by two lengths, Mr. Chincley’s Rowton, 6 yrs. (the winner of the Doncaster St. Leger). The Sadler also started. At Newmarket First October she received 130 sovs. ft. and the Cup, from Lord Chesterfield’s Prior, 6 yrs., (the winner of the Derby). In the Second October Meeting, she challenged for the Whip, which challenge not being accepted, the Whip was resigned to her owner, Sir M. Wood. At Newmarket Houghton she received...

ft. from Margrave (the winner of the Doncaster St. Leger.) On Friday in the same meeting, rode by Robinson, carrying 8st. 5lb., she beat very easily by three lengths Mr. Stanley's Crutch, 8st. 7lb., for 200 sovs., T. Y. C., Sir Mark is said to have won 3000gs. upon the match. (This was Crutch's own length, he was allowed to be the fastest horse at Newmarket for the T. Y. C.) Same day, rode by Robinson, she won the Audley End Stakes, A. E. C., beating very easily Mazeppa, Hokee Pockee, Fang and Ludlow, giving them all a deal of weight. At Newmarket Craven, 1833, Camarine, rode by Robinson, won the Craven Stakes, A. H., beating in a canter Lady Charlotte and Fang; previous to the race there was a false start, all getting off except Lady Charlotte and Fang, when Camarine came in first in a canter, beating Rubini, Theban, Volage, and five others—4 to 1 on Camarine, after the false start 10 to 1 on her. At the First Spring Meeting she walked over for the King's Plate, R. C. Next day she walked over for £50, B. C. At Newmarket Second Spring, rode by Robinson, she won £50, B. C., beating Lord Tavistock's Taurus.

These were the whole of her performances.

* Lucetta, foaled in 1826, was bred by S. Batson, Esq., of Horseheath, near Cambridge; she was got by Reveller, (a son of Comus,) her dam Luss by Hedley, grandam Jessy, (Batchelor and Scrab's dam,) by Totteridge; great grandam Cracker, (Selina, Dolla-lolla, Gatty, &c.,'s dam,) by Highflyer; great great grandam Nutcracker, (Scorpion's dam,) by Matchem; great great great grandam Miss Starling, sister to the Ancaster Starling, by Starling out of Ringbone, (Barforth's dam,) by Partner—Lusty Thornton, by Mr. Croft's Bay Barb—Chesnut Thornton by Makeless—Old Thornton by Brimmer—Dicky Pierson—Burton Barb Mare, &c., &c.

The first time of her starting she ran for the Riddlesworth Stakes at Newmarket Craven 1829, but was last out of five, the race being won by Patron, betting even on Lucetta; a short time previous to the race, Sir M. Wood was induced to give 2000gs. for Lucetta. He and his party were heavy losers on the race.

At Epsom, Lucetta was brought out for the Oaks, but made but little running; the party had, however, a nice opportunity to get off their money. At the Newmarket First October, she began to show in her true form, by running a dead heat with her old companion, Seraph, for the Trial Stakes, beating three others; Mr. Batson and Sir Mark divided the stake. In the Second October, she at 8st. 2lb., rode by Buckle, beat Green Mantle, 8st. 6lb., in a canter, with odds as high as 5 to 1 against her; this match made a great deal of noise, many (losers of course) saying it was a do. She won altogether twenty-five times (including the Great Goodwood Stakes, two Gold Cups, and seven King's Plates), and received one compromise. Amount of her winnings £3,955.

On the 11th of November, in this year, died at his seat, Petworth, Sussex, the Earl of Egremont, in the 86th year of his age, during fifty years of which period, his Lordship was the owner of race-horses. In the good old days, when racing studs were kept by noblemen and gentlemen for the production of stock for their own service, and not merely as "a trade," the late Earl's breeding establishment at Petworth contained nearly seventy thorough-bred brood mares. His Lordship's stock was remarkable for their stoutness, and he was extremely partial to the blood of Gohanna. Among the late Earl's principal successes on the turf, during his lengthened career, it is sufficient to refer the reader to the years 1782, 1804-5-7-26, in each of which he won the Derby; and it is worthy of remark that he also won the Oaks exactly the same number of times, viz.: 1788-89-95, 1800-20.

In this year's obituary we also find the name of that veteran Newmarket trainer, James Edwards, who for nearly half a century occupied a conspicuous position on the turf. Edwards was first brought into notice by the late Richard Verner, Esq., the friend and confederate of the late Duke of Bedford, and in whose service he acquired a deserved reputation as a trainer. Upon the death of his patron, upwards of forty years ago, Edwards commenced on his own account, and was soon entrusted with the racing studs of Lord Villiers (the present Earl of Jersey) and Sir John Shelley.

It would greatly exceed our limits to enumerate the numerous winners brought to the post under Edwards' management, while acting as trainer to these studs. It is sufficient to state, that Sir John Shelley's famous horses, Phantom and Cedric, sire and son, both winners of the Derby, came out of his stable; and among those of Lord Jersey's we find the well-known names of Velure, Antar, Prince Paul, Leopoldine, Cressy, Glenartney, Middleton, Cobweb, Mameluke, Glencoe, Ibrahim, Bay Middleton, Achmet, &c., &c.

The form in which Edwards brought his horses to the post has been generally admitted to have been much superior to that accomplished by any other trainer; for he appeared to have acquired the enviable and difficult science, of bringing his horses into a condition, "not merely sufficient to win one race, but many."

He left behind him four sons, the eldest of whom carries on his father's business as a trainer, in the stables of the Old Palace at Newmarket. The other three are well-known jockies.

* Don John, the winner of the St. Leger in 1838, although described as got by Tramp or Waverley, to make his nomination valid, was really by the latter horse. His dam was put to both stallions, but Waverley was his sire, the mare having broke to Tramp, and several weeks expired before her being put to Waverley, to whose time the foal was dropped to a day. We have therefore added the amount of the St. Leger Stakes to the amount won by winners got by Waverley.
After the Newmarket Craven Meeting, we find the favourites for the Derby and Oaks occupying the following positions in the "betting market," the true "pulse of public opinion," viz.:—

pace,) and thus became favourite through the favour of "the strong party," who are ever ready to place Lord Jersey's horses in the front rank for the great Epsom stakes, nevertheless he could not have maintained his position but for the declared determination of his owner that he should not start again previous to the Derby.

Nothing daunted by Bamboo's defeat by Lord G. Bentinck's Grey Momus for the 2000 gs. stakes in the first Newmarket Spring Meeting, his noble owner, Lord Suffield, matched him against the Grey for 300 sovs., the weights and distance being the same as for the 2000 gs. stakes. This match was run on the last day of the meeting, and was a "second edition" of the previous defeat, Grey Momus winning cleverly by two lengths. For the 2000 gs. stakes, the odds were 6 to 4 against Bamboo, and 4 to 1 against Grey Momus. For the match, the Grey was the favourite at 5 to 2, and as many considered the first race had been falsely run, and consequently backed Bamboo for the match, much money is supposed to have changed hands on its decision.

The following may be quoted as about the correct state of the betting after the First Newmarket Spring Meeting, viz.: —

THE DERBY.

4 to 1 against Lord G. Bentinck's Grey Momus.
6 ,, 1 ,, Lord Jersey's Phoenix.
9 to 1 against Mr. H. Coombe’s Cobham.
12 ,, 1 ,, Lord G. Bentinck’s d’Egville.
14 ,, 1 ,, Col. Peel’s Ion.
20 ,, 1 ,, Lord Stradbroke’s Beggarman.
50 ,, 1 ,, Mr. Edward’s Drum Major.

THE OAKS.

7 to 1 against Lord Albemarle’s Barcarolle.
7 ,, 1 ,, Mr. Batson’s Vesperillo.
8 ,, 1 ,, Mr. E. Peel’s Ninny.
10 ,, 1 ,, Mr. Mostyn’s Brown Duchess.

With the exception of Cobham’s becoming first favourite, these odds did not much vary until the eventful day which was to set so many conflicting opinions at rest. On the morning of the Grand Derby Day, Lord G. Bentinck declared to win with Grey Momus; which announcement had the effect of immediately making the grey first favourite. On the breaking up of the betting-ring immediately previous to the race, the odds were about as follows, viz.: — 5 to 2 against Grey Momus, 7 to 2 against Cobham, 7 to 1 against Phoenix, 8 to 1 against d’Egville, 13 to 1 against Ion, and about the same odds against Young Rowton, 25 to 1 against Lady-bird, 30 to 1 against Albemarle, 33 to 1 against Amato, 40 to 1 each against Conservator and Chymist, 50 to 1 against Bullion, &c.

Nothing could exceed the sincere satisfaction with which the public generally hailed Sir Gilbert Heathcote’s success, a favour well deserved by that genuine sportsman, whose system has ever been "to run for public money, and never bet a shilling." Amato came in an easy winner by a length, Ion second, and Grey Momus a bad third. Mr. Coombes's "Crack," from which so much was expected, was nowhere, which gave rise to the usual surmises of "foul play, &c.," and led to proceedings between that gentleman and his trainer, Mr. Scott, which we shall presently notice.

The amount lost on this race was comparatively small, the principal winners being the Earl of Chesterfield, Messrs. S. Smith, Myers, Barnes, Stubbs, &c., which latter gentlemen reside in the vicinity of Sir G. Heathcote's training stables, and had no doubt received hints that his Derby horse was not a "bad catch" at the price he stood at in the ring. Some of the Stock Exchange worthies are also said to have made some little pickings on this event; while the principal sufferer among the legs was the well-known Mr. Crockford.

A sort of influenza, in the shape of coughs and inflammatory sore throats, having taken all the best mares, being nearly all the original favourites, out of the field, viz. :—Barcarolle, Ninny, Vesperillo, Glenara and Larnaca—the Oaks was left apparently to a very indifferent lot. Of these, Calisto was the favourite, the odds being 5 to 2 against her, 9 to 2 against Industry, 8 to 1 against Mecca, (the winner of the 1000 gs. stakes,) &c. Contrary to the general expectation, this event occasioned much betting, and ended in an excellent race, although the pace was certainly not first rate. Industry won cleverly by a length, Mecca being a close third to Calisto. The Ascot and Goodwood Meetings this year do not deserve any particular notice beyond what will be found in our calendar, with the exception, however, of the dispute with regard to the identity of Mr. Theobald's Loutherbourg, the winner of the Goodwood stakes in this year, which we shall presently take occasion to explain more fully.

Amato, a dark bay, about fifteen hands and a half, was got by Velocipede out of Jane Shore by Woeful, her dam Bella Donna by Seymour out of Gramarie by Sorcerer, dam by Sir Peter out of Deceit by Tandem, her dam Perdita by Herod out of Fair Forester by Sloe, her dam by Forester, grand-dam by Partner, Croft's Bay Barb, Makeless, Brimmer, Son of Dodsworth, Burton Barb Mare.

Industry was got by Priam out of Arachne by Filho-da-Puta, out of Treasure, her dam by Hyacinthus out of Flora by King Fergus, Atalanta by Matchem, Lass of the Mill by Oroonoko, Old Traveller, Miss Makeless by Young Greyhound, Old Partner, Woodcock, Croft's Bay Barb, Makeless, Brimmer, Dicky Pierson, Burton Barb Mare.

Doncaster races require a more particular notice, from the performances of Don John, by far the best three years old of his year. His performances as a two years old had, even after Epsom races, placed him next to Ion in the betting for the Doncaster St. Leger, and previous to the race he became first favourite, and nobly did he prove himself worthy of the confidence of his backers. The field for this year’s St. Leger consisted of but seven horses, the smallest that for upwards of twenty years had started for this great stake. Nothing could exceed the ease with which this splendid colt won the St. Leger, cantering in before the field six or seven lengths in advance, which distance he could evidently have increased to almost any extent.

Lord Chesterfield’s success in winning both the Oaks and St. Leger was hailed by the public with general satisfaction, from the deserved popularity of that nobleman as a sincere and generous patron of British field-sports.

Don John’s next race was for the Doncaster Gold cup, and here he again showed his superiority, by beating, with 3lb. extra, as winner of the St. Leger, Bee’s-wing, the best mare on the northern turf. Don John won this match cleverly by two lengths.

Don John, a bay horse, fifteen hands three inches high, was bred by Mr. Garforth in 1835, and sold when a foal to Mr. Ridsdale, at the sale of whose stud he was purchased by Lord Chesterfield for 140 gs. He was got by Tramp or Waverley out of a Comus mare, her dam Marciana by Stamford out of Marcia by Coriander, Faith by Pacolet, Atalanta by Matchem, Lass of the Mill by Oronooko, Old Traveller, Miss Makeless by Young Greyhound, Old Partner, Woodcock, Croft's Bay Barb, Makeless, Brimmer, Dicky Pierson, Burton Barb Mare.

We must not conclude our notice of Doncaster races without mentioning that Cobham, who notwithstanding his failure at Epsom, found backers at 16 to 1 on the day of the race, and started for the St. Leger, broke down near the distance, having run what is technically called very "dishonest." From all accounts, this horse did not possess by any means first rate speed, added to which he was a most uncertain runner.

Shortly after Epsom races, Mr. Harvey Coombe thought proper to remove his horse, Cobham, from Mr. Scott's stables; which occasioned a correspondence between them relating to the whole affair, which Scott afterwards published, as he stated, for his own justification with his employers and the public. As the two following letters sufficiently show the merits of this disagreement, we shall confine ourselves to them, without offering an opinion as to which of the parties was in the wrong.

In Bell's Life in London, published on the 15th of July, we find the following letter from Mr.
Coombe to the editor, being in reply to a previous communication from Scott.

Sir,

"I have read in your paper of Sunday last, a letter addressed by Mr. John Scott to the Marquis of Westminster and other gentlemen, his employers, together with some correspondence between Mr. John Scott and myself. Without adverting at present to the first part of that statement, I shall proceed at once to the race for the Derby stakes at Epsom, and the subsequent treatment of my horse. I believed him to be a superior animal; I was sanctioned in this belief by the public betting; and I was confirmed in it by the assurance of Mr. John Scott. I was very much disappointed with his running, which, at the time, I attributed to illness. Immediately after the races of the day were over, that is, on the Wednesday, I went to the stables at Leatherhead. The horse appeared to me to be suffering from distemper, and Mr. John Scott told me that also was his opinion. On my return from London on Thursday evening, and in my way home, I went again to the stables, when the horse appeared easier and better, though in my opinion far from well. I told Mr. John Scott that I had come from London, that I had seen Mr. Field, the veterinary surgeon, who had promised that he would attend to any appointment for that evening or the next morning, as I was desirous that he should see the horse, and give me his opinion. Mr. John Scott appointed the next morning (Friday) at eleven o'clock. I left the stables in the belief that the horse would remain quiet until Mr. Field's arrival.

"Mr. John Scott, in his letter to Lord Westminster, states that he told me of his intention to try the horse on Friday morning. This I most positively deny. It has repeatedly struck me, if that had been his intention, he ought to have apprised me of it, and that under the peculiar circumstances of the case, he ought to have been most anxious that I should have witnessed it. On the Friday, and at the time appointed by Mr. John Scott, I attended with Mr. Field, when we were told by Mr. John Scott that he had taken the horse out early that morning—that he had tried him with Bretby and Albemarle—that he had won the trial, beating Albemarle 60 or 100 yards—that he had proved him to be as good as at his former trial—and that he had bled and physicked him. I was astonished at this announcement, and was incapable of making any remark at the instant. Mr. John Scott subsequently stated that he had no doubt the horse had been poisoned previously to the Derby race. He could suspect nobody, and he wished me to send down a Bow Street officer.

VOL. II.

F F
"On Saturday I was in London, and there I was told that on Thursday morning, the day after the race, the horse had been sweated at the very time I believed him to be labouring under illness from the effect of the distemper, though it appears now to have been from the effect of the poison. I consider such treatment to be unexampled and most unjustifiable. I can never apply other epithets to such conduct. On Sunday, I heard from the foreman of Mr. John Scott, that his master was gone down to the north, and that my horse was to be taken away in a van on Thursday. I had previously determined to remove him from the charge of Mr. John Scott as soon as I could do it with safety to his health, and on Wednesday morning I took him home; being, as I maintain, justified in so doing by the above facts, and the want of confidence Mr. Scott expressed in the people who had charge of him.

"Mr. John Scott attempts to justify his conduct under an agreement which he states he has from me. Now this agreement, as he calls it, is, I believe, a letter I wrote him soon after he received the horse, (about Christmas, 1836), and which, if it be of the nature Mr. Scott pretends, why does he not publish it? I have no copy.

"In placing my horse in Mr. Scott's stable, I could never have intended to forego my right to know what I required regarding the management, though I might not claim to direct it; for whilst he was engaged in my name, I felt myself responsible to the public.

"I closed my correspondence with Mr. John Scott by stating that his threatened publication would not give the facts of the case. I feel confident that I am borne out in this assertion, and I now willingly confide the matter to the judgment of the public.

I am, &c., &c.,
H. COOMBE."

Cobham, Surrey, July 12, 1838.

To this letter Mr. Scott published the following reply in the same journal of the 22nd.

TO THE EDITOR OF BELL'S LIFE.

"Sir,

"I have a very short reply to make to Mr. Coombe's letter in your paper of Sunday last, respecting my treatment of the horse, Cobham. Mr. Coombe denies that I told him it was my intention to try the horse on Friday morning. I repeat what I have stated before, that I did tell Mr. Coombe that the horse should be tried again, for our mutual satisfaction, and that he did not object to it, or express any wish that I should defer it till after Mr. Field had seen him. I am surprised Mr. Coombe's memory should fail him on this point, as it was first discussed between us immediately after the Derby, and I said that if the horse went on well, and appeared no worse for the race, it would be most satisfactory to all parties to try him on Friday morning. With this understanding, I did not consider myself under any obligation to wait for Mr. Field to see him previously. The horse was apparently well on Friday morning, and I therefore tried him, as I had apprised Mr. Coombe I wished to do. I was aware that Mr. Coombe objected to my having bled and physicked the horse, but until the publication of his letter, I did not imagine he ever meant to say the horse was tried without his knowledge. I told Mr. Coombe, on the Thursday, that I had given the horse a gentle sweat that morning; that he was not the worse for it; that I fancied he appeared a little drowsy, but that he was in other respects well. I may have stated subsequently that I thought the horse must have had something done to him, as it was not possible to account for his running so badly in the race. I told Mr. Coombe also that I should be glad that a Bow Street officer should be sent down, if there was any chance of his discovering any unfair play.

"Mr. Coombe says I attempt to justify my conduct under an agreement I have from him. I do no such thing; I only intend to shew that under that agreement Mr. Coombe's own conduct was not justifiable. I send you a copy of that part of Mr.
Coome's letter to me, when he first sent the horse Cobham to my stables, which alludes to the agreement, and shall be much obliged to you to publish it. In conclusion, I have only to say that I treated the horse exactly as I should if he had been my own property, and in the manner that my experience in training led me to believe was the best under the circumstances of the case.

I have the honour to be, &c., &c.,

John Scott.

Liverpool, July 19, 1838

The following is the extract alluded to by Mr. Scott: "I send you the colt, who will, I hope, arrive safe. In regard to terms, you may recollect I told you I did not like training. You proposed to take him, pay all expenses, and give me half his winnings; you to engage him as you pleased, but the colt to be mine. I acceded to those terms."

Before offering our own remarks on this case, it is but fair that we should, in justice to Mr. Scott, give the opinions of the noblemen and gentlemen his employers, who after a perusal of the correspondence between him and Mr. Coome, drew up the following statement, which they authorized him to make public. "John Scott—We have read the statement of correspondence you have sent us, and we are perfectly satisfied that you have done all that is necessary for your justification, and having no reason to doubt your integrity, shall continue our countenance and support as heretofore.

"We are, &c.,

"Westminster. George Anson.
Chesterfield. John Bowes.
Wilton."

Without reference to the immediate case in point, we may safely pronounce on the authority of the facts, admitted in the preceding correspondence, that Mr. Coombe did not receive that deference and attention due to him as a gentleman and as a patron of the turf. This requires notice, as it has been, and is still, by no means an uncommon practice among the principal trainers, to assume a "freedom of speech and action" towards their employers, more especially towards those who may only place one or two horses occasionally under their management, which is entirely out of character between servant and master—the true position in which they stand. In the present instance, we find from Mr. Scott's own admission, that notwithstanding Mr. Coombe had signified his intention to bring down a veterinary surgeon to see his horse on Friday, on the same morning, previous to his arrival he sweats, bleeds and physics the horse; well knowing all the time, that the surgeon could not judge of him when in such a condition, and that consequently both he and Mr. Coombe would have had their journey for nothing.

Bearing in mind the great uncertainty, and consequently, the frequent inutility of private trials, we should feel inclined to doubt that Cobham ever afforded his backers any really plausible hopes of evincing superiority in the grand struggle. No small share of popularity may also with safety be ascribed to Mr. Coombe’s indirect influence, as the head of one of the principal brewing firms in the metropolis; as it is only natural to suppose that the numerous publicans who deal with him, and who, it is well known, as a class, bet considerably on all the grand racing events, would, from "esprit de corps," back their patron’s horse with more than common zeal. However this may have been, it was certainly not to be expected that Mr. Scott, whatever might have been his own ideas as to the horse’s real merit, should have undeceived his backers; still, on the other hand, we would not, by any means, be understood as insinuating that he took any improper advantage of such knowledge.

In consequence of an application of Lord Suffield, the owner of St. Luke, which horse ran second to Mr. Theobald’s Loutherbourg, the winner of the Goodwood stakes in this year, an inquiry into the identity of Loutherbourg was instituted by the Marquis of Exeter, as Steward of the last Goodwood races.
It appeared that, in the year 1834, Farrall, the trainer at Epsom, and who trained and managed Mr. Holbrook's horses, named a colt for a stake at Epsom, to be run for in 1836, with the following pedigree:—"Colt by Camel, out of Fancy by Phantom;" whereas his real pedigree was that in which he was entered at Goodwood, which was as follows:—"Br. c. Loutherbourg, by Mameluke, dam (foaled in 1828) by Smolensko, out of Miss Chance by Trinidad; three years old."

At the request of Lord Exeter, the inquiry was undertaken by Lords Jersey and Wharncliffe, who drew up a report unfavourable to Mr. Theobald's case, on the grounds of insufficiency of evidence, and that Mr. Theobald refused to allow them to examine his stud book containing the entries which concerned Mr. Holbrook's mares. Mr. Theobald, upon being asked by these noblemen why he had entered his horse for the Selling Plate at Goodwood, in 1837, under the second pedigree, replied, "that he did so, because he had been objected to at Epsom in the previous year, and that he knew he was got by Mameluke, and not by Camel, out of Fancy; and that Fancy was by Smolensko out of Miss Chance, &c., although she had run as being by Phantom out of Miss Skim, and as half sister to Fashion, which mare was so bred."

In consequence of this report, Lord Exeter directed the stakes to be withheld till he should have taken the opinion of the Jockey Club on the question of Racing Law arising out of it. At his request, a General Meeting of the Members of the Club was called at Newmarket in the Second October Meeting, and the following is an account of the proceedings on that occasion:—

"At the meeting of the Jockey Club, held at Newmarket on the 17th of October, when the Goodwood Stakes' case was brought forward, the question of Loutherbourg's pedigree was not taken into consideration, the Marquis of Exeter stating that he had taken upon himself, as Steward of Goodwood races, the responsibility of deciding that that horse started in 1837 under a false pedigree, upon the evidence adduced before Lords Jersey and Wharncliffe, which appeared in the Racing Calendar of the 11th of September. The question put by his Lordship for the opinion of the Club was only the following question of racing law:—

"Mr. Theobald's horse Loutherbourg having won the Goodwood Stakes this year, and the pedigree under which that horse started in 1837 having been ascertained to be a false pedigree, by an investigation which has taken place since the race, is Loutherbourg thereby disqualified, and the second horse, St. Luke, entitled to the stake?"

Upon which those members of the Club who had an interest in the race retired; the remaining Members chose the Duke of Portland as chairman, and after some discussion decided, by a majority of votes, that Loutherboug was not thereby disqualified.

In consequence of this decision, the stakes were paid to Mr. Theobald.

In the commencement of this year, Lord Berners, so long and generally known as "the Sporting Major Wilson of Newmarket," died in the 77th year of his age. His Lordship, who at the period of his death, was perhaps the oldest patron of the "Turf," of which, indeed, he was commonly styled the "Father," became latterly very eccentric, while the parsimonious ideas he contracted, would not allow him to keep up his stud in good form. The public were, therefore, not a little astonished when, in 1834, his horse Phosphorus, with a "queer leg," and 40 to 1 against him, being besides under the direction and management of a person of no experience as a trainer, carried off the Derby, to the great delight of his noble owner— it being the first time of his winning that great stake.

The following anecdote of his Lordship was published shortly after his death, and is by no means out of keeping with the character of a man of close habits:—

Being in a country town attending some races, and having immediate occasion for some cash, he called at a banking house, and requested money for his cheque upon his London banker, stating his name. "My Lord," answered the banker, "there is no need for you to draw upon London; we shall be happy to pay your draft upon ourselves, as we are in account with you for a considerable sum, which your Lordship lodged with us several years ago to your own credit."

On the 14th of May, the promising young Jockey, Samuel Day, second son of John Day, of Danebury, died in his 20th year, from the effects of injuries received by a fall while hunting. He was the youngest jockey that ever won the St. Leger, and was rapidly getting into the highest estimation and practice in his profession.

On the 2nd of April, Robert Robson, the well-known trainer, whose retirement from the turf we have previously noticed, died at Newmarket, aged 73. He commenced his prosperous career in 1793, with Sir Ferdinand Poole, for whom he trained Waxy, the winner of the Derby, which horse was afterwards the sire of three Derby winners, and as many winners of the Oaks, all trained by him. The Riddlesworth and the 2,000 and 1,000 guineas stakes fell, each, many times, to horses of his training; besides which, he could boast of having brought out seven winners of the Derby, and twelve winners of the Oaks. In the course of six years, he had, in his stable, the following mares, the most celebrated of their day, viz.:-Lord Grosvenor's Violante and Meteora, and the Duke of Grafton's Penelope, Parasol, and Pelisse, which five won upwards of a hundred engagements.

On Tuesday, the 10th of July, His Grace the Duke of Leeds expired at his residence in London, after only three days' illness, in the 63rd year of his age. The Northern Turf sustained a great loss by his death, as he had long been at once its brightest ornament and most liberal patron. His Grace commenced running horses in 1797, when Baron Conyers, and among the best of the long list of horses which passed through his hands, we may mention the names of Mowbray, Rasping, Mercutio, Blue Beard, Jenny Mills, Zohrab, &c. &c. His best horse, however, was the celebrated Octavian, the winner of the St. Leger, which he purchased when a foal, with its dam, from one of his own tenants, having taken a fancy to it while following its dam in the plough.

Lord Suffield being obliged to decline the turf, his racing stud was sold by Messrs. Tattersall, at their establishment, on the 13th of August, 1839, and fetched the following prices:—

In the first betting lists for the Derby of 1839, we find the name of Lord Jersey's Cæsar, brother to Bay Middleton, as first favourite; and after his winning the Riddlesworth and the Vacillation stakes in the Craven Meeting, for the former of which he was freely backed at 2 to 1, the odds quoted against him for the Derby were only 5 to 1. Besides Cæsar, the other horses quoted were, the Dey of Algiers by Pilgrim, an untried colt, at 11 to 1; Flambeau with 16 to 1; Tros with 22 to 1; Epidaurus, 33 to 1; Montreal, 35 to 1; Euclid by Emilius, winner of two sweepstakes of 50 sovs, &c., 40 to 1; Ilderim by Emilius or Ishmael, winner of Tuesday's Riddlesworth, 40 to 1; and Deception, with 66 to 1 against him.

The First Spring Meeting produced but little change in the relative position of these horses; for, notwithstanding Cæsar's defeat for the 2,000 gs. stakes by The Corsair, he still remained first favourite for the Derby, while The Corsair was only quoted, at first, as favourite in the list with 10 to 1 against him, and then, as third, with 8 to 1.

As the eventful day approached, Cæsar receded, and occupied only the third place, Sleight-of-hand and Euclid taking the first and second in the fluctuating scale of public opinion; while 1000 to 15 was laid against the horse destined to prove the winner, only a week before the races; which odds, however, were reduced to 25 to 1 before the start.

To the no small surprise and vexation of the "knowing ones," Bloomsbury came in winner of the Derby by a length, Deception second; no other horses being placed.

On the Friday after the race, Mr. Fulwar Craven, the owner of Deception, made an objection to the pedigree of Bloomsbury, and requested that the stakes might be withheld, in order to afford time for a proper investigation of the objection. To this the stewards assented; but on the following Tuesday, forwarded the following document to Messrs. Weatherby, as their decision of the matter.

"We, the Stewards of Epsom races, considering that although by rule 58, when the qualification of any horse is objected to after the race, the onus of proof lies upon the party objecting, yet that we are not thereby precluded from receiving proof of such qualification from the owner of the horse objected to, if he shall see fit to tender it, have this day, at the request of Mr. Ridsdale, examined the evidence tendered by him in support of the qualification of his horse Bloomsbury, and are of opinion that the entry in the calendar is correct, that Bloomsbury was qualified to start for the Derby, and that his owner is entitled to the stakes.

(Signed) Gilbert Heathcote,
J. De Teissier."

To Messrs. Weatherby.

The stakes, however, were not given up on the authority of this decision, as the winner of Deception had taken the precaution of serving a legal notice on the stakeholder not to pay them.

Leaving this matter for the present, we shall conclude our remarks on Epsom races, by a slight notice of the Oaks, which stakes were won by Deception by two lengths. The betting on this race, in the early part of the year, did not excite its usual interest, from none of the fillies entered for the Oaks having been favourites or winners of the 1,000 gs. and other stakes, the usual touch-stones of their merits.

We next come to Ascot races, which once more brought the Derby horses before the public. The first race we have occasion to refer to was for the Ascot stakes (handicap), won by Mr. Forth's filly by Merchant by half a length, after a splendid race, for which the public were indebted to the great judgment displayed by those who fixed the weights. The excellent riding of Little Bell, a mere child, only four stone, and who rode the winner, excited general wonder and admiration, and even attracted the notice of her Majesty, who was pleased to have the juvenile jockey brought before her after the race, and graciously presented him with a ten-pound note. It is said that, upon being asked his weight by the Queen, he answered, to the no small amusement of the royal circle, "Please, ma'am, master says as how I must never tell my weight."

This little bijou of a jockey was accidentally picked up by Mr. Forth, while riding a restive horse in Oxford Street. Mr. Forth had him apprenticed to him; but he soon afterwards bolted, but was recovered, upon a reward of £10 being offered by Mr. Forth, much after the method practised on the loss of a favourite lap-dog.

The next race, the Ascot Derby, caused some excitement, from Lords Lichfield and Exeter having each formally objected to Bloomsbury's pedigree, who was the favourite at 5 to 1. The race was won cleverly by Bloomsbury, by nearly a length, carrying 5lb. extra. His only other performance at this meeting, was for the 200 gs. sweepstakes, which he won in a canter from Mr. Forth's Sister to Hector by Priam, who was started only to claim.

The doings of the other Derby horses will be found in our calendar, and require little or no remark. Much of the interest invariably attached to the race for the gold cup was lost, by Grey Momus, the general favourite, having gone amiss. St. Francis, at starting for this stake, was the favourite, at even against the field, and is supposed to have lost the race by having made the running, which circumstance was taken advantage of by Robinson, with his usual quickness and tact, and who brought out Caravan at the critical moment, and succeeded in bringing him in a winner by a length.

John Day, on Corsair, came in first by two lengths, and in a canter, for the Windsor Castle stakes, but owing to Day having omitted to put the extra 5lb. on his horse, as winner of the 2,000 gs. stakes, Alderman Copeland's The Deputy was declared the winner.

Altogether, the meeting may be said to have gone off with better sport and a more distinguished and numerous attendance than had been witnessed at Ascot for many previous years.

The great success of Mr. Thornhill, as will be seen on reference to our calendar, afforded much satisfaction to all real well-wishers of the turf.

We have before taken occasion to give a description of the Grand Stand, which was opened to the public for the first time at this meeting.

At Goodwood, every arrangement had been made by the Duke of Richmond, to ensure the comfort and convenience of the public, besides catering for them an excellent list of sport; and his Grace's kind intentions were crowned with complete success. The comparative punctuality with which the sports of the day came off, was not the less praiseworthy, on account of its rarity in racing matters. Indeed, the length of time the public have to wait beyond the hour fixed upon in the advertisements and on the cards, for races to come off, has been long a crying evil on almost every English race-course. But, even here, the horses did not start till three quarters of an hour, at least, after the appointed time; and yet, this has been designated as great punctuality by the entire sporting press.

The following is a description of the leading events of this Meeting.

The Levant stakes.—At starting, the betting was 4 to 1 on Crucifix (J. Day), and it was soon evident that her opponents had no chance against her tremendous speed. She won in a canter by about two lengths; Lord Lichfield's Firefly, sister to Phosphorus, 8st. 3lb. (Wakefield), second; Lord Albemarle's ch. c. Exit by Vanish, 8st. 7lb. (E. Edwards), third.

The Drawing-room stakes.—Betting: 7 to 4 on Deception, 4 to 1 against Merganser, 6 to 1 against Nickleby, and 7 to 1 against Bosphorus.

Deception started with the lead, at a moderate pace, and kept it throughout, winning in a common canter by four lengths.

The Goodwood stakes.—Betting: 3 to 1 against Confusionee, 9 to 2 against The Lord Mayor, 12 to 1 against Romania, 15 to 1 against I-am-not-aware, 16 to 1 against Joannina, 16 to 1 against Barnacles, 22 to 1 against The Friar, 20 to 1 against Morella, 30 to 1 against Cornborough.

The horses started for this race in a tremendous storm, Wee Willie and Confusionee going off late and in bad places. Percy took up the running with Romania, which she kept for about half the distance, when Confusionee passed her and took up the running. Half way down the hill, Confusionee resigned in her turn to Morella; but passing the distance, Barnacles came up with her, shook her off at the stand, and won easily by two lengths.

There were many who affirmed that Confusionee would have won, but for the accident of her reins getting twisted at starting, through which she lost ground. Considering the heavy state of the course, the pace was excellent.
The Queen's plate of 100 gs.—Betting: 5 to 1 on Caravan. Till within half a mile from the post, the Wing's colt cut out the running, when Caravan passed him with great ease, and seemed to have it all his own way—indeed, so much so, that he was freely backed to win at 10 to 1. The finish, however, proved ticklish work for the layers of these odds; for, to their manifest consternation, Caravan began to flag; so much so, that at the stand, Beggarman was almost head and head with him; after a close struggle, Caravan won by a neck only.

During the morning of Thursday, the Cup day, a report had got abroad that Mr. Ferguson was resolved not to start his horse, Harkaway, unless those who had backed him to win would lay him £1500 to £500; and it soon appeared that Mr. Wakefield had been induced to lay his agent £600 to £200, as his share of his business. This bet was afterwards brought before the stewards for decision by Mr. Wakefield, who having gone fully into all the circumstances, declared it void, as being fraudulent.

The Molecombe stakes was the opening event of Thursday; the betting for which, before starting, was 4 to 1 on Crucifix, 6 to 1 against Defendant, and 7 to 1 against Iris. At starting, Defendant took the lead, Iris and Crucifix (7lb. extra) waiting on him until past the distance, when it appeared evident that "the Defendant would lose his cause;" for at this point, Crucifix shot by him, winning by a length with great ease, Defendant beating Iris by a neck only.

Crucifix, from her numerous engagements, naturally excited great interest in the betting circles. All parties admit that the mare has an uncommon rate of speed; and although many, looking at the extreme narrowness of her chest, which, indeed, is very remarkable, on that account deny that she possesses either the constitution to train on, or the stoutness to run on, if she should ever come in contact with a rival in speed, nevertheless, even these admit that her running at the last July Meeting at Newmarket showed anything rather than deficiency in stoutness. It must, at the same time, be borne in mind, that sometimes, as in her case, speed is stoutness, as it enables her to go along side of horses at a pace which, while it causes them to exert, perhaps, their utmost speed to live with her, being greatly within what she is capable of, allows her to husband both wind and strength for the final struggle.

The Goodwood Cup.—Betting: Even on Harkaway, 2 to 1 against Deception, who carried weight as winner of the Derby, to avoid disqualification, should the result of the Bloomsbury trial be in her favour; 8 to 1 against Doctor, 14 to 1 against Hyllus, 20 to 1 against Alemdar, 50 to 1 against Roe.

This was one of the fastest races on record, the time being 4 minutes 58 seconds. Harkaway had all his own way from the commencement, and won with great ease by two lengths; Hyllus beat Deception by one length for the second place; as for the rest, such was the tailing, that the judge was enabled to place the whole.

We will conclude our remarks on this meeting with the pedigree and performances of Harkaway, which splendid racer may with justice be named the "Irish Eclipse."

Harkaway is a powerful but coarse looking horse; so much so, indeed, that it has been often remarked, that he looks more like a cart horse than a racer. His colour is chesnut, with white on his face, and he has a large spavin. But it is when in action that the extraordinary powers of this horse are seen, and the apparent ease to himself with which he gallops, his vast stride and great rate of going, are truly wonderful.

Harkaway (1834) was got by Economist out of the Nabocklish mare, and comes from our best and purest blood on both sides. The Nabocklish mare was bred by Lord Cremorne in 1823, her dam, Miss Tooley, by Teddy-the-Grinder, out of Lady Jane, by Sir Peter.

Economist (1825) was got by Whisker, out of Floranthe, which mare was bred in Yorkshire in 1818, got by Octavian, her dam Caprice, by Anvil out of Madcap, by Eclipse, Blank, Blaze, &c. Harkaway started four times at the Curragh in his native country, in 1836, but only won once. In 1837, he ran eleven times and won ten; in 1838 he started eight times, and was only beaten twice; all these performances being at the Curragh.

Harkaway made his first appearance on the English turf at the Liverpool July Meeting in 1838, where he ran second to Lord Egiinton’s St. Bennett, for the Tradesmen’s Cup. At the same meeting, on the following day, he won the first heat for her Majesty’s Plate of 100 gs., ran second for the next, and “although (Qr. because) the betting was four to one on him for the third, was drawn.” At Goodwood, the same year, he carried off “the Cup,” in a canter; and, in the following August, won the Cleveland Cup at Wolverhampton, giving Mr. Bowes’s Epirus three pounds. At Doncaster, he beat Cardinal Puff, and three others, for Her Majesty’s Plate of 100 gs., but fell in running for the Heaton Park stakes in the same month, the betting being even, Harkaway against the field. For his performance in 1839, we refer our readers to our calendar for that year, in which we have given them in full.

Such was the opinion entertained by the sporting world of the conduct of the owner of this splendid animal, that Harkaway was driven with scorn from the Goodwood stakes, and from most, if not all the handicaps in which he appeared.

To return to the racing events of the year which call for remark. We next come to the Hampton races, and it is with regret that we find ourselves obliged, as honest historians, to prolong the remembrance of transactions such as the following. At these races, a well-known half-bred mare, called Pauline, came out for the Palace stakes, won the first heat with ease, started for the second, but reserved herself for the third. When she had started for the third, it became obvious that her racing powers were decidedly superior to those of all her opponents. With the emulation of an old practitioner, she pulled hard, shook her head, and tried to spring to the lead. Her rider held her with a powerful curb with difficulty; it required, indeed, his utmost exertions to prevent her winning, and he brought her in amidst the loudly expressed indignation of the spectators.

The Stewards of the Jockey Club met on Thursday, June 12, at Weatherby's for the purpose of investigating this foul transaction; but as the owner of Pauline did not make his appearance, the decision of the case was suspended. The following letter, however, was received on the part of Curwen.

7, Upper George Street, Bryanstone Square, June 12, 1839.

"Curwen, the rider of Pauline, was attacked by 'irritative fever,' arising from and out of that ill-judged and thoughtless circumstance on his part. Hence, with his authority, I take upon myself the task of endeavouring, if possible, to lessen the amount of blame which is necessarily attached to his name, by laying the whole transaction, as far as he is concerned, before the public.

"I understand, a week previous to the race, a verbal contract existed between the owner of Harold and the owner of Pauline, that each should claim for the other; such agreement was in force till the termination of the second heat. Just as Mr. Curwen was getting mounted for the third heat, the owner of Pauline gave notice to him that he was not to win. Mr. Curwen, without a moment's consideration, thoughtlessly gave in to this arrangement, and the result is known. Mr. Curwen, in vindication of his character, begs to state that, previous to the last heat, he stated publicly, and also individually, to Mr. George Payne, that the mare was to win if she could; that was his impression, conviction and determination, until he subsequently received instructions to the contrary, just at the moment of starting. I have his authority to state, that no man deplores more than himself having yielded to such an order. That he could have no aim or object relative to himself, is clear, and to the most suspicious mind, I fancy, sufficiently convincing, inasmuch that he defies his most inveterate calumniators to prove that he had one sixpence depending, or in expectation, on the issue of the race. If there has been any underhand roguery or robbery, as has been plainly enough stated, experienced on that occasion, he solemnly affirms that he was no participant therein. That he yielded too suddenly to orders, he confesses; and I, his medical attendant, with truth state, he has, and is sufficiently punished, both in mind and body. If I may be allowed to advance an opinion, his head, not his heart, was the cause of error. He also, when taxed at the moment with losing the race, maintained he did his best—he now retracts. But what man is there who, at all times, is alive to the sudden suggestions of moral impulse? Who, in the heat of dispute, readily allows he is wrong? This beautiful trait of the human character, comes only after the cool moments of reflection, and reason has resumed her throne, and issued commands that justice may be done to those whom the offender has injured.

"He is but young, but I fancy he has received a lesson, a practical reproof that he will carry to his grave."
"May I presume on the consideration of the gentlemen of the turf, since that he has made the amende honorable, that they will bury in oblivion his first, his only, and, from what I have seen, certainly, will be his last error on any such other occasion.

I am, &c.,
John Gray."

The following minute is further illustrative of the case:—

Monday, June 17.

"In consequence of the absence from town of the owner of Pauline, the stewards of Newmarket are unable to give a satisfactory decision on the Palace stakes run for at the late Hampton races. Mr. Theobald is expected in town to-day, and the stewards have been assured that he will immediately reply to their letter. Under these circumstances, the result must be postponed till Wednesday. The stewards recommend that the payment of bets to Mr. Theobald, as owner of Pauline, be suspended, but they have no power to prevent the settlement of other bets in the race, which may have been made by parties innocent of any intent to take unfair advantage.

(Signed) H. J. Rous,
Stradbrooke, (for Lord Chesterfield."

Pursuant to their notice of adjournment, the stewards of the Jockey Club met on Wednesday morning in Oxendon Street; but the owner of the mare was again "wanting." The stewards, therefore, agreed to withhold their decision till the following Monday, and directed letters to both the owner and jockey of Pauline, desiring them to forward to Messrs. Weatherby's office a written statement or defence, by that period.

The stewards of the Jockey Club met on Monday, June 24, and gave the following opinion:

"The stewards of the Jockey Club having taken into consideration the evidence in support of the charge against the owner and rider of Pauline in the race for the Palace stakes at Hampton, and the explanation given by the former, in which he admitted that he ordered his jockey to lose the race to prevent his mare being claimed, are of opinion that the whole proceeding was fraudulent and disgraceful, and that bets on this race, lost to Mr. Theobald or to Mr. Curwen should not be paid.

Beaufort,
Stradbrooke (for Lord Chesterfield.)
H. J. Rous."

June 24th.

Upon the publication of the above, Mr. Theobald addressed the following letter to the editor of the Morning Post.

"Sir,

"In the morning papers of Tuesday, is published the opinion of two of the Stewards of the Jockey Club, relative to the running of my mare, Pauline, for the Palace stakes at Hampton races, which, in justice to myself, I am compelled to answer.

"In the first place, they state that they have taken into consideration the evidence in support of the charge against the owner and rider of Pauline, and the explanation given by me at Messrs. Weatherby’s on Monday last, June 24, in which I admitted that I gave orders to my jockey, Mr. Curwen, not to win the race, to prevent my mare being claimed; but they strenuously avoid stating the circumstances under which I gave these orders, and the facts I brought forward to justify my conduct; which statement, I beg you will have the goodness to publish, as given by me in the presence of Lord Stradbroke and Captain Rous, who were the only members of the Jockey Club who attended; trusting that the public will fairly judge of my conduct in the transaction, and whether others would not have acted in a similar way, under similar circumstances.

"The following is a statement of the facts as they occurred:—

"Previous to the race, I had made an agreement with Mr. Munro to claim for each other, in the event of either horse winning; which I believe is a justifiable and customary proceeding upon the turf. Pauline, as you are aware, won the first heat, Harold the second, the mare being reserved for the third. When Mr. Curwen was mounted for the last heat, Mr. Munro told me, that should my horse win, I should certainly lose her, as she would be claimed. Upon hearing this, and finding such to be the case, I determined not to run the risk of losing her, and immediately gave Mr. Curwen orders to prevent the possibility of it. This I felt, under the circumstances, perfectly justified in doing, as I can happily declare that I was in no way interested in the race, except the feeling I had in saving my mare, and having a few paltry bets in backing her, and the chance of winning the stakes, which I determined to forego. They then state their opinion to be that the whole affair is fraudulent and disgraceful. This I defy them to prove. How can they prove it fraudulent, when I can most solemnly declare, on the oath of a gentleman, that neither I or Mr. Curwen won one shilling by the race, nor were, either directly or indirectly, benefited by the result? This, sir, is a clear statement of the motives under which I acted, and I trust that the public, on reading this declaration of facts, will exonerate me from any intent to deceive or take any fraudulent advantage.

"I was naturally much surprised to see the Duke of Beaufort's name annexed to the document, for he was not present at my interview, heard nothing of my defence, and has never had any communication with me on the subject. I have given orders to my solicitor to commence an action both against Lord Stradbrooke and Captain Rous, for defamation of character.

"By inserting the above in your valuable paper to-morrow, you will much oblige your obedient servant.

"P. Theobald."

4, Orchard Street, Portman Square,
June 26th

We need scarcely mention that the threatened action was never brought.

Before we proceed to our notice of Doncaster races, we must recur to the dispute between Mr. Ridsdale and Mr. F. Craven, with reference to the pedigree of Bloomsbury. This question was not set at rest until the month of August, Lord Lichfield having given in the following protest against the jurisdiction of the Jockey Club, upon its meeting at Messrs. Weatherby’s on the 8th of June, for the purpose of investigating Bloomsbury’s pedigree.

It is necessary previously to observe that Lord Lichfield, by objecting to Bloomsbury before his two races at Ascot, had thrown the onus of proving the correctness of his pedigree on Mr. Ridsdale, and had agreed to abide by the decision of the Jockey Club, to which the question was referred by the Stewards of Ascot Races.

TO THE STEWARDS OF ASCOT RACES.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,—In making inquiries into the disqualification of Bloomsbury for starting for the Derby stakes, and the sweepstakes of 200 sovs. at Ascot, I have found the greatest difficulty in obtaining information from parties who are fully capable of giving it, but who are unwilling to do so unless they are compelled to come forward by virtue of an authority which they dare not disobey. You are aware that the point to be decided does not involve any nice distinction of racing law, but is one purely of fact: and as neither you nor I possess the means of enforcing the attendance of a single witness, and as the chain of evidence, though so strong as to convince any reasonable mind, is yet of such a nature that the failure of a single link would destroy its effect, I feel convinced that it would be doing the greatest injustice to my case to try it before a tribunal so constituted. I am bound, therefore, by what is due to myself, as well as others, to object to your proceeding any further in this matter, which must necessarily be left to the decision of a court of law, where the attendance of such witnesses as I require can only be enforced. I beg, therefore, to offer this to you as a formal renunciation of any authority supposed to be derived from my acquiescence in your proceedings; and I hereby revoke and declare null and void any such act of mine; and I give you notice that, in consequence of the difficulties to which I have in this statement referred, I shall not offer before you any evidence whatsoever, and that I protest against your making any decision. I have the honor to be, with the greatest respect, my Lords and Gentlemen, your obedient servant,

St. James’s Square, June 7, 1839.

His Lordship produced the report of a charge by Chief Justice Tyndal, in another case, tried at Warwick in 1831. The stewards then proceeded to read the charge, in which it was distinctly laid down by that learned judge, that either party might withdraw his consent to an arbitration, and, in the event of such withdrawal previous to the hearing of the case, that the arbiters had no power to determine thereon. Under these circumstances, the stewards considered that no decision of theirs would be binding on the parties, and therefore that it was useless to proceed further in the inquiry.

The Earl of Lichfield consented, on the recommendation of the stewards, to pay all reasonable expenses incurred by Mr. Ridsdale, in bringing his witnesses for the contemplated investigation.

The charge of Chief Justice Tyndal, alluded to above, was in the case of a dispute about the Guy stakes at Warwick. For these stakes a horse belonging to the late Mr. Beardsworth reached the winning-post first; but the stakes were claimed by the owner of the second horse, (Cetus, belonging to the late Sir M. Wood), on the plea that Mr. Beardsworth's horse was in arrear for former stakes. Beardsworth, we believe, did not agree to the reference to the Jockey Club; and if so, the cases were not exactly analogous.

On Thursday, August 22, the Bloomsbury business came on for decision at Liverpool, before Baron Maule, and a special jury.

RIDSDALE V. CRAVEN.

Mr. Creswell stated the plaintiff's case, and having called his witnesses, made out his case as clear as possible. He incontestibly proved that Arcot Lass, the dam of Bloomsbury, was covered by Mulatto, and by no other stallion; and this direct evidence was collaterally supported by the testimony of others (particularly that of Messrs. Cattle and Harewood) in such a manner as to leave no doubt on the mind of the most sceptical.

Mr. Serjeant Wilde rose to address the jury, evidently embarrassed with the nature of the subject; he laboured hard and irksomely in his vocation, and at length proceeded to call his witnesses, the Duke of Richmond amongst the number. The testimony of his Grace went merely to show the customary and acknowledged laws and regulations of the turf, and had no direct reference to the pedigree of Bloomsbury. A number of other witnesses were called, who gave their evidence in a manner not calculated to carry conviction, but rather to excite suspicion, and it was at best irrelevant. The learned Serjeant was conscious of the weakness of his case as regarded oral testimony, and endeavoured to impress the jury with an idea of the importance of the authority of the Stud Book. In fact, Serjeant Wilde endeavoured to make the most of his very inferior materials.

The learned judge, like his brethren of the bar, felt evidently not at home in the business, and in his summing up made as few remarks as possible.

The jury, with sense and propriety, requested to be furnished with a copy of the Stud Book and Racing Calendar, and after having retired for about half an hour, returned a verdict for the plaintiff—the announcement of which was followed by a burst of applause.

It clearly appeared on the evidence, that all this litigation and ill-feeling, so detrimental to the best interests of the turf, originated in the carelessness from which this error had been allowed to creep into the Stud Book. What makes the Messrs. Weatherby appear less excusable in this case is, that they neglected to correct the mistake after they were made acquainted with it; they having allowed the pedigree of Bloomsbury to appear different in their two publications, the Stud Book and the Racing Calendar.

This brings us to the great northern meeting, which upon the whole, may be said to have derived additional public interest, from the fact of Bloomsbury being the first favourite for the St. Leger.

The great and increasing importance of comparatively new meetings has, of late years, turned some of the tide of popular favour from the North into other channels. The late agitation of the Bloomsbury question was, therefore, looked on as a perfect God-send, as tending to excite an interest in the St. Leger stakes—the great feature of the Doncaster Meeting—which they would not otherwise have possessed.

The Fitzwilliam stakes: Mr. Orde's b. m. Bee's-wing. Betting, 7 to 2 on Bee's-wing. Won in a canter by four lengths.

Handicap of 10 sovs.: Duke of Cleveland's b. c. Kremlin. Betting 6 to 4 on Kremlin. Won easy by one length and a half.

The Champagne stakes:
Mr. Blakelock’s ch. f. by Curtius; Lord Eglington’s b. c. Dr. Caius by Physician; Mr. Orde’s b. f. Queen Bee by Liverpool; Mr. Jaques’ f. Interlude by Physician; and the Duke of Cleveland’s br. c. Brother to Euclid by Emilius, also started, but were not placed.

Much betting took place on this race. At starting the odds were:—5 to 4 against Launcelot, 4 to 1 against Queen Bee, 5 to 1 against Brother to Euclid, and 7 to 1 against Interlude.

It now becomes our painful duty to account, as well as possible from the facts, for the great depression Bloomsbury undoubtedly underwent about this period. In addition to rumours which had gone abroad, that this crack horse was amiss, hints were thrown out most unsparingly, that Bloomsbury was to be sold for £3000, and in addition, one half of the stakes if he won. It is but justice to Mr. Ridsdale to say that on finding the ominous fluctuations which these rumours occasioned, he lost no time in giving them an instant and indignant denial. But this proved of no effect.

On the Monday evening, while Charles XII’s backers showed increased confidence, those of Bloomsbury thought only of hedging off all they could. Malvolio and Euclid became strong favourites, the former from the favourable results of a trial on the previous day, and which got whispered about; the latter being, after Bloomsbury, the "chosen representative of the late Derby horses."

The unexpected fineness of the weather on Tuesday, and the all-powerful attraction of the St. Leger, brought together multitudes from the largely populated towns of Sheffield, Leeds, Manchester, &c.

The racing commenced with the Cleveland stakes, which was won in a canter by Lord Eglin-ton’s ch. f. Opera, though the bets were 4 to 1 on Compensation.

On account of the unusual excitement caused by the St. Leger, the following summary of opinions and other information respecting the favourites, may, perhaps, not be altogether unacceptable to our general readers. Charles the Twelfth is a brown colt by Voltaire out of Wagtail (Laurel’s dam), by Prime Minister; her dam by Brille, out of Miss Grimsthorpe by Weasel; her dam Ancaster—dam Ancaster—Sampson—Oroonoko, &c. His height may be about sixteen hands, and he is certainly a horse of much power, being round-ribbed and having long quarters, with strong thighs and large hocks. His head and neck are the worst points about him. The following is, we believe, his only performance, viz:—At the last Liverpool races, he won the Trade Cup, carrying 6st. 6lb., beating a large field, which included, among others, Lord Eglin-ton’s St. Bennett,
Mr. Bowes' Epirus, Sir T. Stanley's Cowboy, Mr. Ramsey's Lanercost, Mr. Denham's Compensation, &c., &c.

Bloomsbury is a fine-ribbed horse, with good hips, large muscular thighs, and high hocks, and is generally said to be good tempered. His public running is well known, and it must not be forgotten that he had previously beaten Euclid for the Derby, that horse not being even placed. As far as outward appearance went, he seemed apparently in good form and condition.

Euclid is a fine showy horse, standing about fifteen hands and two inches, and appeared in the highest possible form and condition. He was got by Emilius out of Maria by Whisker; her dam by Hermes out of Velocipede by Pipator, Beatrice by Sir Peter.

The closing prices of the favourites at starting, as well as the "Babel of tongues" enabled us to collect, was 6 to 4 on Charles the Twelfth, with his backers anxious to do business; 6 to 1 against Bloomsbury, 10 to 1 against Malvolio, and 13 to 1 against Euclid.

A few minutes after four o'clock, the horses came to the post, and after one false start, the breathless multitude beheld them get away in excellent order.

Immediately after starting, Charles the Twelfth took up the running at a severe pace, followed by Bloomsbury, Euclid, the Dolphin, Bolus, Malvolio, and the Provost. In this order they continued till descending the hill, when Bloomsbury fell behind Malvolio and Provost, and seemed to have neither pace nor bottom left in him. In going over the deep ground near the Red-house, Charles was several lengths a-head of Euclid, the pace becoming every instant more severe, and the tailing in proportion; in short, the race was soon confined to Charles and Euclid, the rest resigning all pretensions. At the distance, Euclid, who had been gradually getting up to his opponent, went to his head, and looked very like a winner. At this moment, nothing could exceed the anxiety of the vast assemblage of spectators, who appeared entirely rapt up in the intense struggle taking place under their eyes.

In the run in, Euclid was several times driven against the rails by Charles, but, notwithstanding, managed to make it a dead heat. Altogether, this was a most interesting struggle; both horses appeared much distressed on coming in, and we cannot help thinking, that but for the mishap against the railings, Euclid would have been the winner. The time of running was three minutes and twenty-seven seconds.

The betting for the second heat opened at 6 to 4 on Charles, but closed at 5 to 4 on Euclid, from the large sums employed in hedging.

In this race, Conolly cantered in front for the first three quarters of a mile, Scott playing the same waiting game, being the reverse of his system of tactics in the first heat. At length, Euclid broke into strong running, Scott following at a steady rate, and in going over the deep ground, was several lengths behind, but after passing the Red-house, he soon made up his lost ground, and at the distance, the rivals once more found themselves "head to head." Another desperate struggle now ensued, but at the stand, Charles succeeded in getting his head in front, an advantage which he maintained to the post. This heat was run in three minutes and forty-five seconds.

Thursday being the Cup day, was necessarily attractive, and all who remained at Doncaster attended. For the Three Year-old stakes, Bloomsbury was again shamefully beaten by those who hitherto stood no chance with him. For the Cup, the betting was 6 to 5 on Charles, 5 to 3 against Bee's-wing, 6 to 1 against Lanercost, and 18 to 1 against Compensation. Charles the Twelfth started with the lead, but Lye's orders being to wait, he drew up his horse, and followed in the wake of Bee's-wing; Lanercost third. These positions were maintained, with little variation, till near the distance, when all three "joined issue," and made a good race till within the distance, when the mare gave in. At this moment, Lanercost looked so like winning, that large odds were vociferously offered against his Swedish Majesty; but at the stand, Lye made a desperate effort, and succeeded in landing his horse a winner, by a head.

On the 17th of January, in this year, John Lawrence, the well-known writer on horses and on sporting, died at his cottage, at Peckham, in Surrey, at the advanced age of 87, enjoying health and the perfect use of his faculties almost to the last moment. He was, at the period of his death, the oldest contributor to the Old Sporting Magazine, having commenced to write in it as early as the year 1799, and for many years his name was constantly before the public in its pages. His best work, the "History of the Horse," has passed through fourteen editions; besides which, he wrote and compiled several works of repute. He was a warm opponent to the system of "summering the hunter;" and he persisted in giving wrong pedigrees to several of the most famous race-horses of the last century; in both of which positions, it is scarcely necessary to observe, he was most egregiously in error. We must, however, do him the justice to add, that he was on all occasions an earnest advocate for the kind treatment of animals, especially the horse, and materially assisted the late Mr. Martin, M.P. for Galway, in his philanthropic exertions to prevent cruelty to the brute creation.

On the 6th of April, died in consequence of a fall from a horse, George Ezard, for many years managing groom in the stables of John Scott, the well known trainer, of Whitwall, near Malton.
On the 3rd of May died, the well known trainer and jockey, Wm. Pierse, of Richmond, Yorkshire, aged 74 years. His death, it appears, was the result of an accident, having taken, by mistake, an over dose of colchicum, to ward off an incipient attack of the gout, a complaint to which he had long been a martyr.

On the 5th of August, the celebrated northern jockey, John Jackson, died at Northallerton, in the 71st year of his age. In his day, he was considered inferior to none in the saddle, and enjoyed the patronage of the leading characters of the turf. He carried off the St. Leger oftener than ever fell to the lot of a jockey before or since, having won that great stake no less than eight times, viz: in 1791, on Mr. Hutchinson’s Young Traveller; in 1794, on Mr. Hutchinson’s Beningbrough; in 1796, on Mr. Cookson’s Ambrosio; in 1798, on Sir T. Gascoigne’s Symmetry; in 1805, on Mr. Mellish’s Staveley; in 1813, on Mr. Watts’ Altisidoro; in 1815, on Sir Wm. Maxwell’s Filho da Puta; and in 1822, on Mr. Petre’s Theodore. He retired from the turf in his 55th year, and at the time of his death, kept the Black Swan and St. Leger Hotel, in Northallerton.
CHAPTER XII.

So much has been written on the breeding and management of racing-stock, that even a bare reference to the systems recommended by the different writers, would almost carry us beyond our limits, without affording any interest to the reader; a few general remarks, therefore, is all we propose to offer.

Although the observation is perfectly just, that in every matter connected with the turf, no foresight or care can prevent its events from being, for the most part, decided by chance, nevertheless, the great prizes annually turned up in this lottery, tempt speculators to spare neither cost nor trouble to deserve success. These speculators may be classed under the following heads, viz: breeders of racing-stock who do not run horses, and those who do; those who, not being breeders themselves, run horses which they have purchased as yearlings or in training; and lastly, the "motley crew," who, having no horses of their own, busy themselves in observing and betting upon the performances of those belonging to others.

At present, we confine ourselves to the breeders, and before proceeding with our subject, venture to express an opinion that the owners of large studs actively engaged on the turf, would find it more to their advantage to breed, than to purchase their horses. It may, we are aware, be retorted on us, that the purchaser is certain of some return for his money, as he gets his colt or filly; while the breeder, after incurring a great expense on the mare, must sometimes be disappointed, by receiving no produce. Against this, we must bear in mind, how frequently the purchaser pays "too dear for his fiddle," and, indeed, as it often turns out, would have been a gainer by losing the purchase money, and sometimes considerably more, by the death of the animal on the first day of its coming into his possession.

It is true, that the same contingency may arise with the breeder who runs his own horses, but by no means to the same extent; for expenses incurred by a breeder in obtaining his racing-stock, cannot for one moment be compared with those of the purchaser, who has to begin with the price of a promising yearling, say from two to five hundred guineas;* or, should he prefer a two-year-old, of fashionable blood, and the winner or second in any of the great Spring two-year-old stakes, he will find himself out of pocket to the extent of from five to fifteen hundred guineas. In fact, nothing but the immense amount of stakes, as we have previously shown, for colts and fillies, can justify such a speculation.

The requisites necessary to render breeding profitable as a "business," are, judgment in selecting, and plenty of money at command to secure mares and stallions of the best blood; paddocks and necessary buildings on a suitable soil; and intelligent and trustworthy grooms to look after the establishment. With all these essentials in proper order, breeding, distinct from racing, cannot fail to pay, on the average, whether the foals are sold off at weaning time, or as yearlings.

The present race of stud-grooms and trainers, form a very different class of men from their predecessors, whom they far excel in point of respectability and intelligence, the result of education and the general diffusion of useful knowledge. Books written by those who have taken practical experience and nature for their guides, have been published for the service of breeders and trainers, who have both read and reflected on their contents. The breeder, taught by practical knowledge the bad effects of a humid atmosphere, and rank and succulent food, now provides warm sheds, small paddocks on a dry upland soil, and, as we shall presently show, plenty of corn for his young racing stock.

Having fixed on a dry, healthy situation, such as, for instance, the neighbourhood of Downs, and provided every convenience and accommodation for the mares and young stock, together with loose boxes, and a small exercise ground, well secured with a high and impervious fence for the stallions, the breeder's next care is to purchase brood mares and entire horses, particularly the latter, as experience has long confirmed the truth of the supposition, that in breeding a racer in his highest form and excellence, the stallion is of more importance than the mare. On consulting the racing calendar for the last fifty years, it will be seen that the produce of the highest bred and most successful mares by inferior stallions, has turned out comparatively worthless, while all our most celebrated winners have been got by the best entire horses. The breeder must, therefore, readily see from this, that it is the worst possible economy to purchase cheap stallions; and he should never grudge paying the difference between the price of a first-rate sire and an inferior one. Above all things, it is essential that both mares and stallions should be free from "constitutional infirmity;" by which term, is understood a tendency to defects in the wind, and of their legs and feet to give way in training.

The most eminent authorities on the sciences of human pathology, have agreed as to hereditability of certain diseases and defects, such as scrofula, gout, insanity, &c., and guided by their discoveries, able veterinarians, both foreign and British, have maintained that the horse is subject to the same law of nature, and they quote numerous cases in support of this theory. A modern writer on this important subject observes, with equal force and truth, that the Arabians, after having brought their breed of horses to the highest pitch of improvement of which they considered them capable, have preserved their chief perfections, namely, great endurance of fatigue, with highly organised matter, and natural soundness of limb, by restricting the use of stallions until approved of by a public inspector of them. Similar precautions are also taken in several European states.

Inattention to this important law of nature, has occasioned many an owner of race-horses large sacrifices of money, by breeding from favourite stallions and mares a progeny incapable of standing the severity of training, or which "goes amiss," before making the slightest return. On the other hand, the knowledge of this defect has frequently prevented breeders sending mares to stallions of otherwise good repute; instances of which it would be invidious to quote.

To the defects above mentioned, we must add badness of temper, which is a great drawback to a full and safe exercise of the powers of the racer, and which is often found to be hereditary.

In the choice of the brood mare, after the soundness of her constitution, and freedom from the above disqualification have been ascertained, the breeder should direct his attention to shape and substance, selecting an animal with a good roomy frame; what is termed a "fashionable" pedigree is also a requisite, in case her produce is to be brought to market previous to performing in public.

The racing capabilities of both mare and stallion, form an important consideration with the breeder in matching them; his object being to combine the good qualities of both sire and dam in the produce; as for example, should the forte of the mare lay in speed, then a stallion should be selected, remarkable for the stoutness of his running.

The system of breeding in-and-in with race-horses, has occasioned much difference of opinion, and given rise to much discussion among those most interested, and best capable of forming a judgment on the subject. The advocates in its favour, certainly appear to have the best of the argument, as they adduce many instances of its success, against the mere theory of its opponents. Among these instances are Flying Childers, and many of our best racers from his time up to the present day; the case also of George IV's favourite mare, Maria, being particularly dwelt on, her produce by Rubens and Soothsayer being worthless, while that by Waterloo and Rainbow, both closely allied to her, proved winners.

We think the following opinion of Mr. Hankey Smith, on this subject, particularly to the point. This intelligent writer, who resided a considerable period among the Arabs, and neglected no opportunity of obtaining information, remarks in his work called "Observations on Breeding for the Turf," that "colts bred in-and-in, show more blood in their heads, are of better form, are fit to start with fewer sweats than others; but when the breed is continued incestuous for three or four crosses, the animal degenerates."

It must be understood, however, that by breeding in-and-in, this writer does not mean breeding from brother and sister, or from a mare with her own sire, but "after the first cross, to return to original blood."

Contrary to the practice pursued with other sorts, blood mares are put to the horse very early in the year, the object being that their produce may be dropped as soon as possible in the commencement of a new year; as, according to the modern system of racing, they are obliged to be put "into work" before they are two years old.

It being our intention to avoid any such detail and explanations in this work as might have the effect of rendering it unfit for general perusal, we shall not dwell upon certain points, which may be found in a variety of cheap and useful publications; a selection of which should always be kept for reference in every breeding establishment.

The careful stud-groom will make it a point to pay the utmost personal attention to the comfort and safety of the sires and dams under his charge, leaving no important duty to the mercy of underlings.

According to the necessity enacted by the conditions of most important racing-stakes now annually the subject of competition, thorough-bred stock must be considered in training from the moment they first see the light. Too much care cannot be taken in sheltering the foals from the rain and weather, in warm sheds, constructed with rollers on the sides of the entrances, so as to prevent injury to the timid little animals as they rush in and out by the sides of their dams. These entrances, as well as the walls or hedges of the paddocks, should be free from any projection against which they might hurt themselves in their quick and giddy movements.

As they are required to display at the "starting-post" at two years old, in a form, and with powers, as nearly as possible approaching to maturity, their constitutions must be forced with the most generous nourishment; consequently we find that corn, in large quantities, is given to the young animal, in addition to the milk of the highly fed dam; and as the occasion may require, physic is administered by the careful stud-groom.

Young blood stock cannot be handled too soon, too carefully, or too gently; as their tempers, good or bad, in after life are almost invariably the result of their treatment at this period. We are, however, happy in being able to state, that the present system of breaking colts is conducted with less severity, and, therefore, with less danger to the animal, than formerly.

The less green food or carrots are given the better; indeed, the old outcry about "natural food," is now quite at an end, it being generally conceded, that the present racer is an "artificial animal, and best reared and brought to perfection by artificial means."

In describing what we consider should be the situation and the plan of building best suited for training stables, we are fully aware that these matters are but seldom placed at the discretion of trainers. Nevertheless, while such information, founded on the soundest authorities, may in some instances prove available to the fullest extent, it will also serve as a guide for such improvements in any existing establishments as may require them, and that the nature of the building will allow.

The principal points to be attended to in the choice of situation; are vicinity to the training ground, a dry and level foundation, and a southerly frontage; the latter being exceedingly exhilarating and healthy for horses. The building itself should be a centre with wings; the centre to consist of two stories, and to be furnished with a clock on its exterior. Care should be taken that the walls are of a sufficient substance to keep out the heat in summer and the cold in winter.

In the centre are to be placed the apartments for the trainer, or should he be so important a personage as to require a separate establishment of his own—of the head training groom. A large kitchen or common hall should also be provided for the boys; and rooms prepared with cupboards and presses, both furnished with good locks, to contain saddles, bridles, trial jackets and caps, spare clothes, sweaters, trusses, medicines, instruments, &c. besides "the library" of the establishment, which we may define to consist of the trial book, the stud-books, racing calendars, and works on training and the veterinary art.

In addition to these, and in order that it may not be said that these establishments form an exception to the progress of the times in this respect, we would recommend the purchase of many of those cheap and useful works so common at the present day, as a source of improvement and amusement to the stable lads in their idle hours.

In one of these apartments, the weighing machine may be placed; and it is highly necessary, that the strictest method and regularity should be observed in the arrangement of every thing, so that the minutest article may be forthcoming at a moment's notice.

The lower apartments should be amply provided with fire-places of large dimensions, as well for the common purposes of the establishment, as for drying the sweaters, when this cannot be done in the open air, and heating large boilers so that a constant and plentiful supply of hot water be always at hand for use in the stable.

The sleeping apartments of the boys should be over the wings, so that they may be enabled to hear what is passing underneath, and to summon or afford assistance in the stable, should this, as sometimes happens, be required in the night time.

The interior of the wings should be divided into compartments, each containing four stalls at most, (more being attended with inconvenience) and should be about twelve feet in height, and provided with small openings in the front wall, as close to the ceiling as possible, in order to retain a proper temperature and ventilation at all times.
In each compartment there should be two windows, with shutters or blinds outside; and as the exercise boys are in the habit of mounting the horses in the stable, care must be taken that the door-ways are of sufficient size to prevent accidents.

Each stall should be ten feet in length and six in breadth, and the divisions between every two ought to be nearly six feet high; in addition to which, the walls should be surrounded by a wainscoting, extending from the ground to about four feet from its surface.

Care must be taken that the rack and manger are so constructed and placed, and that the fastenings to the latter are of such a length and description, that they may secure the horse, beyond the power of injuring himself.

In every stable containing three or four stalls, there should be a bin to contain corn and beans, a hay crib, and racks and pegs for the light exercise saddles, bridle, &c., &c.

The stable floors should be paved with wood, which we are inclined to prefer to either flat paving stones, or bricks, notwithstanding the two latter have always been, and are now in general use. The "wooden pavement," quite a recent invention, and first laid down in Oxford Street by Mr. David Stead, is in sexagon shaped pieces, about four inches in depth, with the grain uppermost, and is so fluted as to prevent the horse slipping; while the least possible declivity in each stall and loose box serves to carry off the water.

One or two bails made of ash, which are far safer than chains, should be put up after every stable hour, and at night, so as to shut each horse into his stall.

Most of these remarks apply to the construction of loose boxes; only it should be borne in mind that as the horse, is nearly always loose in the latter, greater precaution is rendered necessary, to prevent his getting into mischief, and, therefore, the greatest care should be taken to secure the door, and not to leave any projection which might injure a horse while playing.

If possible, the stables, granary, &c., should be shut in by a high wall, within which, besides a yard for common purposes, a ring of sufficient diameter (150 to 200 feet would be ample,) with a smooth level surface, should be formed, for exercising the horses when necessary, instead of going on the usual training ground. Near this ring should be placed, in a good situation for sun and air, water troughs with covers, provided with locks; live fish also should be constantly kept in the troughs, in order to detect the presence of poison.

It was a saying of the late celebrated Dr. Bab- bington, that a knowledge of cookery should form no small portion of the acquirements of the physician, for the benefit of the sick; a remark which to a great extent applies also to the feeding of horses.

Too much attention cannot be paid by the careful trainer, to the feeding of his horses, both as regards the quality and quantity of the food, and its effect on the condition of the animal.

Few race horses, when in training, require more than seven pounds of hay during the twenty-four hours; and this should be the hard upland quality, and care should be taken to see that it possesses that fresh and agreeable smell, the sure criterion of its being well made and got in. Hay that is new, or has been heated in the rick, produces looseness, thirst, and other bad effects, and should, therefore, be carefully avoided. Clover hay of good quality is sometimes of benefit to light delicate horses, whose appetites require coaxing.

Oats being the principle food of horses in training, the trainer should pay particular attention to their quality, which should be the very best; he should carefully reject all such as appear light and not sweet, and such as have been subjected to the process of kiln-drying.

Beans, being of a heating and astringent nature, require to be given with caution, and never in too large a quantity. Horses that are good feeders seldom require them except on a journey, when perhaps the corn and hay are of inferior quality; a contingency which now seldom arises, with a horse travelling to run for any great stake, as sufficient corn is sent in the caravan which conveys him.

Horses of delicate constitutions and of an irritable temperament, are frequently too light of body, their bowels being easily relaxed, especially when alarmed. While the good feeder, or as Mr. Darvill calls him, the "craving" horse, will readily consume his twelve to fifteen quarts of oats during the day, the more weakly animal will only eat about ten, and will be found to derive benefit from beans judiciously administered. These, being chosen of the best quality, should he hulled and split, and about a double handful may be mixed in each feed of corn.

White peas, and even wheat, are sometimes mixed with the corn, to tempt the appetite of bad feeders with variety; but this practice is not by any means approved of by the best authorities we have consulted.

Chaff, cut only from the best hay, may be mixed with the oats of those horses who, feeding too voraciously, do not sufficiently grind their corn. Mr. Darvill recommends this to be done with race horses only when laying by in the winter; but as the habit of "bolting" their food must be productive of much injury at all times, we see no objection to its general practice, care being taken to regulate the quantity of hay accordingly.

Bran mashess are generally used in preparing horses for physic; they are also found very beneficial and cooling to horses of a costive and phlethoric habit of body during the winter, and may be given several times a week, mixed with the corn.

All strange messes and drinks, formerly so commonly in use in the training stables, and for particulars of which we refer our readers to the works of veterinarians published in the last century and a few in the early part of this, are now entirely exploded, being universally admitted to be as injurious to the horse as they are unnatural.

We now come to green food, which as the practice of turning out race horses has been generally discontinued, is now given in the stable. In 1828 we find Mr. Darvill deprecating the practice of turning out either race horses or hunters*—a doctrine now generally admitted and followed.

The descriptions of green food given to "stale"

* The following is the passage we have alluded to above: "When race horses are once taken into training, they should be kept in the stables both summer and winter until they have completed their running. If turned out for three or four months, as hunters usually are, (but which, by the bye, is very injudicious, as I have often known those with large carcasses come up with very bad, and sometimes incurable coughs,) they would doubtless get rid of the staleness arising from the work they have done. Their constitutions would no doubt be much refreshed by the beneficial effects of the pure air and the green food, provided the season were dry, and the paddocks not too large. Their legs and feet would be also much benefitted: the former from the gentle exercise they would give themselves in this natural state, and the latter from the soft surface of the ground. Yet these advantages are more than counter balanced by the mischief which at times results, &c." horses that require "soiling," are vetches, clover grass, tares and lucerne. These should be cut when beginning to blossom, being at that period tender and full of juice; and they should be brought from the field to the stable, perfectly fresh.

The green food may be mixed with hay or not, at the discretion of the trainer, with whom rests also the responsibility of regulating its use, according to the constitution, and the state of body, as arising from work of the horse; particularly watching its effect, and when occasion for physic may arise. In winter, delicate feeders, laying by, may have a few carrots with their corn; but we would not recommend their common use in the stable, as we are aware is sometimes the practice.

The best water for horses, is soft, fresh, and pure rain river, or pond water, and it is absolutely necessary, to preserve health in the stable, that a constant and ample supply should be on the premises. In order to effect this, when well or spring water is the only water to be obtained, it should be put into troughs, having some clay and chalk at the bottom, and softened before use, by exposure to the sun and air.

Such is the effect a change of water has been known to produce in a horse, that in some instances, even the loss of a great race has been with much show of reason ascribed to this cause alone; and careful trainers have even gone so far as to carry with a horse, on the eve of an important engagement, a supply of the water he has been accustomed to.

CHAPTER XIII.

Clothing forms an important article in the economy of the training stable, and is of the greatest utility to the trainer, as by its use in sweating his horses, he is enabled to reduce them to the necessary lightness of body, without running the risk of injuring their legs by very strong gallops, or their constitutions by physic; these latter being the only other means of effecting his object.

The clothing in general use in the racing stable is made of a sort of kersey check, of much finer and lighter quality than that which is used for hunters or other horses. It may be of whatever colour the owner may fancy; and the initials of his name are commonly embroidered on it.

The clothing may be divided into the following parts, viz. :—the sheet, breast-cloth, quarter-cloth, pad-cloth and hood; the latter piece being now, we believe, generally used to throw over the horse’s loins after he has been dressed, instead of what was formerly called the fillet cloth.

These different pieces are secured with proper rollers and strings; but as these and other details are now perfectly understood by all first-rate saddlers, it is not necessary to proceed with further details; a few general explanations and remarks is, therefore, all we propose to offer.

The clothes commonly called the sweaters are made of swan’s skin, a sort of woollen stuff. They consist of nearly the same pieces as those above-mentioned, and care should be taken that the sheet is of sufficient size to cover the whole body, shoulders and quarters of the horse, and to lap well over beneath his belly; for which purpose Mr. Darvill observes, that the centre part of it should be nearly two yards and a half long. According to the same authority, the breast-cloth or sweater should be made full three yards in length, and three quarters of a yard in breadth.

Judging from the prints of horses sweating, dated the middle of the last century, the hood was not then in use; nor are we aware when this most essential article of clothing was first introduced. Of those used in sweating, when only one hood is required, it should have ears to it; but in the case of more than one being required, the last only should have them, to enable the groom to put them on with greater facility. When the trainer deems it necessary to put additional clothing over the above, he should use old cloths for the purpose, having, of course, first seen that they are in proper repair, and that any necessary alterations have been made.

In the hottest part of summer, lighter clothing, made of serge, linen, or calico, may be used both in the stable and at exercise.

A proper supply of rollers, straps, boots, knee-caps, fetters, &c., should always be kept in the stable, in such order and place as to be serviceable at a moment's notice. A list of these, and of all the other articles of saddlery used in the racing-stable, can be at all times obtained at the principal saddlers at Newmarket, York, Doncaster and Epsom; and the trainer should make it his business to inquire, from time to time, at these places as to any inventions and improvements in these matters which may have sprung out of the present advanced state of practical science, so as to avail himself of them if really serviceable.

It is not our purpose, in offering these details and remarks to the reader, to have it for a moment supposed that we are laying down a complete system of training race-horses; as we are perfectly aware that it would require the whole space of one of these volumes to do this fully and efficiently. Feeling that a work of this nature might be considered incomplete were we to pass this subject entirely over, we flatter ourselves that, to the general reader, at least, these chapters may not be found altogether barren of interest, as yielding him some little insight into the training and management of the horse in his noblest form—that of the British, and as Dibdin aptly termed him, the "high-mettled racer." Should fuller information be desirable, we would recommend the works of Messrs. Nicholas Hankey Smith and Darvill, as perhaps the best; both these gentlemen having written after much practical acquaintance with their subject.

The next point to which we would direct the attention of our reader, is the use of physic in the training stable, not as administered to horses labouring under serious diseases, and which require the services of the veterinary surgeon, but in those cases which come directly into the province of the trainer.

The occasions we refer to, are when at the end of the autumn, and in the spring, the animal has to undergo a regular course of physic, or when in training, the state of his legs or any minor ailment, may require the use of medicine. On the conclusion of the racing season, after being kept for some months on dry and highly nourishing and stimulating food, and constantly in work on the hard soils of the different race-courses and exercising grounds, three or four doses of physic, administered with an interval of about ten days or a fortnight between each dose, will be found necessary to get rid of that worn and feverish state commonly known under the name of staleness, and will at the same time bring the horse’s legs, which will almost always then be found swollen and inflamed, to their proper size.

In the spring, too, before the animal is again put in training, a repetition of the same treatment is desirable, in order to carry off the grossness and humours he contracts when soiled. At these periods, it is not necessary that the physic should be of the same strength as that given in training; the preparation for it, however, is the same, that is to say, mashes of bran and oats for two or three days. The precautions and general treatment in use with horses of other descriptions when in physic, should be of course adopted with the racer, and are too well known to require more particular mention.

Horses in training are very liable to suffer from injuries in the legs, from blows while exercising, and other causes, and these cases require the utmost attention and skill on the part of the trainer. He must necessarily stop the horse from his work, as rest is indispensable to his cure. But this remedy is sometimes productive of, if possible, worse evils; for should the accident occur not long before the horse has to race, he may put up more flesh while idle than can be trained off again in sufficient time to bring him in proper condition.
to the post. It is now that the trainer calls in the aid of physic, and by its judicious use, keeps his horse from getting fat in his inside until his leg shall be sufficiently recovered to stand work. This, of course should be gradual; in fact, too much caution cannot be exercised in this respect, and to prevent any risk from the thoughtlessness or trickiness of boys, the trainer should himself watch his first gallops and sweats, taking care to put one of his best and most steady riders on the horse.

Every training stable should be provided with a medicine-chest, in which the following drugs, &c., should be kept; and to prevent accidents, as some of them are deadly poisons, the key should never be out of the possession of the trainer.

also Apothecary's weights, a measure for fluids, an apparatus for compounding medicines, &c. In addition to these, the following instruments and articles should be kept, viz:—fleam and blood stick; tooth-rasp, with a guard; seaton and curved needles; abscess lancet; docking machine; firing, searing, and budding irons, casting hobbles, improved ball iron; drencing horn, flannel for fomentations and poultices, woollen and linen bandages, tow, &c.

The exercise necessary to get a horse into proper wind and condition to race, may be thus classified, viz: walking exercise, galloping exercise, and sweating. The trainer having carefully prepared his horse, by physic, for the work necessary to get him into racing order, commences in the spring (regulating the period according to his engagements) with walking exercise.

But before we proceed to enter further upon this subject, we must observe that no precise rules for exercising the different descriptions of horses can be laid down; and in no one thing is the talent and experience of the trainer made more apparent than in his regulating the work according to the constitution, age, &c., of his horse, and any circumstances that may arise to occasion a departure from the usual practice, with regard to a particular horse.

We have before observed, that the training stables cannot be too close to the downs on which the horses are exercised, as they incur much risk in having to traverse any considerable distance on common roads, to reach the training ground. We would further recommend, as an additional precaution, that before going into the open country, they should be walked round the stable-yard, until their skittishness shall have evaporated, and they shall have become a little steady.

After getting his horse into a little better form, by walking exercise every morning and evening, for from half an hour to two hours, as may appear requisite, the training-groom commences giving them short gallops, increasing their length gradually, as his horse's condition and wind improve; taking care, however, to observe from day to day the manner in which they stand the work, and relaxing or adding to it accordingly. These gallops not only have the effect of preventing a horse from getting on to much flesh, and of improving his wind, but at the same time they teach him to stride, and to be active on his legs.

At exercise, the horses are divided into classes, the arranging of which depends principally on their age, but sometimes on their qualities,—such as stoutness or speed; each class having a horse to lead the gallops or sweats. When the pace is slow, a common hack is good enough for this sort of work; but should it be severe, or should the trainer wish to form some idea of the rate of going of any of his untried horses, then a horse of superior powers, and of known public running, is generally selected.

The length of gallops for different horses, vary from half a mile to a mile and a half; but the distances of three quarters of a mile and a mile and a quarter, are, we believe, most frequent.

The horses being, at length, in a proper state to undergo sweating, this severe exercise is to be given them from time to time. While some horses are so extremely delicate, and have to run such short lengths, that they may be brought to the post without sweating, others require this severe sort of exercise as often as three times a fortnight.

In addition to the important task of regulating the quantity of work according to age, constitution, &c., the trainer must observe the length of ground necessary to make them sweat well, and bear in mind that in the commencement of training, his principal object is to get the flesh off them. But as they are getting forward in their work, and approach the day of public trial on the race-course, it will become necessary to increase the rate of going sufficiently to bring them stout to pace.

The trainer, or in his absence a groom he can trust, having mounted a hack, accompanies the horses about to be sweated, and who are clothed in their sweaters, to the downs, giving on the way such directions and advice to the boys who have to ride, as they may require, more especially to the head lad who has to lead the gallop and regulate the pace. While the horses are taking the gallop, the trainer is occupied in watching their action and rate of going, making lads increase or diminish the latter, as may be necessary, and taking care to be where the horses are pulled up, so as to perceive the effect of the sweat on each horse.

The ground selected for this purpose should be at least two miles, and, if possible, considerably more, in circumference; and a place having on it in some parts one or more gradual ascents and descents, is preferable to a perfect level. According to Mr. Darvill, the proper length for a yearling to go a sweat is two miles; for a two-year-old, two miles and a half; a three-year-old, three miles or three miles and a half; a four-year-old, four miles or four and a half; while a five or six-year-old may, at times, sweat five miles. But, as we have before observed, these lengths are frequently altered from circumstances, as the trainer may deem requisite.

After the horses are pulled up, they should be allowed to stand for a minute or two, to recover their wind a little, and, as it is called, blow their noses. They should then be ridden gently to the rubbing-house, or should there not be one on the training-ground, to the stable, where the lads having turned them about in their stalls, dismount, and proceed to loosen their horses' girths, and unbuckle their boots. The next proceeding is to heap on the horses a quantity of additional clothing, which has the effect of immediately and considerably increasing their respiration, and causing them to break out into a violent sweat. This operation occupies from five minutes to a quarter of an hour, during which time, the horses may be refreshed by having their heads wiped and their legs rubbed.

When they are considered to have perspired sufficiently, the cloths are removed, and the boys proceed immediately to scrape the sweat off them with a wooden scraper, and well rub them down; after which they should be refreshed with a few mouthfuls of luke warm water, be warmly and drily clothed, and then again walked out until sufficiently cool to be dressed. During their absence from the stable, the stable-doors and windows may be thrown open, the beds set fair, &c.
CHAPTER XIV.

Training grounds—Trainers, their duties, &c.—Mr. Holcroft's diary of his early life as a stable-boy—Anecdotes, &c.

We have before observed that the training stables should be in the immediate vicinity of large open downs, as well for the benefit of the air as for the sake of a suitable training ground. The more extensive these downs, the better, as affording greater variety of ground, and preventing the necessity of constantly using the same portion; a practice which much injures the surface for galloping. When, however, this cannot be avoided, rolling, at a proper time, may be resorted to with advantage.

Mr. Darvill is of opinion, that it is not so much the hardness of the ground, as the uneven surface of it, that occasions horses to break down; and that small mole-hills and cart-ruts, are the principal causes of this injury. This is reasonable enough; but, at the same time, the bad effects of galloping horses over the hard, flinty soil which the principal training grounds of the south of England become in summer and autumn, are too well known to require further explanation.

We are, however, happy in being able to state that a remedy has been found which, to a great extent, if not completely, remedies this evil, and which has the advantage of being both cheaply and easily obtained. The material we allude to is common tan, which may be obtained from the tanner’s yard, sometimes for the trouble of carting, but always for a few shillings a load, and which, having been exposed for a few days to the action of the sun and air, should be spread over the turf, which should be afterwards rolled.

The original proprietor of the Hippodrome was the first who perceived and availed himself of the advantage of this dressing, having used it with the most complete success on his race-course at Notting Hill, the soil of which consists of clay which is baked excessively hard, and subject to crack in warm weather. It appears that when he first contemplated using tan, every person to whom he mentioned his intention, endeavoured to dissuade him, particularly the farmer to whom he had let the grazing of the Hippodrome; the objection urged being, that it would “entirely destroy the grass.” He, therefore, tried it on a small scale before venturing further.

did not hold, he used it in large quantities, and found that it produced the following advantageous results, viz: by acting as a network over the roots of the grass, it protected them and the surface of the soil from the sun, and prevented cracks. In the next place, it formed an elastic carpet, which completely prevented that jarring to horses' legs which had been previously much complained of; a relief which appeared perfectly astonishing to the rider coming from the common ground on to the soil thus prepared, and which may be said to give the sensation of riding on a Turkey carpet, as compared to a stone pavement. Lastly, it promoted the growth of the grass.

We believe that although the gentleman above alluded to has entirely retired from all concern in the Hippodrome, the use of tan is still continued there with success; and we feel confident that, before long, we shall see it used on many other race-courses and training-grounds, particularly those of a clayey or chalky soil, as is the case with nearly all those in the south of England.

Although a considerable portion of the downs in the vicinity of Newmarket have been enclosed for many years, enough remains to afford both race-courses and training-ground of great extent and variety. The horses standing at the west end of the town, are generally galloped and sweated on that part of the heath where the courses are situated; for which there is ample space along the flat by the side of the ditch, and home up Cambridge Hill, or over the flat, coming home round the turn of the lands on the lower side of the Beacon Course, without touching the running ground. The principal training-ground for the horses that stand at the east end of the town, is the Warren Hill, on the road leading to Bury.

Next to Newmarket, the downs of Epsom and Ascot may be said to be the principal training-grounds of the south of England. These, however, we have sufficiently described in our chapter on race-courses; we will, therefore, proceed to notice the principal training-grounds in the north, which, from their soft elastic surfaces, are better adapted for horses that are in strong work than those of the south.

Yorkshire contains the four best training-grounds in the north of England. Of these, the most extensive is Black Hamilton, on the high road leading from Thirsk to Helmsley. Notwithstanding that the soil is a strong, stiff clay, this ground gallops well,—the turf being very much intermixed with moss, which prevents it from becoming hard, and preserves it elastic even in the driest weather.

Langton Wolds, the next ground, is extensive, contains every variety of surface, and is principally covered with short heather, intermixed with moss, affording a fine springy turf for galloping.
These wolds, or downs, are divided into the training-ground and the race-course, by the high road leading from the town of Malton, the latter laying on the right of it; and the only drawback on them is their difficulty of access from the training-stables.

The Middleham Moors, divided into the upper and lower moor, is the third training-ground, and is open to the same objection as the Whitecliff Moors, on the score of not containing sufficient space; the upper moor contains the best galloping ground. The Whitecliff Moors, about two miles from the town of Richmond, are likewise divided into higher and lower moor. The latter is the race-course, and is within a mile from the town.

These may be said to form the principal training-grounds in England, as no first class horses are trained on any other. Of course we do not include in this sweeping clause, the training-grounds of noblemen and gentlemen who train at home. These are, however, strictly private, being in their own parks.

The best training-ground in Ireland, and perhaps in Europe, is the Curragh of Kildare, a fine open heath, of nearly five thousand acres of elastic turf. This we have sufficiently described in our chapter on race-courses.

In Scotland, by far the best ground is Gullane Links, to the east of Edinburgh, and close to the sea. It consists of a large tract of sandy soil, thickly covered with moss, and is moist and elastic in the driest part of the season. From the circumstance of its absorbing the heaviest rain in a few hours, it is equally available for galloping in the wettest weather.

Having touched, so far, on what suggested itself as an outline of training, we will now proceed, on the same plan, to treat of the qualifications, whether natural or acquired, necessary to form a good trainer.

In no calling of life is shrewdness and caution more required than in the trainer; in fact, without these requisites to start with, a man might as well attempt to scale the moon as to do any good on the turf. In addition to these indispensables, he should be of the strictest integrity; which, sooner or later, amply repays its possessor, by obtaining for him the confidence of his employer and the public. He must also be sober, that he may always have a clear head to study and attend to the various tempers and constitutions of the horses placed under his management, so as to do the best with them in training, and afterwards run them to the best advantage. Finally, he must be close to all the world, except his employer, concerning the secrets of the stable.

As the trainer is expected to know every thing relating to a race-horse and to the turf, his apprenticeship to his calling cannot begin too early in life. The knowledge we allude to, may be briefly defined under the following heads, which are not unworthy the attention of those noblemen and gentlemen on the turf, who may not be ashamed of learning.

In the first place, the trainer should acquire a competent knowledge of the Stud-Book, so as to be able to advise and guide his master in the purchase of brood mares, the selection of stallions, or even the purchase of young horses to run. This has reference to their selection with regard to pedigree, or what is commonly called fashionable or running blood.

From actual observation, in preference to theory, he should endeavour to make himself a good judge of the formation and action of a race-horse. The very nature of his calling of course gives him abundance of opportunity of doing this.

The racing calendar should be his constant study and companion; its laws, rules and regulations of racing, he should have at his fingers' ends, and he should know, with accuracy, the running of all the horses of the day, the length of the courses they run over, the weights they carried, and the opponents they defeated.

He should keep a strict account of the expenditure of the stable, with a view to economy, and to correct prices, and should endeavour to obtain as much knowledge as possible, to enable him to judge of the quality of every article which enters it, especially the corn, hay, &c.
In the stable, his whole energies should be devoted to the one great object of getting his horses in the best possible condition to bring to the post; and as this cannot be accomplished by following to the letter any system which has been laid down, he must call to his aid all that his own knowledge and experience, matured by constant and severe reflection, may suggest.

Among the divisions of practical training which especially require the attention of the trainer, the trials of race-horses require particular notice; for unless the greatest care be taken in selecting a horse of known public running, and in proper condition at the time, the nicest skill in regulating the weights, according to age, fixing the distance, &c., and putting up the best jockeys, will not prevent the trainer and his employer from being misled by the result.

We cannot do better than quote the words of a well-known writer on sporting literature, with reference to this subject.—Speaking of trials, he says, "There is no contrivance by which more money can be thrown away, than in the so-called trials. The trial horse is often stale, and with hardly a leg to stand on, at high weights, and perhaps on a course which does not suit him, it brought out against a young one, in the highest possible train, fresh, and ready to fly out of his skin, and a light weight on his back. The old one, whether it be his forte or not, must make the play; and, as naturally may be expected, the young one runs up to the old one like a shot, as the trainers say; he is accordingly backed heavily, and on the day, gets a comfortable beating, to the very great surprise of those in the secret. This is not always the case, but I fear too frequently it is. Another evil in the usual mode of trying is, that boys, not jockeys, are put up in trials, by way of greater secrecy: as if a trial ever yet was kept quite a secret.*"

* The following anecdote, for which we are indebted to the New Sporting Magazine (vol. xiv, p. 171), is an admirable illustration of the last remark, and, at the same time, a specimen of turf stratagem. "About a fortnight before the St. Leger, 1836, a trial took place in one of the leading stables in the north, and the 'favourite of the summer' having been found wanting, another goodly animal was placed in the enviable position of 'first favourite.' The result of the trial was duly forwarded to a gentleman in town of great influence in the sporting circles, and was supposed to be known to him only. This gentleman happened to be rather late in his attendance at Tattersal's, and upon his arrival there, how great was his surprise to find that Mr. G—x had, by some means or other, profited largely by the knowledge of the trial, thereby preventing the party getting on at all. The gentleman having written to the 'Brothers,' and informed them of this untoward event, it was upon strict, though secret inquiry, found that the trial had become known through a lad in the stable, a relation of a celebrated trainer at Newmarket, who was in some degree connected with Mr. G—x's turf speculations. And now, the cure. A day was fixed for another trial between the horses, and unknown to any of the lads, the winner of the previous trial was made to carry a heavy saddle about 14lb. weight. This just reversed the thing. As soon as the post allowed, the news of this trial reached Newmarket, and was duly forwarded to the neighbourhood of the Regent's Park, where Mr. G—x resides. It only remains to state, that the party connected with the northern stable completely succeeded in the manœuvre; Mr. G—x got quit of his fancied 'good Numerous are the cases in point, which might be cited in support of the truth of this position; but the recent one with Mr. Harvey Coombe’s Cobham, is still fresh in the memory of the public. This horse, which rose to be first favourite for the Derby, entirely from his success in private trials against horses of established repute, could not run a yard in public.

We have given the methods of private trials, and the regulations concerning them, laid down by the Jockey Club, in a previous part of this work; all, therefore, that remains for us to add on this point, is to recommend to the trainer the careful perusal of that part of Mr. Darvill’s excellent work on racing, which treats on this subject, and in which he will find proper directions for trying horses of every age, and of every description of temper and constitution.

In addition to mere works of reference on racing, and the best works on the training and management of race-horses, the trainer should furnish himself with the works of our best veterinarians, and make himself thoroughly conversant with the different symptoms, modes of treatment, remedies, &c., which they explain and recommend. A catalogue of such works can be readily obtained and safe things,’ and in return, was pretty freely dosed with a kind of gladiator sauce. In the sequel, however, these doings did not pay for the trouble, as the ‘favourite’ came off but second best.”
from any of the booksellers who deal in works on sporting subjects, and we would advise that the following works should, at all events, form part of the selection, viz:—The works of Mr. John Lawrence; Mr. Percival's Elementary Lectures on the Veterinary Art, his Anatomy of the Horse, and his Hippopathology; the Veterinarian, by Messrs. Percival and Youatt, from its commencement in 1828, up to the present day; Mr. James Turner's work on the Navicular Disease; and all the works of Mr. D. P. Blaine, who is, perhaps, without exception, the first veterinary surgeon of the present day.

If, in addition to a careful study of these and other similar works, our trainer could find time to attend some lectures, with dissections, either at the College in London, or elsewhere, he would find himself a considerable gainer by the time so bestowed.

In conclusion, we must mention as certainly not the least important of a trainer's duties, that by every consideration, whether a strict regard for his employer's interest, or in a moral point of view, he is bound to make the lads under him as happy as circumstances will permit, and to take every opportunity of instructing them as to the duties of their situation.

When we consider that nearly all our best trainers and jockeys began life as lads in a racing-stable, the manner of living, and everything connected with these youths becomes a matter of interest. We shall, therefore, make no apology to our readers for giving the extracts with which we shall conclude this chapter. We must, however, previously give a list of the principal trainers of the present day, and, as correctly as our memory serves us, the names of their most influential employers.

Born of obscure parents, Holcroft's childhood was passed in such utter poverty, that even the situation of stable-boy was deemed an important change for the better; and although that part of his diary which describes his life in this humble situation may be looked upon by many of his readers with contempt, to the sportsman it must ever be full of interest; for not only does it afford a complete picture of the order of the day of that era in the racing stables, but at the same time gives us a complete insight into the life and characteristics of the stable-boy, from the pen of one in every way qualified for the purpose.

During the races at Nottingham in 1760, Holcroft's youthful mind was strongly taken with the excitement of these amusements. In his own words:—

"These different incidents had raised a strong desire in my mind to be better acquainted with a subject that had given to me, and as I thought to every body, so much emotion, and I began to consider what might be done. At that time I was rather a burthen to my father than a help. I believe I assisted him a little in mending of shoes, but my asthma, till very lately, as well as my youth, had prevented my making much progress. At one time, indeed, I had been persuaded, though much against my will, to become apprentice to a stocking weaver; but this, I forget how, broke off, at which I was very glad; I did not like stocking-weaving.

"The question now occurred to me, whether it would be possible for me to procure the place of a stable-boy, at Newmarket. I was at this time, in point of clothing, in a very mean, not to say ragged condition, and in other respects, was not much better off. The stable-boys I saw at Nottingham, were healthy, clean, well fed, well clothed, and remarkable rather for their impudence, than seeming to live under any kind of fear or hardship. Except their impudence, I liked every thing else I saw about them; and concluded, that if I could obtain so high a situation as this, I should be very fortunate.

"These reflections preyed so heavily upon my mind, that I was at last induced to mention them to my father; and he having a predilection for every thing belonging to a horse, and, therefore, a high respect for this, the noblest state of that animal's existence, fell into my views, and only feared that they could not be accomplished. He resolved, however, that trial should be made; and, after inquiring among the jockeys, thought it advisable to apply to a Mr. Woodcock, who kept stables four or five miles from Newmarket, where he trained horses entrusted to his care. Mr. Woodcock examined me, asked my age, found I was light of weight, and, as I suppose, liking the answers I gave to his questions, to our very great joy, agreed to take me upon trial.

"In the course of my life, there have been several changes that, each in their turn, greatly affected my spirits, and gave me advantages far beyond what I had ever before enjoyed. Of these gradual elevations, this was the first. I should now be somebody. I should be entrusted with the management of one of that race of creatures that were the most admired and beloved by me: I should be well clothed, wear a livery, which would shew I belonged to one of the great: I should not only have food enough, but of that kind which was highly relishing to the appetite of youth; and, in addition to all this, should receive an annual stipend. I jumped, as it were, from a precarious and mean existence, where I could not tell what worse might happen, into a permanent and agreeable employment. I had only to learn to ride, and perform the duties of a stable-boy, of which I had no fear, for I supposed them far less difficult than I afterwards found they were.

"The grooms that resided at, and in the vicinity of, this famed town, are all, more or less, acquainted with each other; and on Mr. Woodcock's recommendation, I was put under the care of Jack Clarke, who lived with Captain Vernon, he having luckily a led horse, which I was to mount.

"The day of parting with my father, and of beginning our journey, was an anxious one. He could not too emphatically repeat the few well-meant precepts he had so often given me, nor I too earnestly assure him, I would love and obey him all my life. Notwithstanding his severity, he was passionately fond of me, my heart entered into the same feelings, and there was great and unfeigned affection between us.

"As is the custom in travelling with trained horses, we set off early, and walked without hurry. When we stopped to breakfast, the plenty of excellent cold beef, bread and cheese, with the best table beer, and as much as we pleased, gave me a foretaste of the fortunate change I had made. This, indeed, exceeded my utmost expectations—I was entering upon a new existence—was delighted, full of hope and cheerful alacrity, yet too timid to be presumptuous."

The next extract is full of interest; nothing can be more touching than language in which the author contrasts his life as a stable-boy with that he had previously led.

"There are few trades or professions, each of which has not an uniform mode of life peculiar to it, subject only to such slight variations as are incidental and temporary. This observation is particularly applicable to the life of a stable-boy.

"All the boys in the stable rise at the same hour, from half-past two in spring, to between four and five in the depth of winter. The horses hear them when they awaken each other, and neigh, to denote their eagerness to be fed. Being dressed, the boy begins with carefully clearing out the manger, and giving a feed of oats, which he is obliged no less carefully to sift. He then proceeds to dress the litter, that is, to shake the bed on which the horse has been laying, remove whatever is wet or unclean, and keep the remaining straw in the stable for another time. The whole stables are then thoroughly swept, the few places for fresh air are kept open, the great heat of the stable gradually cooled, and the horse, having ended his first feed, is roughly cleaned and dressed. In about half an hour after they begin, or a little better, the horses have been rubbed down, and re-clothed, saddled, each turned in his stall, then bridled, mounted, and the whole string goes out to morning exercise; he that leads being the first: for each boy knows his place.

"Except by accident, the race-horse never trots. He must either walk or gallop; and in exercise, even when it is the hardest, the gallop begins slowly and gradually, and increases till the horse is nearly at full speed. When he has gallopped half a mile, the boy begins to push him forward, and without relaxation for another half mile. This is at the period when the horses are in full exercise, to which they come by degrees. The boy that can best regulate these degrees among those of light weight, is generally chosen to lead the gallop; that is, he goes first out of the stable, and first returns.

"In the time of long exercise, this is the first brushing gallop. A brushing gallop signifies that the horses are nearly at full speed before it is over, and it is commonly made at last rather up hill. Having all pulled up, the horses stand some two or three minutes, and recover their wind; they then leisurely descend the hill, and take a long walk; after which they are brought to water. But in this, as in every thing else, (at least as soon as long exercise begins) every thing given to them is measured. The boy counts the number of times the horse swallows when he drinks, and allows him to take no more gulps than the groom orders, the fewest in the hardest exercise, and one horse more or less than another, according to the judgment of the groom. After watering, a gentle gallop is taken, and after that another walk of considerable length; to which succeeds the second and last brushing gallop, which is by far the most severe. When it is over, another pause thoroughly to recover their wind is allowed them, their last walk is begun, the limits of which are prescribed, and it ends in directing their ride homewards.

"The morning's exercise often extends to four hours, and the evening's to much about the same time. Being once in the stable, each lad begins his labour. He leads the horse into his stall, ties him up, rubs down his legs with straw, takes off his saddle and body clothes; curries him carefully, then with both curry-comb and brush, never leaves him till he has thoroughly cleaned his skin, so that neither spot nor wet, nor any appearance of neglect, may be seen about him. The horse is then reclothed, and suffered to repose for some time, which is first employed in gratifying his hunger, and recovering from his weariness. All this is performed, and the stables are once more shut up, about nine o'clock.

"Accustomed to this life, the boys are very little overcome by fatigue, except that early in the morning they may be drowsy. I have sometimes fallen slightly asleep at the beginning of the first brushing gallop. But if they are not weary, they are hungry, and they make themselves ample amends for all they have done. Nothing perhaps can exceed the enjoyment of a stable-boy's breakfast: what, then, may be said of mine, who had so long been used to suffer hunger, and so seldom found the means of satisfying it? Our breakfast consisted of new milk, or milk porridge, then the cold meat of the preceding day, most exquisite Gloucester cheese, fine white bread, and concluded with plentiful draughts of table beer. All this did not overload the stomach, or in the least deprive me of my youthful activity, except, that like others, I might sometimes take a nap for an hour, after so small a portion of sleep.

"For my own part, so total and striking was the change which had taken place in my situation, that I could not but feel it very sensibly. I was more conscious of it than most boys would have been, and, therefore, not a little satisfied. The former part of my life had most of it been spent in turmoil, and often in singular wretchedness. I had been exposed to every want, every weariness, and every occasion of despondency, except that such poor sufferers become reconciled to, and almost insensible of suffering, and boyhood and beggary are fortunately not prone to despond. Happy had been the meal where I had enough; rich to me was the rag that kept me warm; and heavenly the pillow, no matter what, or how hard, on which I could lay my head to sleep. Now I was warmly clothed, nay, gorgeously, for I was proud of my new livery, and never suspected there was disgrace in it; I fed voluptuously, not a prince on earth perhaps with half the appetite, and never-failing relish; and instead of being obliged to drag through the dirt after the most sluggish, obstinate, and despised among our animals, I was mounted on the noblest that the earth contains, had him under my care, and was borne by him over hill and dale, far outstripping the wings of the wind. Was not this a change, such as might excite reflection even in the mind of a boy?"

The following description of what the author calls the "grandeur of alarm" in the horse, is particularly happy.

"I once saw an instance of what may be called the grandeur of alarm in a horse. In winter, during short exercise, I was returning one evening, on the back of a hunter, that was put in training for the hunter's plate. There had been some little rain, and the channel, always dry in summer, was then a small brook. As I must have rubbed his legs dry if wetted, I gave him the rein, and made him leap the brook, which he understood as a challenge for play, and beginning to gambol, after a few antics he reared very high, and plunging forward with great force, alighted with his fore-feet on the edge of a deep gravel-pit, half filled with water, so near that a very few inches further he must have gone headlong down. His first astonishment and fear were so great, that he stood for some time breathless and motionless: then gradually recollecting himself, his back became curved, his ears erect, his hind and fore leg in a position for sudden retreat; his nostrils from an inward snort, burst into one loud expression of horror; and rearing on his hind legs, he turned short round, expressing all the terrors he had felt by the utmost violence of plunging, kicking, and other bodily exertions. I was not quite so much frightened as he had been, but I was heartily glad, when he became quiet again, that the accident had been no worse. The only little misfortune I had was the loss of my cap, and being obliged to ride back some way in order to recover it."

"When I had been about a year and a half at Newmarket, Captain Vernon thought proper to match him (Forester) against Elephant, a horse belonging to Sir Jennison Shafto, whom, by the bye, I saw ride this famous match. Forester, therefore, had been taken up, and kept in training a sufficient time to qualify him to run this match; but it was evident that his legs and feet were far from being in that sound state which such an exertion required, so that we concluded that he must be beaten, for the reputation of Elephant arose out of his power rather than his speed.

"Either I mistake, or the match was a four mile heat over the straight course; and the abilities of Forester were such, that he passed the flat, and ascended the hill as far as the distance post, nose to nose with Elephant; so that John Watson, who rode him, began to conceive hopes. Between this and the chair, Elephant, in consequence of hard whipping, got some little way before him, while Forester exerted every possible power to recover, at least, his lost equality; till finding all his efforts ineffectual, he made one sudden spring, and caught Elephant by the under jaw, which he griped so violently as to hold him back; nor was it without the utmost difficulty that he could be forced to quit his hold. Poor Forester, he lost; but he lost most honourably! Every experienced groom, we were told, thought it a most extraordinary circumstance. John Watson declared he had never in his life been more surprised by the behaviour of a horse."

The practice of racing introduced, at a very early period, that peculiar seat and method of riding practised by our jockies with a grace and science unknown in other countries. For many years after racing became a favourite amusement with our nobility and gentry, and while the sport may be said to have been in its infancy, the usual riders employed were the grooms of the training stables, part of whose routine of duty this was considered, and who thought themselves fortunate if, in addition to their wages, their success on any occasion was rewarded with a small gratuity by their master.

In many sporting pictures of the events of the days of the "olden time," we find portraits introduced of these riders both, in their every-day dress, which was generally the livery of their master, and in the costume in which they rode, which latter had by no means the appropriate and elegant appearance of that worn by the dandy jockies of the present day.*

We have no positive data to enable us to ascertain with certainty the period when the business of riding races was first raised by the patronage of the sporting public to the rank of a separate profession; but we are strongly inclined to suppose that this took place very early in the eighteenth century, at least, partially; for we must admit that many noblemen and gentlemen continued the old practice of employing their grooms for a considerable period. The first mention we find of regular jockies is, in the description of the well-known match between Merlin and a favourite horse of Old Frampton's, which took place about the year 1720, which we have before noticed. The jockies who figured on this occasion were "one Hesletine, of Newmarket, and Jerome Hare, of Cold-Kirby, near Hambleton." Of these jockies little is known to us but their names, and that little we have given in the previous part of this work. It proves that they would have been deemed regular "barbarians" by the "satin jacketed gentlemen" of the present day. Their system of riding was noted for its cruelty in the administration of punishment; a practice now happily almost exploded; and as the races in those days were run over long distances, strength was probably more prized than skill in the old jockies, at least those who figured previous to the time of the elder Chifney, Buckle, Fitzpatrick, &c.

* Some idea may be formed of the figure of fun these riders must have presented from the following directions, given about a century back, as to their racing costume, by the author of the "Gentleman's Recreation." "Your clothes," says this authority, "should be of coloured silk, or of white Holland, as being very advantageous to the spectator. Your waistcoat and drawers (we presume by this, that indispensable article of modern costume, breeches, was not then in fashion, at least, with jockies) must be made close to your body, and on your head a little cap tied on. Let your boots be gartered up fast, and your spurs must be of good metal."

Of these ancient worthies of the saddle, the principal whose names have reached our times are, John Crofts, James Cranburn, Stephen Jefferson, Thomas Dean, Thomas Pattison, John South, Edward Bambrough, Match'em Tims, Leonard

The life of a jockey being one of almost continued hardship, privation and danger, it is not to be wondered at that men are rather impelled to adopt this calling from the force of circumstances than as a matter of choice. We find, accordingly, that these men, as indeed is still the case with nearly all those of the present day, began life as stable-boys; from which (the lowest round in fortune's ladder), they raised themselves by personal fitness, and by acquiring the necessary skill, to the highest point of their ambition, viz.: that of a first-rate Newmarket, or northern jockey.

* This famous jockey is said to have ridden eleven races over the Beacon Course in one day; making with the distance he must have ridden on his hack, at least eighty-eight miles in the saddle. There is a fine portrait of this rider, mounted on the well-known little horse, Gimcrack, painted by Stubbs.

† John Mangle, nick-named "Crying Jackey," from his not unfrequent custom of shedding tears when beaten in a race.
are the droll stories told of some of these originals, hinging on this little failing, joined to their professional peculiarities. We must content ourselves with the two following anecdotes, which sufficiently illustrate our meaning.

Although so splendid a rider over a race-course, Old Chifney by no means shone as a workman across a country; nor did he ever willingly incur any risk when following the hounds; and his timidity in the field being well known to his royal master, the Prince of Wales, his Royal Highness often derived much amusement by practising on it. Keeping his eye on his nervous jockey, the Prince would delight in ordering him to lead the way over difficult places; an unpleasant distinction which Chifney could not well decline, and many a tumble was the result of his obedience. On one occasion, having received a terrible purl over a fence, which the prince had sent him over to explore, the unlucky jockey, as soon as he could find breath, bawled out the following report, to the no small amusement of his royal master and his attendants:—“A ditch, by G—d! your Royal Highness, and I have nearly broken my neck, and if you try it, yours will be quite done for.”

even in the last days of his riding, we have before mentioned in this work. The incident we allude to occurred about twelve years ago, when he rode Dramatist at York, for the King's Hundred. This horse took it into his head to bolt, when leading a few lengths, and stopping quite suddenly at a large wet drain, threw poor Clift with great force on his back at the bottom of it, where the peculiar form of the place held him fast, and prevented his extricating himself. A lady, who happened to be near this secluded spot, on seeing the accident, hastened in great alarm to the assistance of the veteran, and inquired with much tenderness if he felt himself seriously injured:—"Hurt be d—d!" cried Clift, "here," holding out a hand covered with mud, "d—n it, pull me out!" Upon this polite request being complied with, Clift remounted and rode in; and although much shaken with the fall, and though several jockies offered to do it for him, he persisted in riding a walk over for the next stake, in his mud-besmeared jacket.

The practice of riding to order, which the elder Chifney informs us, in his "Genius Genuine," was in use in his time, was certainly highly detrimental to the acquirement of skill by the jockey, who by this system, was reduced to act the part of a mere automaton in a race. Nothing could be more ridiculous than this practice, which the elder Chifney had the merit of breaking through; and as the following anecdote is an apt illustration of the point, we give it for the benefit of the hero’s brother wiseacres, if, indeed, any such exist in these enlightened days. The subject of the anecdote was the late admirable little jockey, Arthur Pavis; it occurred at the Liverpool Meeting, in 1830, and is thus related by an eye-witness, whose words we quote.

"On entering the saddling stables, I discovered Pavis, in an unknown colour, mounted upon a horse called Young Patrick, belonging to an Irish gentleman, whose patronymic begins with the consonant F. In a few seconds, with a particularly red face, followed the owner, who, without waiting to take breath, began:—

"'Misther Pavis, I believe?'
"'That's my name,' said Arthur.
"'Well, then, they tell me you are a fine rither, but, bee me soul, I don't like your rithing at all.'

"'Indeed!' said the other, smiling; 'then, as it strikes me, you had better get some one else.'

"'Oh no, bee G—d! sit still where you are—I don't mane that; but I hear all you Newmarket rithers till your masters you'll make the running, and after that, ye go poking behind, as you did yesterday on Bolivar. Bee me soul, if you had made running wid him, he'd have won in a canter.
Now, ye see, I want ye to make running all the way.'

"'Very well,' said Arthur; 'but suppose I can't go fast enough; what's to be done then?'

"'Oh, by Jasus! then I suppose you must stop behind!'

"These were no delicately-whispered orders, but given coram populo, with the good will of a speaking-trumpet.

"'Away they went,' as Pavis told me the dénouement some time after, 'at a pace that I knew that they could not live to come home with; so I laid last till within a quarter of a mile from the finish, and then cantered in first, fifty yards or so. But all this availed nothing with Mr. F., who, as soon as I had dismounted, swore by the god of war I should never cross another horse of his; and he has kept his word.'"

We will now proceed to notice the most essential points necessary to form an accomplished jockey, and will afterwards describe the "science of race-riding," or jockeyship, and the system of training in use among jockies, to reduce their weight.

In person, the jockey should be rather under the middle size, say about five feet, five inches,* and

* This was the height of old Chifney, the father of the present jockey; he was also noted for his beautiful symmetry and muscular power, being, in fact, a perfect model of what a jockey should be.
although light, should possess a compact, muscular and active frame. He should be, in fact, a "pocket Hercules."

He should be of a shrewd and calculating disposition, and neglect no opportunity of improving his judgment, by observation and practice in his profession. Above all, he must be a perfect master of his temper, accustomed to keep a constant check upon his tongue, possess much personal intrepidity, be honest to his employers, and of temperate habits.

In order to obtain a good seat, hands, a knowledge of pace and confidence, it is absolutely requisite that he should have been reared, from his earliest years, in a racing stable, and been accustomed to ride constantly horses of all forms shapes and tempers.

By constant exercise, and by the practice of athletic games, he should endeavour to acquire as much as possible that pliability about the arms, shoulders and back, which adds so much to his power and ease when in the saddle.

He should habituate himself to be scrupulously attentive to cleanliness in his person, and to the neat fitting of his clothes, especially when in the appropriate costume of his calling.

A modern jockey, in one respect, may be said to resemble the sailor; for, like him, he undergoes the severest and most dangerous toil to earn his money, and, but too often, expends it with the most heedless extravagance. We would, therefore, add to the above list, the important item of economy, the practice of which will not only, by rendering him independent, place him beyond the temptation of bribery, but secure him against want, should an accident ever incapacitate him from pursuing his profession, or when old age shall oblige him to retire from the turf.

We are sorry to be obliged to say that this caution is by no means uncalled for; for it is a well known fact, that more than one of our leading jockies of the present day, in receipt of large incomes from their profession, live in a style as imprudent as it is out of character, and which renders putting by a provision for a "rainy day," or against old age, quite out of the question. The melancholy fate of his father did not act as a sufficient warning to the no less talented son, the present Samuel Chifney, in this respect; and we grieve to say, he has paid dearly for placing too little value on money. *

* While the march of philanthropy has diffused the blessings of peace and comfort to the ill-favoured of fortune, in almost every profession and calling followed in this great empire, it appears more than strange that the just claim of a most meritorious class, should so long have been overlooked. It is true that, towards the end of the year 1837, the proprietor of the Hippodrome endeavoured to form an institution for the relief of decayed jockeys, and even issued circulars and prospectuses; but from what reason we have never been able to learn, the matter fell to the ground. Should this attempt, however, be revived with proper spirit, and the support of some of the lead-
Having enumerated the personal qualifications necessary to form a good jockey, we will now ing patrons of the turf be secured,—in obtaining which, we cannot imagine that there would be much difficulty,—it would, no doubt, be successful; and in the hopes that this may soon take place, we give below a copy of the prospectus issued on the occasion alluded to, and which may prove useful in case of such an event.

THE TURF BENEVOLENT FUND.

"To be instituted for the relief of decrepid or maimed jockies, and their widows and infant families, and of those reduced to poverty, whose characters are unblemished.

"The lives of jockies are extremely arduous, and much bodily suffering has to be sustained, which occasionally leads to incurable disease, or premature old age and death. Jockies, also, frequently meet with accidents, which sometimes maim them for life, or unfit them for their vocation for a long period, and sometimes terminate fatally. They are likewise liable to vicissitudes of fortune; and when poverty surrounds them, while their integrity is unblemished, they are objects of pity, and deserve assistance.

"If an institution can be formed, which, while it provides the means of support to decayed, decrepid, or maimed jockies, and to their widows and families when left destitute, shall, at the same time, tend to raise the moral character of the jockey, such an institution would, it is conceived, confer important benefit on the turf, and be supported by the humane. If there be a power, also, vested in the managers of the institution to apply a certain sum, annually, in rewarding good conduct or skill in jockies, an additional incentive will be given to them to exert all their energies in sustaining a high reputation.

"It is, therefore, proposed that an institution shall be formed, to be called "The Turf Benevolent Fund," to be supported by voluntary contributions, and by a tax levied, by common consent, on all stakes gained, and by an assessment on every jockey winning a race, as hereafter described.

"The fund so collected, to be applied by a committee of manage-

"In relieving the wants of jockies of unimpeachable character for integrity, reduced to destitution.

"In relieving the wants of the helpless widows and children or parents of jockies, left destitute, or in educating and apprenticing such children.

"In rewarding, annually, by prizes in medals, or otherwise, particular instances of science and skill in race-riding, or of general meritorious conduct.

"No jockey, nor his family, to have any benefit from the fund, who shall not have continued, while able to do so, a subscriber to the fund, of 10s. per annum, and also consenting, in all cases, to the following regulations, as far as they apply to him.

"First.—That every owner of a horse winning any stake of the value of £50 or less, shall pay 10s. to the fund; exceeding £50, but not exceeding £100, £1 to the fund; exceeding £100, and not exceeding £200, £2 to the fund; exceeding £200, and not exceeding £1000, £5 to the fund; and above £1000, £10 to the fund.

"Second.—Every jockey winning a race, shall pay 1s. to the fund.

"Besides the humane acts which it would be in the power of the institution to perform, the mode of gathering the funds, and the terms on which alone they can be distributed, would certainly lead to raise the character of the jockey.

"In obtaining the funds by the means stated, a spirit of carefulness and of charity will be always kept alive; and to win a race, will afford additional pleasure and excitement. Better nerve, also, will be possessed by the jockey, from the consciousness that, if temporarily injured by an accident, he will be taken care of by the fund, if he be without means, until he has recovered.

"The provision, likewise, that assistance can be afforded only to the jockey of unblemished character, would have the best tendency in keeping jockeys strictly honest, and worthy of the high confidence which is necessarily placed in them."

The principal point in which the jockey's seat differs from every other, arises from the comparative shortness of the stirrups; for, as the race-horse, in running, sinks down in his fore quarters, in his stride, to the extent of several inches,* no man with long stirrups could seat himself with a sufficient purchase in the saddle, to obtain a good resisting power for holding his horse.

To obtain the necessary seat, the jockey should sit with his fork well down in the saddle, his stirrups being of sufficient length to enable him to clear his pummel when he stands up in them in the race.

Having been lifted into his saddle by the trainer, after carefully inspecting the saddling of his horse, so as to be certain that every thing is secure, we will proceed with our jockey, seated in the manner we have described, to the race-course. Having

Although the distresses of jockies do not come before the public, nevertheless, there have been, as, indeed, there are still, but too many cases in which the benefits conferred by such an institution, would be very acceptable, as the following cases prove. The famous John Singleton, one of the riders of the Eclipse, and the first winner of the Doncaster St. Leger, 1776, died a pauper in Chester workhouse; and Jack Oakley, the jockey who most frequently rode the same famous horse, died in a parish poor-house, near Park Lane.

taken his "up-gallop," of from a quarter to half a mile, according to the distance he is about to run, and which gallop is generally led for him by the trainer, on his hack, he walks his horse quietly to the place of starting.

He now places himself in a position, the best calculated to start his horse to advantage the moment the signal is given; having his near-side bridle rein passed outside of, and over, the lower part of the palm of the left hand, and then pressed firmly with the thumb, and with the off-side rein between the middle and third fingers of the right hand—in which he also has his whip. Except when using the whip, the jockey should always hold his horse's head with both hands. If a double rein to a curb-bit is used, the near-side rein passes between the middle and third fingers of the left hand, and the off-side one between the middle and third fingers of the right hand; in both cases, the hands should be well down on the withers.

His method of starting his horse depends entirely upon the distance, and we cannot do better than place him in the different situations in which he will have to "make running," or "wait," as circumstances may require. We should here explain that what is called "making running," is practised with a horse distinguished for his stoutness and power of endurance. With such a horse, the jockey's best plan is to run the race from end to end, so that by cutting up the horses opposed to him by severe "play," he wins the race. Such a horse is also called "honest;" and when of an idle or lurching disposition, and requiring much rousing and even punishment, he is sometimes called a "lawyer," from his not going without being paid.

When speed, not stoutness, is the best of a horse, quite a contrary system is practised. With such a horse, the jockey plays a waiting game; that is, he carefully nurses him through the race, so as not to distress him by overpacing him; as the finish approaches, he creeps up to his horses by degrees, but does not quit them to go in front till he sees that the pace has made them "safe," —when he lets loose and wins.

When the distance is short, as in the half-mile race, the jockey must be on the qui vive, not to lose any ground at starting, but catching fast hold of his horse's head, and sticking both spurs into his sides, he is off the moment the signal is given, endeavouring to get his horse into speed as soon as possible.

In races of a longer distance, this is not necessary. In these, the jockey may start last; taking care, however, not to lie too far out of his ground. This, indeed, is the method preferred by many of our best riders of the present day, as it the better enables them to judge how the pace affects the other horses; the whole race being, as it were, a game played before them. This finesse, however, may be easily carried too far, and, no doubt many a race has been thrown away by it.

The famous Chifney is accused of practising this waiting game even to a failing. To do it properly, requires consummate skill in the jockey, who should not only be able to judge of how the pace is telling upon the other horses in the race, but how it affects his own; and nothing but natural aptness, joined to the greatest practice, can gain this valuable acquirement for the rider. It is this knowledge of pace, which enables the accomplished jockey to win his race, by just as much as is sufficient; thereby, not unnecessarily exposing the powers of his horse; a nicety which is highly esteemed by his employers.

Gaining the whip hand, is another point the jockey should endeavour to obtain at starting, as this not only enables him to save distance at any turns in the race-course, but gives him the use of his whip with his right hand at any period of the race. But as he cannot always obtain this, he ought to be able to use his whip with the left hand, should circumstances require it.

As the jockey will have to ride horses of various tempers and dispositions, the manner of managing each peculiar one, so as to make the most of him in a race, is a matter of no small importance; for it is in vain for the rider to expect any success with horses of ill temper, unless he can keep his own under perfect control. With such horses, he cannot generally be too gentle; but he must at the same time be resolute when occasion requires it.

The most difficult horses he will have to encounter in his practice, are those of a lazy or craving disposition, which require incessant attention and rousing in the race, especially at the finish, and those with delicate constitutions, and with irritable tempers, which will be often found restive and inclined to bolt.

With horses of this last description, his hands cannot be too delicate, as they will not stand being pulled, or put out of their way. As long, therefore, as they go straight, and do not over-pace themselves, the rider should preserve an easy rein.

While on this subject, we must express our opinion that the system of riding with what he calls a slack rein, recommended by the elder Chifney in his "Genius Genuine," has been run down by more than one writer on this subject, without sufficient inquiry into the meaning intended to be conveyed by the author. *

In justice to this writer, whose well known skill and experience as a jockey should give his opinions on these matters great weight, we will here quote, in his own quaint language, the

"Now, in my own defence, I will name one of those very fine parts in riding a race, as it is thrown in my face, to this time, as a very great fault in my riding, viz., my riding with a loose rein. The Duke of Bedford was near taking me off his horses, saying, the people teased him because I rode his horses with a loose rein, and desired me to hold my horse fast in his running. I am sorry his Grace was thus troubled, as it puts a horse's frame all wrong; and his speed slackened where the horse has that sort of management to his mouth. My reins appeared loose, but my horse had only proper liberty, and mostly running in the best of attitudes. It's usual, when grooms are talking and giving orders to their riders, to hold the horse fast in his running; and where a horse is intended to make play, their orders mostly are, to hold the horse fast by the head, and let him come, or come along with him; but it is very much against a horse to hold him fast, or let him bear on his rein in his running; it makes him run with his mouth more open, and pulls his head more in or up. This causes him, at times, to run in a fretting, jumping attitude, with his fore legs more open; sometimes it causes him to run stag-necked; this makes the horse point his fore legs, otherwise called straight-legged; sometimes it makes the horse run with his neck more down, crowding and reaching against the rider. This reaching against his rider, pulls the horse's fore legs out further than the pace occasions. In all these attitudes, his sinews are more worked and extended, he has more exertion, his wind more locked, and thus reaching and pointing his fore legs, makes them dwell and tire.

"The first fine part in riding a race, is to command your horse to run light in his mouth; it keeps him the better together, his legs are the more under him, his sinews less extended, less exertion, his wind less locked; the horse running thus to order, feeling light for his rider's wants, his parts are more at ease and ready, and he can run considerably faster when called upon, to what he can when that he has been running in the fretting, sprawling attitudes, with part of his rider's weight in his mouth.

"And as the horse comes to his last extremity, finishing his race, he is the better forced and kept straight with manner,* and fine touching to his mouth. In this situation, the horse's mouth should be eased of the weight of his rein; if not, it stops him, little or much.

"If a horse is a slug, he should be forced with a manner up to this order of running, and particularly so if he has to make play, or he will run the slower, and jade the sooner for the want of it.

"The phrase at Newmarket is, that you should pull your horse to ease him in his running. When horses are in their great distress in running, they cannot bear that visible manner of pulling, as looked for by many of the sportsmen; he should be enticed to ease himself an inch a-time, as his situation will allow.

"This should be done as if you had a silken rein as fine as a hair, and that you were afraid of breaking it.

It appears sufficiently plain by this explanation, that Chifney never intended to advocate any thing so palpably ridiculous as riding a race with a loose rein, but rather a steady but easy hold of a horse's mouth, sufficient to keep him straight, to prevent his overpacing himself, but not so tight as to throw the horse out of his stride, or occasion the other mischiefs he mentions; and we find the same practice recommended by Mr. Darvill, only in better and more distinct language.*

* "The method adopted by a good riding-boy, head lad, or jockey, in holding a horse after he has started in his gallop, is by putting his hands well down on each side of the horse's withers. By this firm purchase, he is mostly enabled to keep his horse's head up and in place; for, if in the start, the horse gets his head down, he will, if he feels inclined to do so, most probably break away, or begin his gambols, and, perhaps, throw his rider. Yet it is not to be understood that the
The use, or rather the abuse of whip, is to be avoided as much as possible, especially with a timid, or a sulky horse; for when a horse is doing his best, blows of the whip will often throw him out of his stride, and with those of the latter description, may occasion the loss of the race, by causing them to "shut up" as it is called, which means shrink to avoid the blows to such a degree, as materially to interfere with their pace.

In most cases where punishment is required, the spur, properly used, is to be preferred, and in more than one instance we could name, the spur has worked wonders with horses which were supposed to have stood no chance in the race.

The St. Leger of 1822 may be quoted in corroboration of this theory, and it shows that the jockey should never despair of winning. Theodore, the winner, was trained by Mr. James Croft, who tried him at Parlington a few days before the race, with Violet, Corinthian, and a grey colt belonging to the Duke of Leeds, which were in the same stable, and which came in second, third and fourth for the St. Leger. In this trial, Theo-rider is at all times to retain this firm hold of his horse's head. When the rider finds that his horse is settled in his stride, and that he begins, as a horse sometimes will, to reach with his head for a little more liberty of the rein, the rider should (to prevent the horse's changing his legs or altering his stride) gently raise his hands off his horse's withers, or quietly let them slide along that part, and give him the necessary liberty without letting the reins quite loose."

dore was beaten in a few hundred yards, and from the state of his feet, no hopes were entertained of his being "any where" in the race. As Tuesday approached, the horse got worse; however, on arriving at Doncaster, his feet were dressed, and his corns looked to, but not the least hope was entertained of his doing any good, the odds being 100 to 1 against him.

Such was his lamentable state when brought to the post, that it is said Jackson, who rode him, actually shed tears at being put on such a brute. On the signal for the start being given, Jackson, in a fit of despair, caught fast hold of his horse's head, stuck the spurs violently into his sides, and the panic-stricken animal, forgetting his sore feet and corns in this new pain, sprung off with the lead. This infused new spirit into the jockey, who eased his horse as occasion required; and he had the pleasure of finding the spurs operate successfully when the struggle came on, in which he proved the victor.

The jockey, when within twenty yards of a post or other difficulty, should be careful not to turn his head round in such a manner as to lose sight of what is before him, the slightest glance being sufficient to tell him the position of his opponents; while neglecting a constant and perfect look-out in front may lead to the most dangerous accidents. In 1823, the Hon. Mr. Trevor met with an accident which proved fatal, by neglecting this precaution; and some years previous, a one-eyed jockey met with a bad accident at Worcester from the same cause. He was winning easily, when turning his head quite round to have a full view of his horses, he ran against a post.

We will conclude our remarks on jockeyship with a brief explanation of what is meant by the term set-to, in the finish of a race; for which purpose we cannot do better than quote the description given of this part of the race by Mr. Apperley, the scene being confined to the last four hundred yards.

"The set-to is about to begin, or, in other words equally technical, he (the jockey) is about to 'call upon his horse.' But before he does this, he alters his position in his saddle. He has been previously standing up in his stirrups, with his body leaning forward over the horse's withers, and his hands down, somewhat below them. He now changes the position of both body and hands: he seats himself firmly down in his saddle, his body catching, as it were, the stride of the horse; and raising his hands off his withers, first gives him an easy pull; and then, and not till then, the set-to begins. He now moves his hands, as if describing a circle,* by way of rousing his horse, by

* We find the use of this double movement thus explained by a writer in the Sporting Magazine for May, 1837. "When a horse is at the top of his speed, the least adverse movement balks his stroke and injures his pace. To illustrate the effect of this forced and ir-'shaking him,' as it is called; and although he does not quite slacken his reins, he allows him to reach with his head, as a distressed horse always will do, and which is technically termed 'throwing him in.' Then comes the last resource. If he finds, when within a few yards of home, that he cannot win by these means, and that his horse appears to sink in the rally, he stabs him a few times with his spurs, gets his whip up in his right hand, gives a good pull with his left, and uses it as occasion may require."

Although there are some cases in which the natural lightness of the jockey renders severe exercise and abstinence unnecessary, the life of a jockey, generally speaking, is far from being a pleasant one; as, in addition to the fatigue and danger of riding races, and performing frequent and long journeys, often at a moment's notice,* regular action on one side, let the reader place himself upon a chair, lift his feet from the ground, and keeping the left arm perfectly still, let him wind the right forcibly, as if flourishing a whip: so doing, he will find that a hurtful jar will be given to his whole frame. On the contrary, let him, in such a position, work both arms simultaneously, and his body will remain perfectly steady."

* The following may be mentioned as instances of the quick movements jockies are frequently obliged to make in the exercise of their calling.

On Wednesday the 5th of September, 1764, Joseph Rose rode Mr. Stapleton's Beaufrémont by Tartar, against Vizier for the Ladies' plate, at Lincoln; on the day after, he rode Young Davy by Scampston Cade, at Richmond; and on Friday, the 7th, he rode Bachelor by Young Cade, at Manchester. The distance from Lincoln to Richmond is about 108 miles, and from Richmond to Manchester, about 72; this was performed on horseback, and for the most part over cross-country roads, which in those days were always in the worst possible state.
(the latter part of his duty in itself no trifle), he is obliged for a considerable period of the year to reduce and keep down his natural weight by training.

This training consists of three different methods, the use of which depends entirely on the constitution of the jockey: the use of aperient medicine, sweating, and a light diet. While some constitutions are much injured by the use of aperient medicines, others require large and frequent doses.

The next are cases of a modern date. Calloway, after riding Birdcatcher, (second for the St. Leger), at Doncaster, on Tuesday, 18th September, 1832, set off for Shrewsbury, where he rode Clarion on the following day, which ran third for the Gold Cup. No sooner was this race decided than he again set off for Doncaster, where he rode on Thursday! The distance from Doncaster to Shrewsbury is 160 miles.

At the Caledonian Meeting in 1837, Lye, on the Wednesday, rode and won twice; and on the following day, Thursday, he rode and won at Northallerton, in Yorkshire, the distance from Musselburgh to which is 170 miles. John Holmes, at the same Northallerton Meeting, won a stake on Appleton Lad, on Saturday, and left the town at six o'clock the same evening, and on the Monday following won the Kirwans (the Irish Oatlands') with Mr. Ferguson's famous horse, Harkaway.

Wakefield, the jockey at Newmarket, on one occasion within the last two or three years, travelled 500 miles in the course of five days; three nights and two days of which he passed outside a coach, and during this period, walked 24 miles in sweaters, and rode six races, of which he won three.
Again, with reference to exercise, some are capable of going long distances in the sweaters, while others are neither able to perform, nor, indeed, do they require, severe exercise.

It is, therefore, impossible to lay down any fixed rule with regard to either of these methods of reducing weight. We may, however, observe that strong walking exercise in the sweaters, with abstinence at table, should be preferred, by the jockey to the excessive use of medicine; being certainly not so injurious to his health as the latter, and greatly tending to increase the muscular powers of his body.

The sweaters or cloths to be worn by the jockey in his walking exercise must be regulated as to quantity, by the state of the weather, and the temperament and condition of the wearer. The clothes generally used for this purpose consist of from four to six waistcoats, some of them with sleeves, two or three pairs of drawers, with a suit of loose common clothes over all. These drawers and waistcoats, we believe, can only be procured at Newmarket, and are made of a flannel which does not shrink, and which combines a pleasant softness with considerable strength.

Duly equipped in this dress, the jockey starts early in the morning for his walk, having previously partaken of some slight refreshment. He commences at a moderate pace, which he increases as he proceeds, and having gone a distance of about four miles, he may indulge himself with a little rest in a convenient place, and at the same time partake of a little warm negus, or cyder with some ginger grated in.

Being refreshed, he starts to return home, and this time he should come at a good smart pace the whole way, so as to enter the house in a state of profuse perspiration, and having taken a cup of tea or some weak negus, he should repose for an hour or so on the bed, being well covered with blankets, and be careful not to take off the sweaters till the perspiration has somewhat subsided.

He should then strip and place his feet in warm water, at the same time sponging his body all over previous to re-dressing; being careful to wear flannel next his skin, and to clothe himself sufficiently warm; for, from the pores being open, he is in danger of catching severe colds, and the many complaints which too often take their rise from these causes, and from inattention to which caution, jockies have, on more than one occasion, lost their lives.

By strictly pursuing this system, a man may reduce himself from twelve to sixteen pounds in a fortnight; and so far from decreasing his wind and strength, find both considerably improved by the training. Indeed, it has long been understood that it is the too sudden change which takes place when a man, having accomplished his object, all at once leaves off his abstemiousness and exercise and makes amends for former privations by indulgence,—that injures the constitution.

On the conclusion of the racing season, the jockey's holidays commence, and during the months in which they may be said to be comparatively idle, he passes his time in enjoying good cheer,* in visiting, coursing, cock-fighting, and sometimes in hunting.

The following information on this subject, communicated to Sir John Sinclair, in 1805, who was at great pains and cost to collect, by every possible means, the best information respecting the training and reducing of jockies, will be read with interest, from the fact of its having been obtained from the late Mr. Wm. Sandevir, an eminent surgeon, of Newmarket, and who had paid the greatest attention to the subject for many years.

"Q.—How long the training of jockies generally continues?

A.—With those in high repute as riders, in a greater or less degree, from about three weeks before Easter to the end of October; but a week or ten days are quite sufficient for a rider to reduce himself from the weight he is naturally of, to sometimes a stone and a half below it.

Q.—What food do they live on, both solid and

* The late Frank Buckle always had a goose for supper on the last day of the Houghton Meeting, that being the conclusion of his labours for the season.
liquid, and what quantities are allowed them of each?

A.—For breakfast a small piece of bread and butter, with tea in moderation. Dinner is taken in a very sparing way; a very small piece of pudding, and less meat; and when fish is to be obtained, neither one or the other are allowed; wine and water is their usual beverage, in the proportion of one part wine to two of water. Tea in the afternoon, with little or no bread and butter; and no supper.

Q.—What exercise do they get, and what hours of rest?

A.—After breakfast, having sufficiently loaded themselves with clothes, that is, five or six waistcoats, two coats, and as many pair of breeches, a severe walk is taken, of from ten to fifteen or sixteen miles. After their return home, dry clothes are substituted for those that are made very wet and uncomfortable by sweat, and if much fatigued, some of them will lie down for an hour before dinner; after which no severe exercise is taken, but the remaining part of the day is spent in the way that may be most agreeable to themselves. They generally go to bed by nine o'clock, and continue there till six or seven the next morning.

Q.—Are they purged? and what purgatives or other medicines are given them?

A.—Some of them that do not like excessive walking, have recourse to purgative medicines. Two ounces of Glauber salts is the usual dose, and it is very seldom that any other medicine is had recourse to.

Q.—Would Mr. Sandevir recommend a similar process to reduce corpulence in other people, whether male or female?

A.—Mr. Sandevir would certainly recommend a similar process to reduce corpulency in either sex, as from experience, he perceives that the constitution does not appear to be injured by it. But he is apprehensive that hardly any person could be prevailed upon to submit to such severe discipline, that had not been inured to it from his infancy. John Arnold, when rider to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, was desired to reduce himself as much as he possibly could, to enable him to ride some favourite horse, without his carrying more weight than was agreed upon; in consequence of which he abstained from animal, and even farinaceous food, for eight succeeding days, and the only substitute was now and then a piece of apple; he was not injured by it at the time, and is now in good health. Added to which, Dennis Fitzpatrick, a person at this time continually employed as a rider, declares that he is less fatigued by riding, and has more strength to contend with a determined horse, in a severe race, when moderately reduced, than when allowed to live as he pleased, although he never weighs more than nine stone, and frequently has reduced himself to 7st. 7lb."

Another gentleman well experienced in these matters corroborated the above statement, in the following answers made to Sir John Sinclair at the same period as the first.

"Q.—What is the process used in training jockeys, and reducing their weight?

Q.—What effect has it upon the health and strength?

A.—Neither the one nor the other are impaired when the above are had recourse to in moderation; but when carried to excess, both, of course, must be more or less affected.

Q.—What effect has it upon their minds, in regard to courage, quickness, etc.

A.—When much reduced, peevish and irritable; but perhaps not less courageous than usual.

A.—Till the cause is removed.

Q.—After being reduced, do they quickly get fat again, or do they continue long in the state to which they were brought?

A.—Many of them are naturally lean; but Buckle, the great rider, after severe wasting, has gained nine pounds in eighteen hours.

Q.—Are jockeys, accustomed to be thus treated, healthy and long-lived?

by wasting, nor does the continuance of life appear to be affected by it."

First in practice and in skill among the jockeys of the present, day stand the names of the famous rivals Samuel Chifney and James Robinson, each remarkable for his peculiar style of riding, and for the success which he has gained in many a well contested race. It has been well observed of these crack riders, that Chifney's style is that of the Kean school; Robinson's that of Kemble's:—the former is frequently correct, always brilliant: the latter often striking, ever finished.

A celebrated sporting character has thus facetiously expressed his opinion of the comparative merits of these "first rate performers" over a course. "As to Jem Robinson, his talent is not to be questioned; he will ride through a church-door, however awkward and refractory the animal may be on which he is mounted; but, as to Sam Chifney, only let him get tight hold of his horse's head, and he'll rush slap through the key-hole."

The distinguishing feature of Chifney's style is the manner in which he "waits" until he thinks the time for action has arrived, which he calculates to a nicety, when the quiet, but rapid way in which he steals up to his horses, and then the terrific rush, so entirely his own, with which he finishes his race, excite the admiration and surprize of the spectators. Even Robinson yields to him when it comes to a close contest between them, as in the celebrated match between Priam and Lucetta, which presented a specimen of finished jockeyship, such as has seldom been witnessed. In this famous race Robinson (on Lucetta) led, Chifney lying right in his wake. If the former tried a look over his left shoulder, to ascertain how his opponent was running, the latter was bent to the off-side, so as to be out of sight. The race was run in this manner almost from end to end, nor could Robinson ever get a view of his wily adversary until he came up to him and passed him to win.

Among the numerous instances in which Chifney's riding may be said to have been beyond all praise, we may mention the following;—The race in which Anticipation won the King's Plate, at the Newmarket first October Meeting, in 1816; that of Wings for the Oaks, in 1825; and Merchant, in the second October Meeting, in 1827.

Such is the high opinion generally entertained of Robinson's riding, that he is said at Newmarket to be half a stone better than any other jockey. His style of riding is one of finished elegance; and although his usual method of bringing a horse through a race is distinguished for its gentleness, never punishing his horse except he sees it absolutely necessary, yet when occasion requires, no rider can be more resolute, or administer punishment with more accomplished severity. Many of our readers will no doubt remember an instance of this which occurred in 1836, when he rode Bay Middleton for the Two Thousand Guineas’ Stakes. Whether in obedience to orders, or from his own mistake, he had left the race too fine; but when, finding his position, he set to with his horse, and brought him successfully through a terrific struggle, by the most skillful but desperate punishment.

Robinson’s brother jockeys are well aware of this superiority and even the best of them, with the exception of Chifney, fear to encounter this all accomplished rider when opposed to him in a “near thing”; as appears in the two following instances, when his opponent was William Scott, the well known northern jockey, himself a first rate workman. The first of these was after the dead heat between Cadland and the Colonel for the Derby in 1828, when while Robinson and Scott were preparing for the deciding heat, it was remarked by more than one observer that the latter appeared nervous almost to agitation, as in despair of succeeding against his great rival, in what could not fail to prove a close contest; and the event proved that his fears were not without reason. The next case was at the final struggle for the Great Portland Handicap in 1836, when Scott, who had made sure of the race on Birdlime, suddenly found Sheet Anchor was being brought up by his dreaded rival; and certainly he did not evince his usual presence of mind and skill in the emergency. It is, however, no shame to this excellent rider to have been out-manoeuvred by so great an opponent.

Robinson may be said with truth to have deserved the great success which has never failed to attend him by his uniform good conduct. It is said that in 1824, this fortunate rider told several friends that he would win the Derby on Cedric, the Oaks on Cobweb, and be married in the same week; and he accomplished all three undertakings. In 1827, he rode the winner of the Derby and St. Leger, and received a present of one thousand pounds for winning the latter, and this too from a gentleman whom he had never seen before.

After Chifney and Robinson, and ranking with William Scott, we find the names of John Day, both father and son, Elnathan Flatman, George Nelson, Edward, George and Harry Edwards, Patrick Conolly (an Irishman), Wakefield, Templeman, William Boyce, R. Pettit, Rogers, &c., all of whom ride at Newmarket, and are jockeys in good repute and excellent practice.

As it would exceed our limits to enumerate the particular instances in which these riders have distinguished themselves in public, we must content ourselves with referring our readers to the lists of “winners of Great Stakes,” in our Appendix, in which he will find the names of their riders.
In addition to these are upwards of thirty jockeys whose practice is confined to the country races. The leading men among these are, T. Lye, S. Holmes, Calloway, Wm. Noble, Mann, G. Francis, M. Jones, Wm. Oates, Clarke, Cartwright, Liresey, Mitson, G. Whitehouse, Percy, Nunn, Howlet, Bowman, Wheeler, Dodgson, Marlow, Buller, Butler, Wm. Coleman, Child, &c. &c.

It only remains to speak of the class of jockeys denominated "gentleman riders"; under which name are improperly ranked both those who, being really gentlemen, ride for their own amusement, and those who assume this distinction and ride for hire. The wonder is, that a line between these two is not more generally drawn; for we find but too frequently noblemen and gentlemen riding in the same race with those who they neither would or could acknowledge as equals any where else. At some of our "Racing Meetings," such as Croxton Park, Goodwood, Eglintoun Park, &c. &c., the stakes to be ridden for by gentlemen are so worded, as to prevent the intrusion of these objectionable persons. This is done by defining the qualification of a gentleman, which is made to consist in his being either an officer in the army or navy, a member of a profession, or a member of one of the Clubs.

The best riders among the really gentlemen jockeys, are Lord Wilton, Lord Macdonald, Lord March, Sir David Baird, Sir F. Johnstone, Gene-

The following is a list of the most noted of those who ride for hire: Messrs. Beecher, Seffert, Bean, Barker, Oliver, Mason, Powell, Simmonds, Weston, the two M'Donoughs and Smith. The chief practice of these riders consists in the steeple-chases and hurdle races that are at present so much in vogue.

The leading characters on the Turf at the present day—Betting—

often the "Favorite" had won &c.—Tattersal's—Method by which Adventurers get into credit in the Betting-ring, &c. &c.

The following brief sketch of the "doings" of some of the leading characters on the Turf, at the present time, may, perhaps, be of some interest to the majority of our readers. In the first rank among these we find the present Duke of Grafton, whose early success on the Turf was greatly owing to the excellent stud* he inherited from his father, who was an excellent judge of racing, and a frequent winner of all the great stakes of his day.

The present Duke has won the Derby Stakes four times, and the Oaks' nine, besides most of the good things at Newmarket and other places.

* The excellence of the Grafton stud may be said to have been derived from the late Duke's famous mare Prunella, by Highflyer out of Promise, and whose pedigree goes back to Boy Bolton, Darley's Arabian, and the Byerley Turk &c., but to the utmost limit a pedigree can go; viz: to the White Turk, the Taffolet Barb, and the Natural Barb mare. This celebrated dam produced eleven first rate horses, all of whose names, like her own, commenced with the letter
P., and it has been computed realized upwards of £100,000 to the Grafton family.
In one year indeed, 1825, it has been stated by Nimrod, that his grace pocketed no less than £13,000 from public stakes alone!

In obtaining this success the Duke of Grafton was no doubt materially aided by the excellent management of his trainer, the late Mr. Robson, and the good riding of the late Frank Buckle, Wm. Clift and John Day. Of late years, however, we find his Grace has not been quite so successful, a falling off which has by some been dated from the retirement of the late Mr. Robson.

The Duke of Portland has done little since 1828, when he won the Derby with Tiresias, and his stud is now very small; indeed, like the Duke of Rutland, his Grace may be said to have almost left the Turf.

The Duke of Rutland won the Derby with Caddeland in 1828, after a dead heat with the Colonel, and in 1811 and 1814, the Oaks’ with Sorcery and Medora.

The Duke of Cleveland still continues to evince the same partiality for racing, which he did for many years as Earl of Darlington, and may be said to be still, perhaps, without exception the heaviest bettor on the Turf. His Grace yields to nobody in his knowledge of everything connected with his favorite amusement, and in the excellence of his judgment of the race-horse; he is besides the most liberal purchaser of the day, having given in 1832, no less a sum than £3500 for Trustee and Liverpool, and in the years 1823 and 4, £12,000 for four horses; viz:—Swiss, Swab, Barefoot and Memnon. The two last were afterwards purchased by Mr. Watt, who won the St. Leger with them in the years 1823 and 1825 respectively. The success of his Grace’s stud has been principally confined to the north, where he won the St. Leger in 1831 with Chorister; but up to the present day his stable has not produced a winner of either of the great Epsom stakes.

To the Duke of Richmond, the Turf stands peculiarly indebted for the revival of the races at his splendid domain of Goodwood, which now ranks as the fourth country meeting in England.

The Marquis of Exeter has been for many years connected with the Turf, as the breeder and owner of an extensive stud of running horses. His Lordship has been particularly fortunate with the Oaks’ Stakes, which he has won no less than three times; viz: in 1821, with Augusta; in 1829, with Green Mantle, and in 1832, with Galatea.

Since the elevation of the Marquises of Worcester and Tavistock to their father’s titles, the list of noblemen sportsmen of this rank, is after the above mentioned peer, confined to the names of Westminster, Conyngham and Sligo, of whose racing career all that can be said at present, is that they have deserved success.

The Earl of Jersey may be said, since the death of the Earl of Egremont to rank next to the Duke of Grafton as a successful breeder. Among other celebrated winners from his Lordship’s stable we find, Cobweb, the winner of the Oaks’ in 1824, and Middleton, Mameluke, and Bay Middleton, the winners of the Derby in the years 1825, 1827, and 1836. His Lordship was formerly confederate with Sir John Shelley, of great sporting celebrity, the breeder of Phantom. Like his Grace of Cleveland, Lord Jersey is supposed to be thoroughly skilled in all the tactics of modern racing. His stud which, although not large, is well selected, is kept at his seat, Middleton Stony, in Oxfordshire.

The Earl of Chesterfield, like most beginners, was some time on the turf before he began to come in for his share of the "good things." He may, however, be said now to have passed the "Rubicon" in this respect, having won in 1838, the Oaks' with Industry, and the St. Leger with Don John. The noble Earl keeps a large racing stud, and bets heavily.

The Earl of Burlington is well known as a breeder, but has not a large stud at present; occasionally also, when he takes a fancy to a horse, he bets very high.

The Earl of Wilton, grandson to the Earl of Grosvenor, of great sporting celebrity, is well known as an owner of race-horses, besides having the reputation of being one of the best gentlemen jockeys of the day. In our chapter on race-courses, we have noticed the annual meeting held at the splendid seat of this public-spirited nobleman.

The Earl of Albemarle (the present master of the Horse to Her Majesty) and the Earl of Stradbroke, lately confederate with the Duke of Richmond; and the Earls of Lichfield, Oxford, &c. are also well known to sporting fame; but, for their successes on the turf, as well as for those of many other of its leading patrons, we must refer our reader to other parts of this work, where he will find lists of the winners of all the great stakes, cups, &c. with the names of their owners.

We must not, however, omit the following names, which have peculiar claims to our notice. Lord George Bentinck, the son of the Duke of Portland, although comparatively young on the turf in point of years, has shown himself equal, if not, indeed, more than a match for the oldest stagers. His Lordship is most enthusiastic in his devotion to this pursuit, and it is said will at any time go any distance to witness a trial. His success has been equal to his spirits and indefatigable attention, and he is one of the heaviest and most fortunate bettors of the day.

The venerable General Grosvenor has been many years a constant woer of fortune on the turf, but has too often had reason to complain of the proverbial fickleness of this goddess. His most fortunate hits have been his winning the Oaks', in 1807 with Briseis, and, again in 1825 with Wings, both with heavy odds against them. In 1832, General Grosvenor was fortunate in his purchase of Glauclus, which horse he sold for 3000 guineas, after having won £1400 in public money.

The success of Mr. Stephen Batson, one of the oldest members of the Jockey Club, was until 1834, when his famous horse Plenipo won the Derby, &c., confined to the provincial meetings.

Mr. Thornhill is the owner of a large stud at his seat at Riddlesworth (whence the famous stakes at Newmarket derive their name), and has the reputation of being one of the best judges of racing at Newmarket. In 1818, he won the Derby with Sam, and the same stake again in 1820, with Sailor; he also won the Oaks' in 1819, with Shovelcr. All these horses were got by Scud. In the Quarterly Review,* we find the following remarks on these races:—“Previously to Sam's race, this shrewd judge, Mr. Thornhill, pronounced the Derby Stakes in his pocket, and he also picked out Gulnare as winner of the Oaks' for the Duke of Richmond, without the possibility, as he expressed himself, of losing it, barring the ac-incident of a fall. The strange coincidence of his winning the Derby with Sailor by Scud, during a violent gale of wind, will, perhaps, never be forgotten at Epsom!"*

Among the other frequenters of Newmarket whose names stand conspicuous, we may mention Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Sir T. M. Stanley, Messrs. Rous, G. Rush, J. R. Udney, C. C. Greville, T. Cosby, G. Byng, G. Payne and Valentine Kingston, the "Yorick" of Newmarket. For a host of other names, we must refer our readers to the preceding and subsequent pages of this work.

The public men on the turf who have acquired the most notoriety, from having gained immense sums by betting, have been thus aptly described by Nimrod in the following extract.

"Of the public racing men at Newmarket,† Messrs. Crockford, Gully, Ridsdale, Saddler, the Chifneys, &c., we need not say much, their deeds being almost always before us. But looking at the extraordinary results of these men's deeds, who will not allow racing, to be the best trade going? Talk of studs, talk of winnings, talk of racing establishments — our Graftons, Richmonds, Portlands, and Cleveland's, with all their 'means and appliances to boot,' are but the beings of a summer's day, when compared with those illustrious personages, and their various transactions and doings on the turf. Here is a small retail tradesman, dealing in a very perishable commodity‡, become

* Our author is, however, mistaken in stating that Gulnare won the Oaks' in Sam's year, for she was not even in existence at that time. We suppose, therefore, he must have meant Mr. Udney's Corinne, the winner of the Oaks' in 1818. The Duke of Richmond's Gulnare won the Oaks' in 1827.

our modern Croesus in a few years, and proprietor of several of the finest houses in England! Behold the champion of the boxing ring, the champion of the turf, the proprietor of a noble domain, an honourable member of the reformed parliament, all in the person of a Bristol butcher! Turn to a great proprietor of coal-mines—the owner of the best stud in England—one who gives 3000 guineas for a horse—in the comely form of a Yorkshire footman! We have a quondam Oxford Livery-stable-keeper, with a dozen or more race-horses in his stalls, and those of the very best stamp, and such as few country gentlemen, or, indeed, many others, have a chance to contend with. By their father's account of them, (see Genius Genuine, by the late Sam. Chifney) the two Messrs. Chifney were stable-boys to Earl Grosvenor at eight guineas a year, and a stable suit. They are now owners of nearly the best horses, and—save Mr. Crockford's—quite the best houses, in their native town. There is the son of the ostler of the Black Swan, at York, betting his thousands on the heath, his neckerchief secured by a diamond pin. Then to crown all, there is Squire Beardsworth of Birmingham, with his seventeen race-horses, and his crimson liveries, in the same loyal, but dirty town in which he once drove a hackney-coach."

Some changes have occurred among them since this was written (1833), for more than one of these persons have experienced the instability of fortune. Ridsdale we find a bankrupt in 1836, Samuel Chifney taking the benefit of the Insolvent Act, in 1838—and, it is well known that Beardsworth died almost insolvent. We have no doubt that, should the rest only remain in "the ring" long enough, and brave the encounter of younger and sharper wits, they will meet with similar reverses.
We now come to speak of that species of gambling called "Betting," which in no country in the world is carried on to the extent it is in this, whether upon horse-racing, prize-fighting or cocking, the two last now happily exploded, which indeed may be said to be peculiarly British amusements.

"Making a book," or "betting round," is the plan pursued by what are called the "knowing ones" of the "betting ring," who are early in the field, and generally possess the best information from head quarters, of every circumstance relating to the favorites in betting races.

This method of betting has been thus described by the best sporting authorities.* The really knowing man is one who "bets round," in other words, "makes a book" on the race. His system is to lay out a definite sum against all the horses in the betting, and the more the better. Should he be lucky to "get round," and at an average of 20 to 1 against 25 horses, he must win, and this is very frequently the case. To make it clear that the favorite is a bad horse for the knowing ones, we will suppose that a race is about to be run—

* For the benefit of the reader who may wish to make himself thoroughly conversant with this subject, we give the following list of the best authorities he can consult;—viz: "The Quarterly Review, No. XCVIII" which contains an article on the "Turf" by Nimrod; to many articles in both the Old and New Sporting Magazines, but particularly to Numbers XIII. XVII. and XXXV. of the latter; "Gard’s Guide to the Turf"; "the Turf Expositor"; "Hoyles’ Pocket Guide to the Turf."

"The Turf Ready Reckoner" also by Mr. Green, the author of "The Backgammon Teacher", and an "Essay on Chances", is particularly adapted for the use of the "betting man", as it contains tables of odds on horse-racing, consisting of many thousand calculations of the odds between one horse, or several and others—between several and the field—also about being first and second with two horses—and other chances. that ten horses are in the betting, and that W. B. has made a £1000 book on the following terms. Specifying the horses by the first ten letters in the alphabet, he will stand thus at the commencement of the race —

"Now, it is obvious that the favorite, A., is the worst horse in the race for W. B.; and should it win, he clears, after paying £1000., only £218 (this sum is made by casting up the amounts won on the others—minus the £1000 he has paid), whereas, should the outsider, I. win, he nets £678 after paying the £1000 to the backers of the successful horse. Supposing that more than the ten ran, and that one of those not mentioned came in first, W. B. would then win every one of his bets, (£1718)—the horses not mentioned being technically termed his 'field.'"

From this, it will be seen that the correct system to be followed by the "book maker" consists in betting the odds against all the horses in the field, always taking care, however, that he does not bet a larger sum against any one horse that may win, than would be covered by the amount gained on the others which lose.

ways confine himself to merely "betting the odds;" for although he avoids backing a favorite, he does not refuse to take "long odds" against such horses as he fancies; and here his judgment, knowledge and experience come into play. It will often happen that an outsider on which he has taken the odds at the rate, perhaps, of 25 to 1, say £1000 to £40, when it first came into the market, will at some period before the race, rise to be quoted with only 4 to 1. This affords the better an opportunity of betting £250 to £1000, against it, in which position he risks nothing, but has a chance to win £750. This part of betting is technically called "hedging," and is thus described by Nimrod:—

"Let us then suppose A. beginning to make his Derby book at the commencement of the new year. B. bets him (about the usual odds) 20 to 1 against an out-sider, which A. takes in hundreds, viz. 2,000 to 100. The out-sider improves; he comes out in the spring, and wins a race, and the odds drop 10 to 1. A. bets 1000 to 100 against him. He is now on velvet; he cannot lose, and may win 1000. In fact, he has £1000 in hand to play with, which the alteration of the odds has given him. But mark! he is only playing with it; he may never pocket it, so he acts thus. The out-sider (we will call him Repealer) comes out again, wins another race, and the odds are only 5 to 1 against him; A. bets 500 to 100 more against him, and let us now see how he stands:

If Repealer wins, A. receives from B. £2000
He pays to C. - - - - - - - £1000
Ditto to D. - - - - - - 500

Balance in A's favour by Repealer's winning - - - - - - - £500
If Repealer loses, A. receives from C. £100
Ditto ditto from D. 100

\[ \begin{array}{c|c}
    & \text{\£} \\
    \hline
    \text{Ditto ditto} & \text{200} \\
    \text{A. pays B.} & \text{\£100} \\
    \text{Deduct} & \text{100} \\
    \text{Balance in A’s favour by Repealer’s losing} & \text{\£100} \\

"But is there no contingency here? Yes, the colt, might have died before A. had hedged, and then he must have paid his £100; but, on the other hand, he would have been out of the field, which might have been worth all the money to him in his deeper speculations on other horses. Let us, however, suppose our colt to have remained at the original odds, viz. 20 to 1; in that case A. must have betted 2000 to 100 against him, and then no harm would have arisen."
We have compiled the following table for the benefit of those bettors, who make a practice of betting the odds against any horse that may be the favourite immediately before the race. In these we have taken seven principal racing events for the last twenty years, and shewn how often the field, and how often the favourite, has won; and then, having supposed that a person had during that period bet to the extent of £200 at the current odds against the favourite in each of these races, shewn what would have been the result of such an operation.

The betting-rooms of Tattersal's and at Newmarket are the principal betting marts; there are, however, appropriate rooms set apart for this purpose in many of the principal towns in England, such as Liverpool, York, Doncaster, &c.

Tattersal's which may be called the "Stock Exchange" of betting, is situated on the right-hand side of Hyde Park Corner, as you enter London from Knightsbridge, and is also the principal horse mart of the metropolis. The betting-room is an exceedingly small apartment, when the number of subscribers to it, which exceed 300, are taken into consideration. The subscription is one guinea annually.

This celebrated establishment was founded by Mr. Richard Tattersal, who died in February, 1795, leaving a considerable property, acquired by honest industry, and through his famous horse Highflyer, as we have before noticed. He also left an excellent business to his son, Mr. Edward Tattersal. This gentleman died in January, 1810, leaving the property and the business still further increased to his two sons, the present proprietors, who are generally respected by the sporting world for their uniform good conduct.

At these, its head-quarters, the betting-ring holds its meetings twice a-week, and on the "settling day" after the decision of any great race, it is astonishing to see the immense sums which change hands—often, it is supposed, to the extent of upwards of £100,000.

The most extensive operators in the betting market, in addition to those we have before mentioned, are Messrs. Theobald, J. Bland, Bond, Robinson of Manchester, Holliday, Justice, Greatorex, Wakefield, &c., all of whom are regular bookmakers on the great races.

Besides these speculators, who may be said to "do the thing" on a large scale, there is a more numerous body consisting of gentlemen, farmers, and even tradesmen, who make a practice of always risking some money on the leading racing events of the year. The rear is brought up by the numerous adventurers who frequent what are called "sporting public-houses," of which there are many in the metropolis, and, indeed, one or more in all great towns—in which much betting for small amounts is constantly taking place.

Many of these hangers on of the betting-ring manage to make a living by the advantageous bets they will pick up in these houses, chiefly made with foolish tradespeople, ignorant of the subject they are risking their money on, or, perhaps, under the excitement of liquor. These adventurers, besides betting with each other, have generally some connexion with one of the "regulars in the ring," with whom they can lay off their bets, at the "current market price." The following is said to be the method by which some of these people, (many of whom have seen better days) manage to get themselves into the betting-ring. Taking what money he can scrape together in his pockets, in Bank-notes, the would-be Turfite frequents Newmarket and other races, and makes himself acquainted with the persons and names of such of the betting men as he thinks may suit his purpose. This done, he commences his operation on a favorable occasion, by offering to make a bet with a person in the ring. As may be supposed, the person he addresses, knowing nothing of his man, declines his offer, although otherwise willing to take it, as "suiting his book." Our aspirant is however prepared for this emergency, and immediately pulling out his Bank-notes, addresses the other by his name, and hands him the cash to the amount he would lose should the event prove against him; taking care, at the same time, to put his card into his hand, while expressing his entire confidence in him.

Having made this bet, our beginner's next care is to unmake it; which he does by laying the same amount off with another person; and this he accordingly performs in the same manner; so that when the race is over, he receives from one and pays the other—as the case may be—without either losing or winning. His object being to gain credit for a considerable amount beyond what he possesses, he suffers nothing to tempt him to make a bet in earnest till his object is accomplished, but goes on making one acquaintance after another, in the manner we have described, until the happy period may arrive when, thinking him safe, cash is no longer required of him beforehand.

When our aspirant considers himself sufficiently established in the ring, he begins to "put the pot on," which means make large bets; and this he may do with success; or, as too frequently happens, having made bets to the full extent of his credit, and infinitely beyond his means of payment, the event turning out against him obliges him to levant; that being the term for one who does not "show" on "settling day."

It not unfrequently occurs, that parties whose books show a profit on the settling day, have found themselves, to their great mortification, losers instead of gainers, owing to the defalcations of those with whom they have betted.
